WHAT IS THIS BOOK?

Originally planned as a guide for parents, this Handbook, now in its 25th edition, has in recent years become an essential desk tool for educators in schools and colleges.

The statistical information is from the school's own report, subject to some editorial scrutiny to eliminate errors of judgment, misunderstandings, or over-estimates due to wishful thinking. The school is invited to provide us with all possible information. Everything is carefully considered, but nothing printed exactly as sent in.

It is personalities that make the school, its atmosphere and its traditions. The discriminating parent is more interested in the personality of the head and the characteristics of the faculty who will have to do with the shaping of the life of his boy or girl than he is in what the school can tell about itself.

The final judgments expressed in regard to a school are the result of information from all sources. It is safe to assume that much of the testimony received will be colored or prejudiced. But one may get insight even from the paid optimist or the disgruntled 'separated'. Comparison of enough varying statements and diverse prejudices which neutralize each other may bring one nearer to a true understanding. By using the eyes and ears of great numbers of observers who know the schools, by using the brains of many members of the staff who have been on the job here from fifteen to twenty-five years, we do succeed in giving a fair picture of the schools.

No school has ever been able to dictate or influence what we have written about it in the critical section, nor is the notice as written submitted to the school before publication. Only in its own paid announcement at the end of the book where the statements are supposed to be a condensation of its catalog can a school control what is said about it in this Handbook.

There are other publications on private schools that uncritically print just what the school wants and this ability to control appeals to the trustees of some of the more conservative schools who are sensitive to any criticism.

In England half a dozen yearbooks, uncritical compilations or an assemblage of straight advertising, are published by associations or by school agencies. The latter, in placing pupils, follow the Continental practice of collecting a commission from the school, from ten to thirty per cent,—the poorer the school, the higher the commission. This practice unfortunately is spreading to this country though we have repeatedly exposed and bitterly opposed it.

In this country, too, there are non-critical directories of schools and colleges, like Patterson's, a straight listing of schools and colleges of all types and The School and College Guide, which lists a great variety of schools and prints paid blurbs. And there are directories of senior and junior colleges, academic compilations avoiding judgments. For flattering notices there are always the various Who's Who's and the journals which publish puffs and write-ups, and these trail off into the underworld of education repeatedly exposed in the Private School News and the Handbook for Private School Teachers.

New appeals for the gullible head master's money are constantly springing up. A Chicago publisher, Harris, has produced a series of well printed brochures which flatter the schools. The Bellman Company of Boston has put out a series of books on educational institutions of New England.

A Connecticut printing house, Bunting, announces the publication of a new book on private schools, the material of which is supplied by the schools and approved by them before publication. Reprints in leaflet form are supplied the school, later to be bound up. Once these books are printed, the bill is rendered, a few are placed in libraries and that's that.

The head master of a Church school of great prestige writes, "I think the Bunting idea appealed to our Trustees because 'coldly' factual". Another, from one of the foremost Church schools writes, "I do not think the School should advertise in any book unless it can control what the book says about it . . . The contract with the Bunting people guarantees that I shall have the right to control whatever is written about the School."

HOW THIS BOOK CAME ABOUT

This book was never deliberately planned. When the first world war broke out I had been dealing with the product of the best private schools for two decades, tutoring, teaching in prep schools, and taking a group of boys preparing for college, with tutors, to Europe and around the world to acquaint them with the world's great cultures.

When the Czar and the Kaiser put me out of business, I turned to making a series of Handbooks. I planned a simple guide to help parents in the selection of private schools, which I knew had been haphazard,—what friends had told them. That required plain speaking. The immediate reaction from the schools was, "It can't be done". Schools had been accustomed to flattery and puffery in print and when they were presented with critical judgment, some heads and trustees engaged lawyers to stop this invasion of their privacy. But from others it brought high praise.

Crude as the first effort was, it was expensive to produce and it became apparent that constant and thorough revision would be needed each year. The continuance of annual editions was due to the initiative and farsightedness of a little group of the more enterprising head masters of some of the leading schools of the time, Andover, Exeter, Hotchkiss, Hill, among others. Their lead was followed by Choate, Taft, Lawrenceville, and many others.

If the book and the services for parents and schools which have grown up about it have been of value, it is due to the cooperating schools that have presented supplementary statements of their own at their own expense which has made it possible for us to gather and publish annually some 800 pages of detailed information about more than 1600 of the better known schools, and another 200 pages of lists of schools of less or largely local importance.

The notices in the critical text are written up with evidence before us from all available sources, much of which we know is prejudiced. The final result expresses the judgment of one man who stands responsible for it. These notices are not seen by the school before publication, nor are they influenced by the attitude of the school toward the Handbook.

Some of the oldest of the Church schools, St. James, St. George's, St. John's, Shattuck, Pomfret, joined in in the early years. Other Church schools of high social prestige, more under the control of their conservative trustees and a bit sensitive to the critical consideration given them, have continued to feel it more blessed to receive than to share.

A most promising new head, recently come to one of the famous Church schools, writes, "I am very sorry not to seem to be cooperating, particularly because I know how much value your book on Private Schools has. Indeed, I find myself turning to it frequently for reference purposes . . . It has . . . been a policy of the School not to advertise in any periodical or handbook. The only exception which might be considered is in the case of a book on Schools in which we might receive the assurance that only our own statement about the School would be printed . . . I feel disposed personally to take up a page . . . but this would be a radical divergence from what I believe has been a sound policy in the past."

The head master of another of the foremost church schools, now firmly in the saddle and most cordially helpful, explains, "The Handbook is of great value, and I suppose we consult it a hundred times a year. I objected to the Handbook write-ups when I first came out here, because of some implication in your write-up about my predecessor's administration, which I did not think was quite fair. It will be no news to you that many headmasters don't like the write-ups you give them, but I'll bet they all use the book the same way we do."

These schools that have benefited from the initiative and leadership of other schools, however, coming under younger and more progressive control are modifying their former self-satisfied attitude. Perhaps the example of the Public Schools of England will be effective in encouraging them to adapt themselves and their methods to those of a changing world.

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

This Handbook enables inquiring parents to get a broad view of schools of the type they are interested in. It saves them time and travel and helps them to narrow down the preliminary choice to perhaps half a dozen schools that seem to best meet their needs. Of the tens of thousands of families that consult these Handbooks in libraries, clubs, information bureaus and increasingly in their own homes, about a thousand a year feel the need of supplementary information and come to us in person, by letter, telephone, telegram. But suggestions as to how the book can be used independently to the greatest advantage may not come amiss.

The Table of Contents makes clear the arrangement. Each section is set off by a title page, on the back of which will be found detailed explanations of signs, symbols, etc., used in that portion of the book. The Index of Schools refers to the major notices of the individual schools, giving the address of each, and in many cases the name of the head.

Some seventeen hundred of the more important schools, statistically and critically described, are considered in geographical order from Maine to California, with brief introductory paragraphs on the physical environment in the thought that the town or city, its size, type, altitude, accessibility, etc., are necessarily of interest to the school patrons. These paragraphs avoid the usual real estate blurbs, and are not always approved by the local chambers of commerce.

The Supplementary Lists, following a similar geographical order, classify as to function some twenty-five hundred schools of lesser or local importance, or on which we have meager or out of date information,—schools not included in the critical statistical text. Classified lists of Schools to Meet Special Needs are helpful in finding schools of special types about which, by consulting the Index of Schools, further information can be found in the major notices.

The Announcements, cross referenced from the text and often illustrated, briefly summarize the salient points that the schools put forth in their catalogs. These are the schools' own statements, setting forth just what they feel a prospective patron will want to know. The invitation to these Announcements is an opportunity extended indiscriminatingly to less than a third of the schools that receive free publicity in the critical statistical text, and must conform to the editorial policy of uniform typography and format.

American parents generally are ambitious for their children and will make almost any sacrifice to do what they consider is best for their child. And it is to this ambition, that their children shall have a better start in life than they have had, a better equipment, a better education, that the great advance in American schools is due.

In static times it is natural enough for parents to feel fairly well satisfied with the educational institutions that are at hand and to be interested to see their own ideas, ideals and prejudices inherited and carried on by their children.

In times such as today the more active minded take an even more intense interest in selecting just the right school environment. They begin to doubt if their children should have the kind of training that they have had. As they see the world topple about them, facades falling, they try vaguely to envisage what will be needed by their children in the times that are to come.

Many discriminating seekers after school information read and ponder these introductory essays and write us as does this grandmother in West Virginia, "We have certainly enjoyed your Handbook of Private Schools and feel certain that our selection, decided on after exhaustive study from various angles, is the best we could have made for my granddaughter"; and the Illinois physician who "obtained your 'Private Schools' in the Chicago library and, after studying it and your illuminating introductions, checked up and found the school my little girl is now attending. I am entirely satisfied."

In this introductory matter we have for years reviewed the current situation in the private schools, thrown the spotlight on education, national and international, attempting to put the reader in contact with the most important thinking, speaking and writing of the day that touches upon education and its fringes. The idea is to give perspective as to what is ahead, that the parent may more wisely and confidently plan the future of his child.

From this responsible but detached position we have felt not only free but obliged to speak out boldly on many topics that are usually evaded, to uncover situations that are generally neglected. Unless one sees beneath the surface, unless one can anticipate what is to come, how can one plan or advise on the training of the generation that is growing up?

SELECTING THE SCHOOL

The choice of a school has become increasingly important to parents in the last two decades, as they have grown aware not only of the great variety of schools and school opportunities, but increasingly of the importance of the environment in which their children get their schooling.

THE NEED FOR GUIDANCE

There is apparent need for this kind of guidance, a comparative view of the opportunities available for those that can choose. Acquaintance with the schools and colleges that might train them to be of use in the world would seem to be important. Intelligently trained, really educated, there would not be so many unfitted for any job. Those who are fitted have been schooled to fill jobs that already exist. There is little training in initiative, in thinking up new jobs, in discovering needs.

About a thousand families turn to us annually for educational advice. Of late these inquiries have not been confined to what was previously considered the 'enrollment season',—spring and summer. Every mail brings letters from far-sighted parents planning the future education of their children. For our staff this involves much telephoning, letter writing, and sometimes extensive correspondence.

Year after year thousands of enrollments result from the information about the private schools and colleges that is given in these publications. And parents and those who advise them about schools and schooling have come to look on the publisher of these Handbooks as a clearing house for educational information.

WHAT THE SCHOOL WANTS

All private schools that have balanced the budget want better boys and girls to spoil in their own way. With rare exceptions, only those schools that are on the way up, that have to make good, want pupils that really need help. The idea of most schools is to turn out a product that is characteristic of the school. That they call molding of character. Some come out mouldy, others injured. For boys and girls don't all meet the standards set up by the perfect school, and parents don't all hold that these standards are best. The very "best" school may be the worst for some particular boy or girl, and the school that is unknown, not regarded as having any reputation at all, may be the ideal place for another. In using this book for such guidance, it is well to read between the lines.

The school, whether it be a one-man affair, privately owned, or a large, endowed, trustee institution, must each year have a supply of raw material to operate on. Most schools restrict themselves to certain age and scholastic limits and, in the families to whom they appeal, to a certain social or economic status. Some of the large preparatory schools require examinations like those of the Secondary Education Board.

A California head master who built his school on the basis of personal, individual help to boys frequently maladjusted in other schools, with things on a sounder basis, turns down a boy of the kind he made his reputation on. "I doubt whether this boy would make much of a contribution. There must be some give as well as take when a boy joins a school as intimate as ours. Otherwise all is soon taken away."

A school, to get started, enrolled and did a spectacularly good job with a number of boys who had failed to adjust in larger and more rigid schools. But it was hard work. Now with enrollment increased and the school on what he feels is a firm basis, the head looks not for the boys that he can help, but "Having taken on thirty-eight new and desirable boys this last year, we feel that we have passed the peak of our enrollment problem. We are not taking the problem boys which the old school enrolled. Next year we expect to open in September with about seventy boys, and as we shall have about forty carried over from this year, we do not anticipate any difficulty in enrolling the kind of boys we want."

The northern head mistress of a girls school in the south, impatient with the academic standards of most of her girls, writes, "Every room is filled. But I have not yet succeeded in enrolling enough girls of real intellectual ability. I would prefer to accept only girls who are students, eager for a strong educational program. And in time, as the school becomes better known, it will be possible to select more carefully than we are able to do just now."

The earnest head of a girls school, known afar for her ability to smooth out the rough corners and turn out mannerly young women, writes of a fourteen-year-old daughter of divorced parents, who had led a helter-skelter life much in the company of servants, "I have decided to accept this girl, and have so told her father, but you realize of course that her background is not at all the type of most of our girls, who come from families of gentility and culture, among whom I should hesitate to enroll more than one or possibly two girls of different background. These patrons have always felt secure in sending their daughters to me, knowing they would not at this impressionable age rub up against girls of whose backgrounds they would not approve."

WHAT PARENTS WANT

We know what parents want because they come to us for it. They want to do the best possible for their children. That's the attitude of those who come to us for advice, the sort that patronize the private school. The thoughtful parent who studies his child envisions an environment in which the child he knows so well may develop and grow.

A mother on the west coast writes, "My daughter, sixteen, is finishing her junior year. She was class president last year and has always been a B pupil. She is entered and recommended for Stanford, but I should like her to have the advantage of a year in the east at a first class preparatory school."

A widowed mother sees her son as an individual, not a cog in a wheel. "I have a boy who is a 'regular feller' but bashful. He is very shy and diffident. Would a coeducational school do anything for him? He is an excellent drummer, is completely wrapped up in band music, and will probably have a band of his own some day. But of course he must get his preparatory school work first. Where can I find a school that will appreciate him and give him what he needs?"

The head of an elementary country day school asks, "Can you suggest a private school to meet the requirements of one of our girls who is finishing the eighth grade this year? This girl has emotional difficulties and is not doing very well in her classes, but we believe she could make good if placed in the proper surroundings with firm, but fair and absolutely consistent discipline."

The college-bred mother of fourteen-year-old Ann living in a small lumbering town writes, "Ann is an attractive, wholesome looking girl, friendly and affectionate. She is quite sensible and shows a nice sense of taking responsibility. Her school work is not so hot. In fact I think she is flunking Algebra. She is intelligent enough but possibly does not know how to apply herself. Her two main interests at present seem to be clothes and boys, which is probably perfectly normal for her age. You know how a small town is. The girls have quite a lot of freedom and are all rather boy crazy. I am not sure that she should go to college. However, she must have an education that will fit her to take care of herself."

DISCRIMINATING FATHERS

A lawyer in New York City takes time to look thoughtfully at his son and to consider his schooling. "I have your book 'Private Schools'. The wealth of material is in itself confusing. Following the advice of the foreword, I am consulting you directly. My boy is now ten years old and in the fifth grade. His work at school has not been exceptional. His teachers and the school executives have frequently commented on his superior intelligence but I am unable to judge whether this comment is sincere. To one accustomed to more formal pedagogy his progress is difficult to evaluate. He does not read with sufficient fluency to enable him to do so with pleasure. His spelling is limited to the simplest words. He is only now acquiring some facility in the basic processes of arithmetic. On the credit side, he has a large vocabulary which he uses with accuracy even in moments of stress. His interest in most subjects is keen and he is capable of minute and careful observation. He reasons well and his memory is good. He retains the miscellaneous scientific information imparted to him in school and on the whole understands it. His most remarkable trait is his ability to occupy himself, which ability is constant and without adult direction. His interests are diverse to the extent that he starts many things he cannot or does not finish. My ideal in a school is one that would provide an education sufficient to allow a normal student to pass the College Entrance Board examinations without difficulty; a method of imparting this information such that the student enjoys attendance at the classroom with the result that he knows his subjects rather than a series of answers; an atmosphere that is manly; an opportunity to continue the sport in which he has shown proficiency."

From a middle western city a father writes, "I have written you previously relative to the selection of a school for my son, but we have kept him in school here—he graduates from high school this year. We felt that what he would sacrifice in scholastic training, he would gain along other lines. Before starting him in College, I want him to spend one year in a good prep school, principally to teach him to study and pull a lot of loose ends together and thereby fit him properly to begin his college work. The boy is not brilliant but I would say of better than average mentality and is able to grasp quite quickly. However, he has not been taught to study and this is the principal thing that we wish to accomplish in the proper school, in this extra year that we want to give him before starting to College. We are contemplating sending him to Wharton or some similar University that offers a general business course."

TRENDS IN THE PRIVATE SCHOOLS

There is always news about the private schools,—new schools are being organized, old schools are being modified, merging or going out. Control, appeal, the curriculum, the character of the student body,—all change.

THEIR VITALITY

Unlike institutions and corporations which are supposed to be immortal, private schools show their human vitality by coming to birth and to death, and in the meantime changing and evolving. Consequently, we have the most varied types of private schools brought into existence to meet new needs and going out when the demand for their services fails.

The private schools have no automatic source of supply, as do the public schools. They must justify their existence to attract pupils and to survive. It has always been so. When George Cheyne Shattuck founded St. Paul's and brought the medieval churchman, Coit, to New England as head master, it was to meet new conditions. It was "the first of the Church schools to make appeal to the new class that was rapidly acquiring wealth from the development of water power, textile mills, and exploitation of the continent".

And when, returning from his Public School education in England, Endicott Peabody found the wealthy merchant class to which his family belonged would support a type of school like those he was familiar with in England which had developed similarly to serve a growing merchant class,—he founded Groton. Peabody continued to show enterprise, introducing a printing plant into Groton which taught spelling and punctuation by the actual handling of bits of metal.

It is quite in the tradition that the new men who come to head what were for a time supposedly snobbish and conservative Church schools adapt their schools to the changes of the day that they may again meet new conditions.

SOME NERVOUSNESS

For some years far-sighted head masters like Heely of Lawrenceville have been warning their colleagues that there were changes ahead, that they must continue to build to meet new economic and social conditions. Candidates for the Ph.D. degree are writing more on private schools. Half a dozen in the last three months have appealed to us for material or help on their theses. Their interest almost invariably touches on the problem of what is to happen to the private schools. While the prestige of the schools remained undiminished and there were waiting lists, and beneficiaries came with bountiful gifts, there was little reason for adjustment or change. Now most of us are convinced that leaner years are ahead. But at the Centennial of Williston Academy, May, 1941, Head Master Fuess of Andover, always looking ahead, assured us that the great preparatory schools are adapting themselves to the changing conditions. Some will, and some may make the gesture just too late.

WHAT TO DO

One of the older and most highly respected heads of the great private day schools on the Atlantic seaboard writes me, "I have been called on to make some comment at a coming meeting on future prospects of private schools. As a recognized expert in the private school field, I should appreciate very much a brief comment from you on each of the following points: Why are so many private schools closing, giving up or joining forces? If the situation is precarious for day schools, is it equally so for boarding schools? Can anything be done and if so what to stem the tide against private schools? Is the country day school really declining in popularity? Has it been a sort of educational fad which has seen its best days?"

In response I wrote in part: "... Private schools that have been dependent in large part on local patronage have been especially hard hit. . . . Some schools have helped themselves by merging. . . . some by transforming themselves to meet immediate needs, some by moving out into the country where they can take 5 or 7 day boarders. . . . In most cases the great decrease has come because the families that have patronized the school are no longer a source of supply. . . . The old families that have not become sterile have frequently had a decrease in free income, due to decreased dividends and heavy taxation. . . . Boarding schools are less subject to fashion, hysteria, and prejudice and can extend their roots further into territories that did not formerly furnish patrons. . . . Behind all this, however, is the falling of the birth rate which has reduced the number of pupils in all the schools the country over by more than a million from the recent high.

"Much could be done to stem the tide,—to awaken the private schools to the necessity of supplying living needs, of making known that they have something that appeals to families, to boys and girls, not merely to state departments, to associations that send examiners to rate them, or to college authorities.

"We need schools that will tell the truth, that will reveal what's going on. That's the only thing that will ever make us free. We need people who will hunt around, investigate, reveal untruths that are foisted upon us by our well meaning school and university teachers."

THE MILITARY REVIVAL

With reduced income and the draft, the colleges look forward to reduced enrollment. President Conant returns from England to tell us that the English universities are rapidly being deserted and to forecast that college enrollments in this country will be off forty to fifty per cent next year.

The turning of the nation's attention to war meantime has brought a resurgence of interest in military education. Even some of our oldest Church schools have instituted military training, either as hobby courses or to take the place of some of the obligatory physical exercise. This trend to the military has been especially felt in the middle west, making it more difficult for the old established non-military preparatory schools to hold their enrollment. Anxious parents have written or come to the office this spring, seeking counsel on the advisability of transferring their sons of sixteen to eighteen from the academic school to the military.

An up-state New York mother writes, "Will you advise me? My son, sixteen in August, will finish his third year of high school in June. With this war situation and the probability of a bill being passed to take boys at eighteen, I am wondering if a Military Preparatory School is advisable."

A New England mother asks, "Are there military schools in which boys can get a sensible preparation for business and perhaps be adjusted better to military life? John, seventeen, has two more years of preparatory school. He has had a strict college preparatory course so far, but I doubt if he will go on to college if the war progresses as now seems likely. Can you advise me in this matter?"

WORK CAMPS

There is great demand at present from parents and school heads for private work camps, and parents are asking for schools, too, where their boys can work,—boys who have never worked before.

The head master of a great college preparatory school wrote us in February, "Two or three parents have asked me to recommend a work camp for their boys who are in our upper Forms. They are the kind of boy who has had a good deal of ordinary summer camp experience and does not wish any more of it, but the parents think, and in at least one case I am sure of it, that the boy would profit greatly by a really strenuous summer with a good deal of labor in it. Have you any place to recommend?"

In reply we wrote, "The work camps for the summer would not seem to be very far along with their plans. I am enclosing a new circular which may be of some interest. The head of Work Camps for America writes us, 'We do not yet have available any information on the specific camp sites planned for this summer, but we expect to have a complete announcement ready by the middle of the month.' If you haven't read the report of Kenneth Holland in the Educational Record Supplement for January, 1941, you will find it of interest, I think. Then there is 'American Youth, an Enforced Reconnaissance'."

As the season advanced, plans became more definite. We wrote, "The head of a Baltimore Friends school is planning some camps for high school students and more are being organized by the Associated Junior Work Camps. There is nothing in print yet about this coming year's activities along this line, but by the middle of April there should be a good deal." Later, "Other camp programs are planned in connection with some of the colleges in New England and in the Blue Ridge, directed by men whose ideas on education are interesting and thought-provoking." The American Youth Commission in April published a pamphlet "Work Camps for High School Youth", describing three projects to be maintained in Andover, New Jersey, Botsford, Connecticut, and Pine Mountain, Kentucky.

This demand for work camps has come out of the success of the C. C. C. which were inspired by earlier camps in Germany. In recent years, under the inspiration of Eugen Rosenstock-Heussey of Dartmouth who played a part in their early development and who was himself inspired by William James' essay, "The Moral Equivalent of War", there has been organized the William James Camp in Vermont. This has met with the usual opposition from ignorant politicians because of its supposedly 'foreign origin'.

It is gratifying to find that phases of the youth movement of central Europe and the Jugendherbergen reported on in Private School News and in the Handbook in the late 20's and early 30's as the result of the personal investigation of my two sons on the ground, have at last been taken up here in America. The Monroes of Northampton have in their enthusiasm initiated a chain of youth hostels throughout northern New England. And some understanding of the youth movement has penetrated to Harvard University. In "The Lesson of Europe", Reginald Henry Phelps, Assistant Dean of Harvard, adds something of historic range and vision to what we set forth, but without any recognition of the influence of the American summer camp whose roots go back to our Mexican and Civil Wars and which flowered under such men as Balch, and the influence of these things on the European movements.

EDUCATIONAL TENDENCIES

What a year or so ago were trends or tendencies, today have become strong currents. But in the swirling passions and 'all out' efforts of these tossing times, in a period when more effort and energy and money is being spent to affect our attitude and feelings for moral purposes or evil ends, there well may be varying views as to where we are headed.

WHITHER?

When the Congo was first discovered in central Africa, it was a subject of conjecture and controversy as to whether its northern tending waters joined the Nile to flow into the Mediterranean or turned westward to the Atlantic. In today's tendencies, though we feel the strength of the current, we may be caught in the whirlpools or held in the eddies, there is much confusion as to the final direction.

"The trouble with education is the same as the trouble with modern civilization", remarked philosopher Oliver Reiser only last year. "If the modern world is not to go down to destruction . . . the teacher must be able to help humanity find and disseminate . . . a new philosophy". And a few years before, the President of Harvard had insisted, "We must examine the immediate origins of our political, economic and cultural life . . . as fearlessly as the geologist examines the origin of rocks". We must "build an educational basis for a unified, coherent culture suited to a democratic country in a scientific age".

CENTRALIZATION

The nationalization of education has more recently been troubling President Conant. In his 1939 report to the Overseers he expressed the belief that "during the next twenty years a large majority of the students will probably attend institutions supported largely by taxes and controlled by a state or municipality."

For the past two years Dean Henry W. Holmes of Harvard has been advocating federal aid to education. In "The Nation Challenges the Schools", Atlantic, January, 1940, he wrote "The bogey of federal control has been raised for years to head off federal aid to schools". The most important educational problem in the United States as he sees it "is the equalization of educational opportunity".

At a forum meeting in Boston on "How Can American Education Combat Dictatorship?" Holmes urged federal subsidies for teaching in the backward states. "The processes of history may make fools of us, but we shall be fools anyway unless we try to think of schooling in the light of our best understanding of the destiny of the United States of America. If this should sound a bit totalitarian, I can only say that dangers of that sort are lurking everywhere. . . . Still it does look as if we were going to impose the necessities of the modern state and its capitalistic economy upon the individual in his youth. I think it means just that."

WARTIME PRESSURES

In times like these of emotional stress, when people are being incited to put down evil, the drift is away from the strictly intellectual and mental toward the moral and emotional. Out of fear, the most dominating emotion, arise anger and hate.

The young men who must do the fighting must be conditioned and disciplined, brought to heel. The presidents and faculties of universities and colleges must recognize their responsibility, in the words of President Roosevelt, to "shame them by patriotic example, and, if that fails, to use the sovereignty of [academic] government to save government".

President Ruthven of the University of Michigan saw this clearly when in the summer of 1940 he notified thirteen students prominent in non-conformist social activities that they were not to return. He didn't want the University to be "confused by sophistries built around meaningful but ill-defined phrases such as 'freedom of the press' and 'freedom of speech'".

President Butler of Columbia, declared last fall that undergraduates have no freedom and should have none, and that freedom for instructors was subordinate to the freedom of the university "to pursue its high ideals unhampered and unembarrassed by the conduct of any of its members which tends to damage its reputation, to lessen its influence or to lower its authority as a center of sound learning and of moral teaching". Dr. Carl S. Ell of Northeastern University, Boston, chorused "I believe firmly in academic freedom, provided I am permitted to define it". Presidents Conant and Seymour of Harvard and Yale, while expressing their ardour for morality and religion, have held to a more open minded attitude toward freedom of speech. Let 'em blow off steam.

A REPEAT PERFORMANCE

Emotional temperatures are steadily rising in the universities and colleges, but have not yet reached the intensity that they did in 1918. That course has been admirably summarized, fully documented, by C. H. Hamlin, Wilson, N. C., in "Educators Present Arms: The Use of the Schools and Colleges as Agents of War Propaganda, 1914-1918" (1939).

"Contrary to the notion that institutions of learning are scientific seekers after truth and uninfluenced by popular prejudice, the colleges seem to have been among the first of the general public to have fallen victim of the war hysteria. Before our entrance the schools and colleges had been thoroughly propagandized by those interested in the allied cause, making it easy for the government to use the same channels for stimulating patriotism after April 6, 1917."

Harvard took the lead in almost the same way as in this war. A collection of the more hysterical sayings of Harvard professors was brought together in a thesis by E. K. Adelsheim. These vie with the even more violent expression of the clergy of the time, brought together by R. H. Abrams, "Preachers Present Arms". The hysteria spread rapidly. President Thwing wrote, "We seem to be devoting all our knowledge to perfecting the art of killing". The war is for "the preservation of humanity", "the integrity of the moral life of the race", "the reality of justice among men and nations".

Educators began to recover from the hysteria soon after the close of the war. "Among the first of the historians to recover from the war hysteria was Sidney B. Fay of Smith College. In a series of articles in the American Historical Review of July and October, 1920, and January, 1921, he showed the absurdity of much of the official propaganda." By 1930, ninety-five of a hundred leading American historians answered "no" to the question, "Do you believe that Germany and her allies were solely responsible for causing the World War?"

Hamlin closes his survey with, "Education from the first grade through the graduate school partakes of the bias of its time, place, and financial support, seldom becoming timeless and placeless in the pursuit of truth. The most distinguished American historians accepted at the time the Wilsonian catch phrases and the official theory of the causes and nature of the war that came from the diplomatic offices of the allies. Professor G. S. Counts says that 'on all genuinely crucial matters the school follows the wishes of the groups or classes that actually rule society'. Nationalism in its worship of tribal gods makes education its adjunct."

PUTTING UP MENTAL SHUTTERS

As "guardians of the eternal verities", as President Conant claims, the universities must of course denounce evil, and the enemy is always evil. How could one enjoy his enmity against an enemy who was good? College and school people are the first to respond to this ancient teaching, and as soon as the excitement begins, to put up their mental shutters and close their minds. Cerebration stops. No new data is considered. It is a time for action, not for thinking. To new or unfamiliar facts the response becomes "I don't agree", "My point of view is different".

Meantime many of our educators remain as oblivious as to how they got their opinions as President and Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt were according to H. G. Wells who wrote, "I doubt if these two fine, active minds have ever enquired how it is they know what they know and think as they do. . . . They have the disposition of all politicians the world over to deal only with made opinion. They have never enquired how it is that opinion is made."

My recently published "Getting U S Into War" is a compilation from the speeches and writings of the statesmen and thinkers of the past two years. It is a scrapbook, looking backward, to show how opinion was changed and an attempt to show on what these changes were based. It avoids giving opinions, though it does draw inferences from data presented, inferences that are not fashionable. The reaction of a great number of school people would indicate they are scared, intimidated. All is black and white for them. There are no grays.

RED DRIVES ON THE SCHOOLS

In time of war prepare for peace would be a good slogan but not particularly popular. Under emotional stress we tend to avoid new ideas, new teachings, and revert to the past. It is a favorable time to stimulate "red" drives against teachers in the schools and colleges, promoted by professional agitators who receive aid and support from big industrialists. The attack is generally directed against the teaching of social studies. Any consideration of things social seems to some encrusted minds socialistic.

The teaching of the "new history" of James Harvey Robinson and Charles Beard led to the Hearst inspired Miller attack on the Muzzey histories in the 1920's. More recently the Rugg series of histories have been violently attacked. Their author, Harold Rugg, in "That Men May Understand" (Doubleday, Doran, 1941) reviews similar drives and explains his backgrounds and the preparation that led to the publication of his history books. He tells how the present drive on his and other liberal teachings in the schools has been fomented by manufacturer's organizations and great corporations desirous of reducing taxes necessary to support the schools. How the attack on his books was instituted by an anonymous resident of Englewood, N. J., the residential town of Morgan partners Lamont and Davidson, and promoted by B. C. Forbes, the publisher of a business paper who came to this country from England by way of South Africa, and how this was taken up by men like Merwin Hart, is told vividly but with autobiographic reserve.

Such drives are but symptoms of a time of hysterical unsettlement. John T. Flynn reports (New Republic, November 4, 1940) that Superintendent William H. Johnson of Chicago "has started a sort of textbook spy hunt. Even such old standbys as 'Robinson Crusoe' and 'The Swiss Family Robinson' and 'Grimm's Fairy Tales' are being searched for evidence of work by long deceased fifth-columnists. Even arithmetic is not being overlooked, to be certain that no subversive philosophy lurks in the 'examples'."

In this attack on the schools the American Legion is being used. It was becoming too popularly controlled and was recaptured for the purposes of this war at the Boston convention in September, 1940. "Treason in the Textbooks" was the subject of an article in the September issue of the American Legion Magazine. The secretary of the powerful N.E.A. in setting forth his very common sense suggestions as to what we ought to teach, tactfully and timidly introduces each of his seven propositions with "It is not treason" (Journal of N.E.A., Nov., 1940)

BURNING SCHOOL BOOKS

From suppression it is but a step to the burning of text books. In a number of towns Rugg's books have been publicly burned, imitating the symbolic burning of books in Germany on the inauguration of the Third Reich. In other towns they have been merely thrown into the furnace.

President Roosevelt, October 8, 1940, extended congratulations to the Boston Herald on its Book Fair because "It emphasizes that while in some countries books are being burned and free speech is being suppressed, in our own land we still have complete freedom to write our opinions, to have them published and to have them read. And also we have complete freedom to read the opinions of others."

But the Federal Government, apparently unknown to the President, has now entered upon the burning of suspect books on a large scale. Startling have been the pictures proudly displayed in our newspapers of the recent burning by the San Francisco postoffice of seventeen tons of pamphlets, magazines, including some well bound books. The postmaster reported that twelve tons had been previously so destroyed, and explained that all orders to destroy material came from Washington.

The New Republic, March 3, 1941, editorially commenting on "The Burning of the Text Books", reminds that "The Education Department of the French government, it seems, has banned from the French schools a long list of history books which emphasized the French Revolution at the expense of the many centuries of French monarchy."

QUARANTINED AGAINST IDEAS

The Rapp-Coudert committee, which has a quarter of a million dollars to investigate a few suspected communists teaching in Brooklyn schools, has discovered that travel abroad is subversive. New York teachers who have taken bargain holiday tours to Germany, Italy and Russia in pre-war days are suspect. Subpoenas for the records of the steamship companies have been issued, and the committee is seeking a list of all public school teachers who have visited those countries in the last three years (N. Y. Daily News, March 5, 1941).

Travel gives one ideas. The great job now is how to prevent the import of ideas. The "antagonism of the schoolmasters" to Horace Mann a century ago, Paul Monroe reminds us in his "Founding of the American Public School System", "was founded upon opposition to new methods, particularly to Mann's condemnation of corporal punishment, to his advocacy of new and foreign ideas, chiefly Pestalozzianism". (pp 251-2)

Even our one time liberals are today talking about how to quarantine ideas. On the air April 17, 1941, the man who invented the phrase "ideas are weapons", Max Lerner, was talking about quarantining them. A little over a year ago Lancelot Hogben could throw out a book of accumulated essays of recent years under the challenging title of "Dangerous Thoughts". They weren't dangerous. But he wanted to be whimsical. Today there is nothing whimsical about it. If you have a thought that isn't shared by the hundred percenter you had better conceal it.

We have been very effectively quarantined against the totalitarian peoples. Their scientific product, their books, their attitudes must remain unknown to us. What isn't held up in foreign storehouses or libraries pending the close of the war is burned on arrival. (cf "Getting U S Into War", pp 281-2) "Quarantined against ideas?" an editor wrote me. "You should see the shelf of books on Russia that I have at my elbow." On Russia, yes, not from Russia recently.

At Bermuda the British government maintains a staff of eight hundred censors in two great resort hotels to weed out from the mails anything going to or from America that they object to. (Life, May 19, 1941). Even cyclamen seeds shipped from Holland to New York, worth over $10,000 were confiscated and sold at auction. Though the consignee was there to bid, they were sold to a Bermudan for £5, who promptly sold them again for $4,000. The branch of the British government at Washington has a staff of two thousand, to guide us in our reading and thinking, and in New York of four thousand,—more than ten thousand paid Britishers in this country to help us in our spending and ease us into war,—though there is no British propaganda in this country we are told.

SUPPRESSED BOOKS

Some English books cannot be obtained in this country, among them Sidney Rogerson's "Propaganda in the Next War", and Arthur Bryant's "Unfinished Victory", published by Macmillan in London but not sold in America. Albert Jay Nock in Scribner's Commentator for April, 1941, writes that this important book makes clear that "if the present war ends in another unfinished victory there will be no chance whatever of a durable peace in Europe. This war, like the last one, will be merely so much useless waste. . . . The victors had only one choice, either to exterminate the Germans or understand them. They chose to do neither; they chose instead to reduce them to servitude and use them as labor-motors; and therefore there was no settled peace. . . . Extermination of the whole German people would of course be practicable, but Mr. Bryant says that Britons would never stand for it."

Suppression of books of course is nothing new in our country, but it isn't advertised too widely. On supposedly moral grounds the chief of police in Boston repeatedly confiscates magazines or suppresses books. The Boston Athenaeum, a private club, keeps such dangerous books as Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy" and fifty or more equally so, locked up in a wire cage because of police regulations.

In the publishing of books there is a good deal of voluntary censorship. The publisher suggests changes that should be made. Dreiser had to cut a whole chapter out of his last book before they would print it. Hauck Bros., Flanders Hall, Scotch Plains, New Jersey, are publishing reprints of books of political significance not otherwise available in this country.

Suppression of books by the Germans in occupied countries is apparently stupid, indiscriminating and rigorous. We hope it may not be here in this country. There has been too much of it in the past, but chiefly on moral rather than political grounds.

WHEN PRIVATE INITIATIVE FALLS DOWN

We may expect, as in England, further invasion of education by our Federal Government. Private initiative will continue to prevail only so long as it efficiently functions. Social functions that are no longer profitable or are inefficiently run,—hospitals, poor houses, water and sewage systems, roads,—are taken over from individuals, the guilds, the Church. Liberty implies responsibility, as William Graham Sumner made clear (cf. "Sumner Today" Yale, 1940):

Men "have made liberty a dream, a poetic illusion, by which to escape, at least for an hour, from the limitations of earth. . . . Responsibility rises up by the side of liberty, correlative, commensurate, and inevitable. Responsibility to society is enforced by discord, revolution, national decay, conquest, and enslavement."

Our failure in responsibility is explained by Thomas C. Cochran in "The Social History of the Corporation" (Ware, "Cultural Approach to History"). "As Professor Bullock indicated in 1905, noncompetitive business was bound to develop all the administrative ills of government, including bureaucracy and lack of enterprise. Men having practical experience with the situation have emphasized the tendency toward the bureaucratic shift of responsibility in large corporations. J. B. Sheridan, for many years director of the Missouri Committee on Public Utility Information, writes:

"We are raising a lot of thoroughly drilled 'yes Ma'am' in the big corporations, who have no minds of their own, no opinions. . . . After a man has served 20 to 30 years in one of these monstrous corporations he is not liable to have a mind of his own.' . . . No student can long avoid the fundamental question as to what participation in corporate activity has done to undermine old individualist standards in ethics and morals."

A CLARIFYING GLANCE BACKWARD

The histories of education in America, mostly written for our normal schools, have preserved a lot of myths. In the ripe work of Paul Monroe, emeritus professor of education, Teachers College, in what he calls "Founding of the American Public School System: A History of Education in the United States" (Macmillan, 1940), he clears away a lot of this underbrush. "England had no system of state supported schools." But in Holland the Pilgrims became acquainted with the Prussian system of state supported schools. The traditional 'founding' of our school system proves to be haphazard growth against opposition.

"The schools existing in New York during the last quarter of the eighteenth century were private schools, or church schools, or charity schools." It was labor unions in New York in 1920 that demanded something better than the charity schools which had been established by the churches. From 1830 to 1860 "the laboring classes began to organize and to formulate their views on . . . the freedom of public land, the abolition of monopolies, the abolition of imprisonment for debt . . . operation of the United States mails on Sunday." The "most effective" of labor's demands were put forth as "six 'Essays on Public Education', published first in 1830." One "raised the question of the source of the funds for such a school system. The answer was 'from the government, because education is in reality a form of legislation and if wisely cared for might to a great extent supersede the necessity and save the expense of criminal laws, jails and almshouses'."

In Boston, "Schools for elementary teaching were not supported by the town until 1819 and were not combined with the city system until 1855." The first state school systems were the result of the agitation of Horace Mann in Massachusetts and Henry Barnard in Connecticut. The Massachusetts Law of 1827 which gave democratic local control of the schools "reduced their efficiency to the lowest terms". Horace Mann termed it "the most unfortunate school law ever enacted for Massachusetts."

"Dr. Henry Barnard had made an extensive study of European conditions in 1835-36" and "published an account of these observations in the 'First Annual Report' in 1839". The French school system under Guizot had been organized as a result of Victor Cousin's "famous report of 'The Study of Public Instruction in Germany, particularly in Prussia', which . . . was reprinted as a legislative document by Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, and other states. This report had more influence than any other one thing in the shaping of the state system of Michigan. . . . Subsequent visits to Europe gave Dr. Barnard a vast mass of information which appeared in 1854 under the title 'National Education in Europe' . . . still the largest single work in English on this subject. . . .

"Professor Calvin Stowe, husband of Harriet Beecher Stowe, was authorized in 1836 by the legislature of Ohio to investigate the educational system of the German states and to make a report with recommendations for Ohio."

Horace Mann's reforms met with great opposition from New England's conservatives, but as a result of his visit to Europe his "Seventh Annual Report" published in 1844 "proved to be one of the most influential documents Mann ever wrote." This was too subversive for Boston, and he was driven to Ohio to establish Antioch College.

WHAT'S AHEAD

From Monroe's history we see that our education as a social process is English, but that our system of instruction is German, Pestalozzian, Froebelian. Similarly our colleges followed the English ecclesiastical model. They became universities as the result of training of their professors in German universities. Our state systems of education, pioneered by Mann and Barnard, followed the Prussian system against the opposition of the hundred percenters of the day.

We are coming to realize that the process of world evolution is being speeded up after a period in which we have been relatively static and self-satisfied. Our whole economic and social system is in a state of transition. Necessity among the deprived and dissatisfied of central Europe has resulted in the working out of new economic and financial methods in the past forty years. Under the stress of war England has been forced to take up these methods, even Keynes' plan for financing, formerly scouted. And now Keynes is in Washington. (cf. "Getting U S Into War", pp. 563-617)

Sir Halford Mackinder, the great English geographer, at the close of the 19th century saw the great Eurasian plain as the mother continent of civilization, the "heart of the old world". He foresaw the inevitability of Russo-German collaboration. Brooks Adams too read the same map the same way and in 1903 foretold of the coalition of European and Asiatic powers against the sea power of Britain, into which the U. S. would be drawn.

Nevertheless the revolution has broken with little warning. John Macmurray, Scotch theologian, gave the first inkling from the Christian point of view in "The Clue to History" (Harper, 1939), Peter Drucker in "The End of Economic Man" (John Day, 1939) from the economic side. Rauschnig at first could see nothing but 'Nihilism', but now discerns a pattern. Others have gradually begun to discern the picture.

James Burnham in "The Managerial Revolution" (John Day, 1941) sees the managers of production the masters of the future. "The New Deal sprang from the inner structural drives of modern society, the forces that are operating to end capitalism and begin a new type of social organization, the same forces which at later stages and under different local circumstances produced the revolution in Russia and Germany" (Time, May 19, 1941).

George S. Pettee sees us in "a pre-revolutionary period". "Are the schools meeting the new conditions? . . . Or are they also drifting toward palliatives, trying to renew the faith of youth in existing society by singing patriotic songs, depending on auto-suggestion to keep up in youth a faith which is no longer self-renewing? . . . If we look for any definition of the life for which the student is preparing, we must find that the American schools are as confused as American society itself. . . . Our schools, shaped to the free demands of the last century, offer a familiarity with intellectual chaos as an education." ("American Youth", Harvard University Press, 1940)

ENGLAND'S "PUBLIC SCHOOLS"

In contrast to the current prosperity of the corresponding 'private schools' in America, the 'Public Schools' of England have come upon evil days. For some years in this Handbook we have been looking into these models for some of our private schools, in anticipation of their coming decline.

"THEIR DAY IS DONE"

Sir Cyril Norwood of St. John's College of Oxford, former head of Harrow and most revered Public School man in England today, had already forecast that "their day is done", we reported last year in this Handbook (p. 25). In the 23d edition we had traced their development (pp. 42-62). Originating as eleemosynary foundations for poor boys, they were taken over by the nobility, and later the ambition of the merchant class to become gentlemen led to the multiplication of these present day snob schools. Pupils who did not belong to the nobility were compelled to append to their names the letters 's.nob.'—sine nobilitate. Prestige made these schools immune to criticism, so that their anachronistic idiosyncrasies have been preserved.

Great British writers and thinkers who had denounced the "sadistic righteousness" of England's "anachronistic education" were quoted in the 22d edition (p. 112), as in the preceding 19th and 15th. On "the playing fields of Eton" and other schools, "under the caning of their head masters", "the English breed, the noblest the world has seen", were made "the hard bitten and polished snobs" who, wearing the "old school tie" became "the wreckers" of the empire (p. 109).

The Empire was not built by wearers of the 'old school tie', but for some time has been ruled by them. "Up till very recently between eighty and ninety per cent of the ruling positions in Church, State and the Armed Forces of the Crown, have been held by Public School men." Professor Hilton of Cambridge University in an address in August, 1937, reported in our 22d edition (p. 110) from the London Times, stated that of 21 Cabinet Ministers then in office, 20 wore the Public School tie,—of 56 bishops, 52,—and of 156 judges, 122.

The English people are becoming aware that the control is not as democratic as is generally supposed. In Parliament the majority wear the 'old school tie', and it takes money to be elected. The cost of educating a boy at Eton or Harrow has been about £300 a year, and 90% of English families have an income of less than £250 a year. How a relatively small number of related families through Parliament and the government control the wealth and governance of the Empire was made clear in "Tory M. P.", published in London in 1939, written by an anonymous group under the pseudonym of Simon Haxey and republished in this country as "England's Money Lords" (Harrison Hilton), reviewed at length in Time, August 7, 1939.

WHAT THE WAR BROUGHT

"The aristocratic 'public' schools", Time reports, April 28, 1941, "have suffered financially. One of them, Weymouth, has closed. The rest are so hard up that they are getting Parliament to pass a bill to let them spend endowment capital. Eton advertised one of its houses to let, and an Eton master hinted that the school might one day be reduced to admitting girls." The playing fields of Eton, where Wellington's Waterloo was won, are now plowed up and growing cabbages. In the recent bombing the brass plate bearing the names of thousands of Etonians killed in the last war was destroyed. "The famed old 'birching block', over which headmasters had birched (i.e., flogged) boy's bottoms for generations, was missing", but the remains, found in a bomb crater, are now in the Eton Museum. (Time, January 20, 1941)

Parliament, after hearing that "public schools should be allowed to die a natural death", passed a bill "to let hard-pressed schools draw on the principal of their trust endowments to meet their operating deficits". (Time, May 19)

The greatest damage is to the prestige of these schools. Major Barsant, Eton, Oxford, wrote a letter to the London Times, maintaining that the wearer of the 'old school tie' made a better officer than the raw material out of council schools and factories. This brought such a storm of letters protesting against this once revered but snobbish attitude that he had to resign.

Even the present Prime Minister has turned against the Public School, recognizing that here is a case something like the 'enclosure of the common lands' in the 17th and 18th centuries to make deer parks. "Mr. Churchill (who is a Harrovian) . . . says that the public schools must revert to their original purpose of providing education for poor scholars. . . . The Public Schools' Act of 1868 . . . was a piece of class legislation. . . . Our Victorian grandparents had a peculiar talent for grabbing old endowments and using them for the well-to-do middle and upper classes, while declaring unctuously that it was for the good of all." (Journal of Education, March, 1941)

STILL UNDER ATTACK

For half a century the Public Schools have been periodically the butt of abusive criticism, and in recent years the bitterness has been increasing. The latest is T. C. Worsley's "Barbarians and Philistines: Democracy and the Public Schools" (Robert Hale Ltd., 1940). The title is derived from Matthew Arnold's, "I often, when I want to distinguish clearly the aristocratic class from the Philistines proper, or middle class, name the former in my mind the Barbarians."

The existence of the Public Schools is incompatible with a democratic way of living. The leaders they develop are authoritarian, not democratic, he claims. "Attendance at them is now the essential hall-mark of the 'gentleman', a term which, if it could once be used in a moral, is now used in a social sense, defining certain habits of speech, dress and behaviour."

One of England's most famed school masters, Benson, who made Wellington College, is paid this tribute by Sir Ian Hamilton in his autobiography, quoted by Worsley: "To his study every morning at 9:30 A. M. I brought a little note from my form-masters. On reading this he rushed about searching for a cane, which was never by any chance to hand. A great deal depended on the cane; there was a special sort which grew larger towards the business end. The moment he found one, he laid across my back till all was blue, especially my back. When I went to the bathing lake and stripped, I felt as a peacock must feel when spreading his tail; I became the cynosure and stupor of the crowd. The blues of the previous week had changed to green and yellow, whilst along the ribs under my arms, where the point of the cane curled, the stripes were dark purple."

THE PRESENT CONFUSION

British educational journals have lamented in letters and editorials the existing confusion. Osbert Sitwell sees no good in the Public Schools and is glad to have them passing. In a satirical article entitled "Send the Public Schools to Germany", he denounces them as "nothing but a better kind of concentration camp". In the London Journal of Education Dr. John Skinner of Culford comes back acidly, denouncing such "pipsqueak views". Most of the school masters, worried, clinging to the past, fearing the future, write, as one would expect, prosy disquisitions. Sir Cyril Norwood is less caustic toward the critics of the Public Schools than formerly.

Sir Frank Fletcher, reviewing the situation in the Journal for September, 1940, concludes that the Public Schools can survive only if they opened their doors to an increasing number of "free placers" from the state supported elementary schools, and encouraged the day boys from middle class homes. As the per capita cost in government aided schools is one-fourth that of the cheapest of the Public Schools, this would require a government subsidy greater than the total budget for national education before the war, £144,000,000.

Succeeding issues of the Journal have been crowded with letters from school masters and their critics. Summarizing the long discussion on "The Public Schools and the Nation", in the March and April, 1941, numbers of the Journal, Professor F. Clarke, Director of the University of London Institute of Education, finds "a feeling of frustration, a sense that the real issue has not yet defined itself with sufficient clearness", a tendency "to flounder and evade". A solution must await "further dispersal of illusions . . . much bolder and more clear-cut thinking".

THE DEFENDERS

The defenders are "ready to fight the wrong battle on the wrong ground . . . resolved to save all that can be saved of privilege", Clarke charges. They choose "to ignore the play of social interest in the defensive facade of educational theory that it throws up". Specious is their claim, attributing the "educational superiority of the public school to the successes and achievements of its old boys, so long as it can be contended that such achievements are made possible quite as much by the social advantage attaching to a school label as by the inherent virtues of the education which the schools give. So we are driven to wonder whether the educational argument might not be differently stated if the privileged position could not be counted upon and the schools had to compete with other schools on their educational merits alone."

Professor Clarke "cannot feel that the advantage in urbanity of manner has been wholly on the side of the defence. One defender can allow himself to speak of a weighty and representative 'opposition' as 'Messrs. Joad, Laski and company'." "The motives of the defenders" he tells us, must be "purged of impurities by rigorous self-examination". The "disastrous confusion" of the 'either-or' argument must be abandoned. They are both "privileged preserves" and "repositories of an educational tradition", which comes to much the same thing. (Journal of Education, March, 1941)

SOCIAL POISON

"Some subtle poison" is at work in maintaining "this queer and self-destructive disposition", Clarke claims. "In the conditions that we shall now have to face the thing will operate as a social poison. . . . It becomes now a deadly infection . . . a chief breeding-centre of this social sepsis. . . . The public school may have to die in order to live again in a larger and richer national life. . . . If the schools can rise to the level of the demand they will be surprised at the response they will evoke. If they cannot, not many will have any further use for them."

The social issues brought to the surface by Laski, Bevan, Joad and others, challenging "presuppositions upon which English society has been built for some centuries", have been obscured in a "dangerous state of half-vision, double-mindedness, and self-deception that can be so fruitful a source of conflict", Clarke remarks. The real battle is joined in "conflicting interests . . . socio-political presuppositions". Here lies the danger in "the confusion of motives and the infection of educational theory by social 'interest' ". "Undeclared social or personal interest can easily assume the dress of disinterested educational principle: ignorances can look like virtues, and tenacious holding-on to privilege can give us all the self-approving glow of faithfulness to principles."

A SOCIAL INSTITUTION

"To the charge that the whole system is undemocratic it is sometimes replied that 'independent' schools of the same kind exist and flourish in those citadels of democracy, the Dominions. That is true. But what does not exist there is any recognized claim to status constituted by a particular school label. Between the 'independent' schools of the Dominions and the working of Dominion government and society there is nothing parallel to what exists in England. It would be inconceivable that, in Australia for instance, a Geelong boy should make claims similar to those which could be made by an Eton or Winchester boy here with the full expectation that they would be accepted."

"The present position of the public schools is the result of a not very lengthy episode in English social and economic development, the full history of which has not yet been written." Professor Clarke evidently does not know the detailed work of Edward C. Mack, "Public Schools and British Opinion" (Methuen, 1938), fully covered in the 1938-39 edition of this Handbook, pp. 49-62. A second volume is about to be published.

Clarke sees that the modern success of the schools and their rapid multiplication is due to the prestige and privilege that goes to the wearer of the 'old school tie'. Today after two great wars have revealed the incompetence of the occupants of "key positions in English government and society", he asks whether "the superior educational merits of the schools are alone sufficient to explain what one finds".

The war has led to the discovery in England that what they call 'education' was a social process by which the young were conditioned. The Public Schools, pillars of the caste system and imperialism, have promoted prestige for the wearers of the 'old school tie'. In the face of demand for broader and more intellectual education the Public Schools can no longer continue to "depreciate teaching".

THE SOLUTION

There is no solution for the Public School problem while it hides behind its educational front. A social institution, the solution must be social. "But how pervasive these social influences are in English thought and practice in all that is generally taken as education! Thus, no English school at the 'secondary' level, seems to be entirely happy unless, in its neighborhood, there is a school of lower grade upon which it can look down." (Journal of Education, April, 1941)

Professor Clarke and Sir Frank Fletcher agree that the solution lies in accepting boys of other than the privileged classes under government grant. But that will be of little value unless the prestige of the 'old school tie' and of the 'useless classics' is shattered. "These all suggest an outlook upon a well-to-do world of considerable leisure, in which governing responsibilities are to be exercised in conditions where the necessary technical knowledge is provided by subordinates, and where it is not assumed that any fundamental changes will take place in the society which the training has in view."

We must "attend more closely to the shape of things to come than to the sentimental attachments of a vanishing past". The supporters of the Public School are lost in the haze of moral and spiritual values, regard the school as a community, and make light of those who would regard it "primarily as a teaching-shop". But the "school which fails in efficiency as a teaching-shop fails as a school".

PRESERVING WHAT'S GOOD

If the change is too sudden, the result of impulse, the good may be swept away with the evil, the baby go out with the bath water. There are grains of golden wisdom even in the traditions of the Public School, even in the detritus of an outworn social system. It will be unfortunate if the vital seeds are swept away with the old and rotten. In America we have learned that training of the intellect alone does not make a complete man. But the schools won't change much in spite of the hopes of idealists unless the economic system, the trading system of the Empire, is modified, because they have grown to be what they are with the development of the trading class who built the Empire, as Mack has so clearly shown.

But trade and Empire are shifting into new patterns to compete with new systems that are developing in central Europe. Unless those who behind the scenes hold the ultimate control are disclosed, and their machinations understood, there can be little change and Britain will again, as she did after the last war, revert to the traditional pattern and fall into the old ruts.

EDUCATION IN ENGLAND

Evacuations, children in strange places, roaming the streets, working in the factories, school buildings commandeered, have raised havoc with education. "In Great Britain, schools and universities are closed or are being starved for want of funds. Institutions centuries old, world-renowned, famed seed beds of scholars and scientists, are lifeless because the pursuit of knowledge was divorced from the realities of life and because teachers were indifferent to conditions which surrounded them." So Edgar W. Knight, professor of education, University of North Carolina, sums it up in School and Society, November 23, 1940.

For the increase in juvenile delinquency, the London Times Educational Supplement, March 15, accounts in this way,— "Too much, too heavy, too intense, or too monotonous labour tends to set up in young people, and more particularly in boys . . . a bored and irritated tiredness which seeks release, not in rest but in restless activity."

THE POLITICAL SITUATION

England's serious situation and drift toward totalitarian control is brought out by Peter F. Drucker in Harper's, May, 1941, in "Must a War Economy be Permanent?". He tells us that by the end of last year "50 to 60 per cent of the British national income was spent on the conduct of the war. . . . The system of direct management of production and consumption succeeds where all previous economic policy has failed. . . . In England today the political part of the power wielded by corporation management—wages and hours, pricing, direction of output, employment, and credit—is rapidly being assumed by the government and becomes part of its political sovereignty. . . . Labor is conscripted and employers are forbidden to hire and fire without governmental permission; bank deposits are borrowed by the government with or without their owners' consent; factories, houses, shops are taken over summarily for defense purposes. . . .

"There are important differences between the system developed in Germany before 1939, and the British system of today; but they are mainly due to the desire of the British people to do a more thorough, quicker, and better job. . . . The most perspicacious of totalitarian philosophers, the German Nazi writer Ernst Juenger, had some justification when, twenty years ago, he pointed out that the modern big corporation realizes the Leader principle and is, therefore, a model that a Nazi-state would have to copy in the political sphere. . . . Nazi Germany did not even invent these new principles but took them from . . . the U. S. War Industries Board of 1917, and Walter Rathenau, the Jewish Liberal who headed Germany's raw materials administration during the last war."

Significant is the concentration of all control of oil in the Royal Dutch Shell Company, to which the government interests in Persian oil were turned over by Chamberlain early in the war. Oil is power. Those who control oil hold control over Britain, however that may be disguised in patriotic, moral or religious abstractions. How the British government is thus controlled, I attempted to discover in the last edition of this Handbook, pp. 59-62. "Great Britain spent four billions after the Armistice, Deterding hundreds of millions of his own money, and forced Churchill to force Wilson to send American forces to carry the American flag into Murmansk, the White Sea, Siberia, and the Caspian Sea." (p. 60) But they failed to get the oil of Baku. Today the concentration of oil and power is even greater, and the same Churchill is in an even more influential position.

EDUCATIONAL REFORM DEFEATED

In the first world war the failure of the educational system became so apparent that liberal Englishmen were determined on change and reform. In 1918, in the 4th edition of this Handbook, we reported the effect of the war "was to bring education to a standstill. England was entirely unprepared for the emergency. The higher schools and universities lost from enlistment in some cases seventy-five percent of their student body".

Under the title, "Educational Reconstruction in England", we reflected the enthusiasm on both sides of the Atlantic. "On July 17, 1918, there occurred an epoch-making event, one that marks the culmination of one phase of the intellectual and social revolution that has been going on in England during the past three years. On that date, after almost a year's debate, the House of Commons passed the Fisher Education Bill which gives England a national system of education, years in advance of anything we have yet achieved in America" (p. 71). The world was being 'made safe for democracy'.

These educational reforms were not carried through. In the 1921 edition of this Handbook, in reporting on "Education Abroad", we wrote, "The great day in England has not yet arrived. When the Education Act of 1918 was passed by Parliament much was hoped from it, but the 'appointed day' on which it shall go into effect has not yet been set and there is no present indication when the government will cease its excuses and act. . . . The enthusiasm that marked the passage of the Education Act seems to have receded" (p. 49).

England's rulers had again ditched the people as when they had enclosed their common lands, made the poor boys' schools privileged preserves; and again education was confined to a social processing for maintaining the caste system. But as a result of continued protest the Hadow Commission finally brought in a report calling for something more educational than the conditioning to which the young were then subjected. But there was delay and its recommendations were finally negated by the Tories. "We know what practical experience has made of that", bitterly the Journal of Education comments in April, 1941. In response to further protest, another commission was appointed which recommended what the Tories wanted. "The Spens Report returns, with an almost audible sigh of relief, to the old ways."

So in the years following the war, billions that it had been hoped might go to education were spent in an attempt to suppress Bolshevism in Russia and to insure control of Mesopotamian and Persian oil, both favorite projects of Churchill.

Again in 1938 it was realized that a better quality of cannon fodder would be needed than was being produced by the life of children from fourteen to sixteen in the factories and mines. An attempt was made to pass a law raising 'the school leaving age' to fifteen. But industrial interests provided many loop holes and the outbreak of war resulted in the postponement or abrogation of measures protective to youth.

AGAIN EDUCATIONAL RECONSTRUCTION

Hopes of educational reconstruction are again in the air. But the impractical ideas of the idealists will be tempered by the conservatism of the liberal elements. Sir Cyril Norwood, patron saint of the liberal conservatives in education, in The Fortnightly, writing on educational reconstruction, lays down a very definite blueprint of what he would like to see. In this he has adopted much from the plans that have been worked out successfully in Germany,—education "until eighteen plus, then there should come, as in Germany, six months' national service in the armed forces or on the land". He would not have the state take over the boarding schools but would have Public Schools open their doors to pupils from state schools, and have the universal state scholarship scheme apply.

Commenting on Norwood's proposal, the editor of the London Journal of Education, March, 1941, remarks, "He condemns the present system which leaves nine out of every ten children after the age of fourteen not merely without proper training, but without any training at all. We should take the ideal of equal opportunity for all 'as a beacon light towards which we can shape our course', though many generations must elapse and a great improvement in our social conditions occur before such an ideal can be realized."

SHAW'S WARNING

A generation ago in his "Pygmalion", Bernard Shaw gave us a drawing room picture of the degradation of the London bred people and of their possibilities under good training. More recently in his "Geneva", Shaw presents Begonia Brown, an ignorant young woman of sublime confidence who has "done well" at a London school and "passed the examinations". But she is incompetent "to exercise her rights as a citizen" because any school master who would have attempted to "teach political science or citizenship . . . would soon find himself penniless in the streets, if not in the dock". The London school child, Shaw tells us, is "imprisoned for nine years under pretext of teaching it to read, write and speak its own language: a year's work at the outside. And at the end of the nine years the prisoner can do none of these things presentably."

Reviewing these plays and educational ideas in the Times Educational Supplement, September 9, 1939, Michael Stewart bewails Shaw's "contempt for the schools" because of their "repressive and brutalizing discipline", and assures us of "how rapid has been the decline in corporal punishment. . . . Much of the Shavian attack on education can therefore be ignored." Now under the impact of war Mr. Stewart would probably write quite differently. War justifies Shaw and brings demand for social change.

A NEW SOCIAL OUTLOOK FOR ENGLAND

This awakening in the educational world, the fire behind the desire for change, has been breaking forth in labor, communist and religious conventions, and even in the conservative London Times in a remarkable editorial in December, 1940, on war and unemployment, "The Two Scourges".

"The problem of collective security is not so much whether men are prepared to sacrifice their lives for other countries, but whether they are prepared to sacrifice some of their profits. . . . To create the new social order does not, like war, call for sacrifice of life and limb. But it does call for many of those other sacrifices of profits and luxuries, or rights and privileges, which we make unquestioningly in time of war. . . . We must plan for peace as consciously and as deliberately, and with the same common readiness for sacrifice, as we now plan for war. It must not be said that we are more ready to risk our lives than our vested interests."

But the most surprising gesture comes from organized religion, a pillar of conservative and reactionary influence, which has always dominated education in England (cf 23d edition, p 60) and since Henry VIII has been subservient to the government.

In agreement with the Pope's 'five peace points' first issued a year ago, the basic principles of a new world order were set forth in a letter to the London Times, December 21, 1940, by England's religious leaders, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Catholic Archbishop of Westminster, and the Moderator of the Free Church Federal Council. "Every child, regardless of race or class, should have equal opportunities of education, suitable for the development of his peculiar capacities."

"The same point is emphasized by L. P. Jacks in a letter to the Times of December 30", demanding that "modes of peace-building" should be "set on foot . . . while the war is in progress . . . as aids to victory . . . for a new and better world order, and not merely that of victory of one nation over another."

At a mass meeting in mid-May, between bombings, in a garish movie house, the four great church groups met to further the Catholic instigated Sword of the Spirit (S. O. S.) groups. "Fireworks were supplied by the Bishop of Chichester" (Time, May 19, 1941), who said, "The Nazis have a weapon which they wield with tremendous effect. It is the weapon of the idea. They proclaim the New Order. . . . We proclaim no order at all. . . . We stand for a Christian order—a better order than any of us have yet known . . . the only thing which offers any hope or comfort or inspiration to the common man." Time comments, "Britain's Christians now realize . . . that Hitler is fighting the war with an idea, and that unless Christianity can counter with a better idea it is done for. Britain's churches are also saying clearly that, necessary as it is to win the war, it is still more important to win the peace."

THE MALVERN PROPOSALS

At Malvern, where Piers Plowman sat on the hill six hundred years before and surveyed the state of England, and which in recent years has been a place of pilgrimage for Shavians,—from January 7 to 10, 1941, in a church ill-lighted and cold for lack of fuel, there assembled 500 church leaders, including 23 Bishops and 14 deans. The London correspondents and American press gave little publicity to it, but Time's correspondents cabled full reports, and in the January 20 issue gave it three pages, declaring that the church "stole a march on the Government with a program of post-war aims" for the abolition of the profit system.

The Archbishop of York, Canterbury was absent, called for "a new order of society". Dorothy Sayers, the novelist, attacked the church for its trivial views of morality accenting sex, and asserted that "to upset legalized cheating, the Church must tackle the government . . . the politician, the press". Sir Richard Ackland, the fifteenth baronet in his family, declared, "The whole structure of society . . . is, from the Christian point of view, rotten". The conference resolved unanimously, "The war is not to be regarded as an isolated evil. It is one symptom of widespread disease and maladjustment".

Full records of the "Ten Proposals" were published in The Witness, January 23, 1941, and succeeding issues told of the aftermath in England and this country. From the conference held in New Haven has come the organization of 'cells' to carry out the Malvern Ten Proposals.

LIAISON WITH AMERICA

To serve as liaison between the English and the American groups interested in educational reconstruction after the war, Dr. Reinhold Schairer, Lecturer in Comparative Education at the University of London, at the instance of Professor Fred Clarke of the same, came to the United States, President MacCracken tells us in the Vassar Alumnae Magazine for December, 1940. Dr. Schairer, who left Germany in 1933, had been connected with various student services. "In September, the American group met for two days under the chairmanship of Dr. Frank Aydelotte, at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, and organized for cooperation with the British Committee on Educational Reconstruction."

Dr. Schairer "in a recent pamphlet, 'Strategy of Education in the European Crisis' . . . points to the educational reconstruction of Denmark under Grundtvig as the model which all Europe must adopt for reconstruction after the period of destruction now in full sway." Oxford and Cambridge he believes have lost their leadership, and the changing viewpoint of the middle classes in Britain will change the formalism of education, more, he hopes, along the lines of the progressive educators of France who are known as 'Les Compagnons'.

"A LAND FIT FOR HEROES"

Much has been written about the social leveling, the increase in democracy, the breakdown of the caste system as a result of the evacuation and the mingling of the people, sleeping promiscuously in the tubes and bomb shelters. The people of England have been so long conditioned to the support of the ruling classes, to the fine distinctions of their caste system, that these current changes may not go deeper than in "The Admirable Crichton" or be more permanent than in the last war.

"When the war is over, Winston Churchill told the boys at Harrow today, life in England will be a great deal different than it has been for generations. The 'advantages and privileges which hitherto have been enjoyed only by the few shall be far more widely shared'." (Boston Transcript, December 20, 1940) A war has always to be sold to the people. Twenty years ago he and his friends were stimulating enthusiasm for that war by assuring the overworked in the factories and those who were giving their blood in Flanders that when the war was over they would remake England into "a land fit for heroes".

"The freshness of the world-to-be intoxicated us. We were wrought up with ideas inexpressible and vaporous, but to be fought for", one of those heroes, T. E. Lawrence, wrote in the introduction, deleted from the popular edition, of "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom", and later printed in the Atlantic Monthly, March, 1939. "Yet when we achieved and the new world dawned the old men came out again and took from us our victory, and re-made it in the likeness of the former world they knew. Youth could win, but had not learned to keep, and was pitifully weak against age. We stammered that we had worked for a new heaven and a new earth, and they thanked us kindly and made their peace. When we are their age no doubt we shall serve our children so."

If hopes are to be realized there must be a fundamental change in those who control. Window dressing with labor members will not do it. Trained in the Public Schools, "the crew that controls the Empire" (cf 22d edition, p 115), those who Lord Astor said "made Germany feel that she could only get redress of grievances by use of force" (p 106), remains the same today.

"The men who fought to dethrone Napoleon were inspired as we are today with the idea of freedom. But after Waterloo came the reactionary Congress of Vienna; and reactionary institutions, presided over by old men who had been untouched by the spirit of the French Revolution, continued to grind in the old way. Well might an impartial observer like Goethe ask: 'And what has then been attained or won?'" (J. E. Boodin, "The Social Mind", Macmillan, 1939)

"If the aristocratic view of life remains as the relatively permanent tissue of our social organism, any temporary flaming up of the passion for democracy in the stress of national peril will spend itself when the peril is over. That is what makes the great wars of liberation such disappointing affairs in human history. After the struggle, the reaction has set in, which is only another way of saying that the great permanent agencies of education and religion have been fundamentally unchanged and have continued to grind in the old way." (Boodin)

ENGLAND'S CHILDREN

To those liberal and idealistic Englishmen who met at Malvern, the outlook for the children of England must be most distressing. With one-third of the children in our country suffering from malnutrition, it behooves us to look homeward. But it may be well to know what the conservative educational publications of England reflect of confusion and dire distress among the children of England.

CHILDREN IN LABOR

That "eighty per cent of children have to go to work at fourteen" is deplored in the leading editorial, "A Policy for Education" in the Educational Supplement of the London Times, October 19, 1940, which emphatically objects to "raising the school-leaving age to fifteen or of implementing the Day Continuation School part of the Fisher Education Act." It supports the policy of "full time schooling for all between five and fourteen; equality of educational opportunity for every child in school; a regulated entry into industry beginning at the age of fourteen, with adequate provision for cultural and vocational training, in the daytime, for all above the age of fourteen likely to profit from either or both". The editors argue that some "boys and girls of fourteen . . . by reason of early maturity or for psychological reasons would be better granted more freedom for self-direction than full-time schooling allows" and they "would not stand in the way of their unforced and natural development".

A Times editorial, March 8, 1941, was "happy to report the commencement of an important investigation" involving the release of twenty-four boy workers "to take a planned course of physical training . . . for six hours a week over a period of three months". The purpose of this investigation is to discover the "effect of such release and training upon physical well-being and productive capacity". The Board of Education on the other hand has asked that secondary school pupils of fourteen years and upwards be given part-time release from school to help with agricultural tasks, recognizing "the gross inequality of educational opportunity which at present exists". (Times Educational Supplement, March 15, 1941)

EVACUATION AND DELINQUENCY

Havoc was wrought in the schools with the evacuation of hundreds of thousands of children at the outbreak of war in anticipation of the bombing of the cities. With schools closed children were left running wild. But this proved to be a great educational event for the English people. Those in the rural districts learned for the first time how the other half lived, learned of verminous children who refused to drink milk and cried for 'fish and chips'. The newspapers were filled with the problems of householders who knew not how to deal with bedwetting and lice. The popular "Mrs. Miniver", who seldom overtaxes our brains or feelings, remarked that it should not have taken a war to make us realize the need of sending city children to the country, and the value of simpler and more wholesome living.

In the Educational Record, April, 1941, Mary E. Murphy reviews the situation lightly. Those who supported the Public Schools have their incomes so greatly reduced that they will be unable to continue, she tells us, unless a plan is evolved for government support.

"The war has disrupted the usual course of educational events. Evacuation of children from 5 to 16 years of age to the provinces and to all parts of the world has inflicted heavy blows upon education. It has meant complete or partial suspension of teaching in evacuated areas and the attraction of more young people into industry. Payments of three shillings a week for each child under 14, and five shillings for those over this age, are provided by the government."

"Forty children's educational camps have been established in the country, each accommodating 250 children. . . . A child may be maintained in a camp for twenty-six shillings ($5.20) a week, of which the parents are asked to pay six shillings ($1.20) toward the cost." These camps now accommodate ten thousand of the millions who need them. They were planned and built after a study of camp buildings in America, about which the architect in charge made careful inquiry.

MEANINGLESS PALAVER

The English educational periodicals reflect a trivial, dry formalism. The accounts of Prize Day in the schools, reported by local correspondents in the Times Educational Supplement, make you think of Dickens.

A letter from the Chairman of A. J. A. C. to the Times, March 29, 1941, protests "the disastrous gap in the education of the young worker between 14 and 18 and the imperative need for the reenactment of some form of day continuation school. . . . We are told that this is impossible. . . . We are promised a school-leaving age of 15, after the war. We remember the promises of 1918. . . . If the Government really meant what they said" they would take steps.

"Our boys from 18 onwards are conscripted; our girls of 20 and 21 are now to register for national service; but the future builders of Britain, during the difficult and dangerous years between 14 and 18 are to be left to drift as they please and where they will. . . . Is that the answer of democracy to the challenge of totalitarian youth?"

March 15 we read, "The President of the Board of Education has for some months now been stating his intention of making operative, as soon as possible after the war, the day continuation clauses of the Fisher Act", passed after World War I, which has not been operative during this war. The problem, the editor moralizes, "is how to satisfy the desire, innate in all of us, to live a full and ample life. . . . We believe that the investigation begun last week by the Board of Education, being a first one, has rightly been limited to training of the body."

CHILDREN IN THE MINES

"The proper placing of boys and girls" is the concern of the editor of the Times Educational Supplement, March 15, 1941, in an article on "Recruits for the Mining Industry". It is provided that at each colliery there shall be a training center for boys between fifteen and sixteen. Those who have seen these lads, pale, wan, faces smeared with coaldust and sweat, returning from the bowels of the earth, must reflect on the naive hypocrisy with which the Times considers the old truth that Britain is living on her youth. The article recalls the "dangers of encouraging human progress without also providing the means to accommodate it". Nothing is said about the dangers of mining.

In the Times Educational Supplement for March 29, 1941, one gets the impression that the boards of education and city councils are devising ways and means of getting more work out of children and cutting down on their food. The Durham Board of Education recommends that children between the ages of 12 and 16 be employed at fourpence an hour to plant and harvest the potato crop. The Liverpool city council is leasing its schools to Roman Catholic managers at 4 and 3 pounds a week. At York the juvenile employment report shows 76% of the vacancies for boys and 84% for girls are filled, as compared with 44% and 57% the previous year.

CHILD LIFE IN THE SLUMS

A picture of child life in the fairest part of England, the most prosperous of its ports, Southampton, is given by Nan Goodall, S. P. C. K., in "Children of Dockland", which the Times Educational Supplement, March 29, 1941, calls a "disgrace to any civilization" that "will shock people".

"Docks work is always irregular." At 14 shillings a day wages rarely come to more than 30 shillings a week. "Many have to exist in dirty, tumbledown, condemned houses. . . . 40 per cent of Southampton's population is undernourished." Children "suffer from skin trouble and extreme dirt. . . . There is apparently colossal ignorance of sanitation."

Parliament decided, after recent discussion, to perpetuate "the system of 'minders' for young children of women engaged in war industries". The Minister of Health claimed "day nurseries are difficult to site, to start, and to run", and the people prefer "minders". The Times Educational Supplement, March 29, 1941, editorially considers this as "retrograde", and regrets the "criminal speciousness of this appeal", reminding that it was once traditional to "force small boys up chimneys to clean them, to farm unwanted babies out to so-called foster mothers who not infrequently methodically murdered them by neglect and malnutrition". In reply, "the Government proposes to register the 'minders' after they have been interviewed by public health visitors". Many children may be ruined for life by these old hags in the slums who get a few pennies for acting as "minders".

DIET

The debates in the House of Commons are astounding, even after reading our Congressional Record. The most venerated legislative body extant, made up for the most part of directors of great industry and men of wealth, and with a tremendously centralized bureaucracy to direct activities in foreign if not domestic affairs, spends hours debating details that seem absurd but which on reflection one may see are fundamental to the English social system. March 20 the Commons considered the experiments in the "physical training of apprentices during their working hours and the effect of this upon their output", made by Mr. David Adams of Durham, the center of Lord Londonderry's great coal mining properties.

Mr. Ramsbotham, in reply to the possibility of providing for working children the Oslo breakfast which consists of wholemeal bread, butter, milk, cheese, and either fresh fruit or salad, explained that "fresh fruit is scarce and dear, butter somewhat severely rationed, and imported cheese only intermittently obtainable", but there were "virtues in the potato" and the hearts of cabbages, eaten raw, have high vitamin value. "And there are carrots. . . . Surely there is plenty of opportunity for experiment?" (Times Educational Supplement, March 29, 1941)

EDUCATION IN FOOD HABITS

These poor little island bred people have been allowed to fester in their slums, conditioned to subservience, loyalty, and to uphold the caste system. Once they had only black bread.

Now they demand their white bleached flour, evidence of a rise in the world, for only peasants eat black bread. Ignorant and prejudiced, their food education neglected, the government lacks the resourcefulness to teach them the value of whole wheat in this time of starvation. It now dopes the bleached, chlorinated flour with calcium and Vitamin B to replace the vital elements they have been conditioned to reject.

But nothing is more difficult to change than the food habits of a people. Their prejudices and tabus reign supreme. Corn, Indian maize from North America, reached central Africa before the explorers. It is a popular article of food in southwestern Europe, and in Naples they sell roasting ears on the streets. But the English and Germans both scorn corn as we Americans know it, as only fit for hogs and chickens. Captain Jinks of the horse marines fed his horse on corn and beans, but the corn was the biblical corn, any kind of grain, but not maize. A Munich hotel proprietor told me the bread was adulterated with "mice", it sounded like, which horrified me. That is the German pronunciation of "maize".

England today is portrayed in Lohrke's "The Long Watch in England" (Holt, 1940). Geoffrey Bruun, reviewing it in the N. Y. Herald Tribune, tells us, "Health or rather the lack of health, moral and physical, is the subject which provokes the most eloquent outbursts in this eloquent book. All the signs of decay which abound in rural England exact a toll in weakened stamina—the crumbling and unsanitary houses, the inadequate diet." Depressing as is this picture, it's nothing to what Bruun saw in a foot trip across the Midlands last summer, he says. "No visitor who has contemplated the flocks of weedy youths in the dismal village pubs can soon forget their faces, the faces of amiable and aimless lads, with rotting teeth and abstracted, empty stare",—unfit for cannon fodder.

VITAMINS WILL WIN

In America during the last war the government promoted slogan was "Food will win the war". Now it is "Vitamins will win". In "Total Defense and Public Health", Harper's, March, 1941, James Rorty tells us that with milk, eggs, liver, fruit, green vegetables, and whole wheat, an army can avoid malnutrition.

But vitamins are a double edged weapon. The trick is to see that the other armies and their supporting populace are deprived. The easy win anticipated through the blockade is slow in coming. But we still hope that by supplying our fighting men and England's with vitamins we may give them the vim and vigor that vitamins bring, that will give them the courage and push to win. Those who don't fight or work, deprived of vitamins, will wilt like laboratory rats. Twenty-two millions in Europe, Mr. Hoover tells us, are now starving. And the latest report suppressed was that the number of children who had died in France this past winter was three times the number the previous winter.

Complete control of vitamins may yet enable any small number to reduce the rest of the population of the world to impotence. There will be no need of explosives and tanks and airplanes. Merchants of death and their explosives may become obsolete.

GROWING CANNON FODDER

In the coming "garrison state" that Lasswell envisions (American Journal of Sociology, January, 1941), in the totalitarian world of the dictator, in a world where youth are conscripted for work or fighting, for growing or killing, we will naturally come to look more definitely on each generation as a human crop to be well grown for the purpose. From the standpoint of the centralized, authoritarian government, the country will be the seedbed from which the next crop of cannon fodder is to be produced. Under such a social set-up, centralized control is likely to produce a better quality of cannon fodder than local and democratic neglect.

Starting with the handicap of widespread malnutrition as the result of the blockade, the Germans have been obliged to make the most of their human resources in the best possible development of the young. Mussolini in de-wopping the wops has improved the quality of the cannon fodder in spite of a short food supply and lack of natural resources. But France, and more particularly England, with a wealth of food and the resources of the world at their command, have neglected the physical welfare of the growing generation.

Julian Huxley has pointed out that there are two types of health in human affairs, the individual and the social. The individual must be conscious of being well-grown, well-developed and have that "energy that makes men glad to be alive. It also means strong and vigorous minds that enjoy mental activity as the body does physical exercise." (cf Coil, Journal of Heredity, March, 1941) That can only be in a social organization which permits and promotes it, which provides security, work and opportunity for individual development and a feeling of participation. The school and the college, those limited societies for adolescents, which supply less than this are not promoting individual health or social health.

WHAT WILL WIN FOR US

Our government is committed to an "all out" effort in aggressive warfare, no longer limited to home defense. Those who are carrying the brunt of the war against opposition may lack opportunity to consider fundamentals, to estimate reserves. Our educators, men of brains and leisure within the cloisters of our universities and in our educational administrative offices, who are supposed to have large command of essential facts, who in part at least have assumed responsibility for the development of this generation, should undertake this job.

England, ruing the poor quality of its cannon fodder, is now regretting the malnutrition of the young since the last war, their early employment in factories and mines, and the country's inadequate caste ridden schooling.

WHAT'S THE STORY IN AMERICA?

The director of the National Economic and Social Planning Association, E. J. Coil, in the Journal of Heredity for March, 1941, tells us that "a minority of families produce the majority of children, and that the number of children per family increases as the income level declines. Roughly one-half of the people of the next generation will be produced by one-quarter of this generation." The science of nutrition is so advanced that we now "know what constitutes an adequate diet . . . how tall a group of boys and girls ought to be, and how much they should weigh at any given age."

"In the World War draft of 1917-18, 52 per cent of the persons called had one or more recorded physical defects, and 31 per cent were classified, on physical grounds, as not available for general military service. . . . One generation later, that is today, the rejections at the local boards are about the same as in the last war. . . . From the available reports it seems that our man-power has not improved physically since the days of 1917-18."

"Although at the end of the last war we knew that 52 per cent of our drafted men had physical defects, we were content to let a new generation grow without any marked improvement. We were not prepared and determined to make that new generation a better one." Germany was.

OUR HEALTH SERVICE

We have built a public health service now under the competent direction of Thomas Parran, who has a staff of 10,000 paid employees to help look after the health of these 130 millions.

Parran tells us that while the health of the American people is better than ever in the past, conscription has brought out defects and neglects, due to which we lose a billion working days a year through the ill health of $4\frac{1}{2}$ million citizens, at a cost of 10 billion dollars through preventable sickness. Of the 100,000 who die of pneumonia, and the 70,000 who still die of tuberculosis, half could be saved. Death in childbirth could be cut two-thirds. Infant mortality could be halved. (The American Observer, April 28, 1941) An index of the civilization of a state or a people might be based on the unnecessary deaths permitted.

Dr. Parran, addressing the New England Health Institute in Boston, April 1, 1941, laid the blame on medical and public health professions for failing to teach the individual how "closely bound up with his own personal welfare are the measures that promote community and national health. . . . We are apt to think of the defense in terms of numbers of men and amounts of material . . . hardly aware of the fact that without a sound and healthy man-power in the armed services, the material we produce is useless; that without healthy workers in our vastly expanded industries, the material will be produced too slowly and cost too much. Most of all, without healthy communities to sustain the life of the nation, neither the armed forces nor war industries can hit the top of their stride, and morale will break down." Discussing air raid shelters in London, whence he had recently returned, he said, "I was astonished to find that in the worst of them sanitation was much better than among our civilian families in a dozen booming defense areas I could mention".

WHAT THE DRAFT BROUGHT OUT

Dr. Parran "termed it 'a national disgrace' that from 30 to 40 per cent of men otherwise available for military service were being deferred because of physical defects". (Boston Herald, April 2, 1941)

The Detroit Free Press analyzed these deficiencies as due to defective teeth 32%, eyes 17.5%, heart 8.3%, hearing 5%, hernia 3.3%, mental 6.6%, tuberculosis 2.5%, venereal disease .8%, miscellaneous 19%, and added, "Ten years of depression, lack of proper food, diet and lack of financial means for proper medical and dental attention created the unfitness of these men". The situation varies in different states. In Michigan 50% were rejected. In Oklahoma venereal rejections were as high as 7.6% (perhaps due to the susceptible native American Indians), nine times that of Michigan, and its mental deficiency rate almost twice as great.

If we were intelligent enough to act on these disclosures, we would inaugurate a national health program, declares Harriett Elliott of the National Defense Commission, "to make America strong by making Americans stronger".

Yale's distinguished Dr. C. E. A. Winslow in McCall's Magazine estimates that in the first year a quarter of a million young Americans will have been rejected,—husbands, farmers, laborers, businessmen, branded as defective. "We have the power to plan and the stimulus of crisis which should act as a curb on selfish vested interests. We have at Washington a Federal Coordinator of all health, medical, welfare, nutrition, recreation and other related fields of activity affecting the national defense. If we so desire, the defects in draft procedure can be perfected and this procedure can be made the basis for a national health program which will maintain the strength of our nation long after the present emergency has been forgotten."

IS OUR HEALTH INSTRUCTION TRIVIAL?

We have developed a superior breed of young athletes in this country, especially in sunny California. Physical training, for the elect in our high schools and colleges, is in the hands of professionals of high standards. But though football coaches get salaries comparable to the college president's, the physical director is regarded by most educators as below with the janitor.

Much of the health education in our schools and as reflected in the educational journals is trivial. It has run to all kinds of foibles and negatives, the evils of alcohol and tobacco, etc. Boston high schools maintain a "corps of cadets" for the supposed value of the physical training. Annually they parade in flimsy khaki uniforms which suggest profiteering somewhere. Hollow chested, stoop shouldered, depressed, the boys parade through the street,—no snap, no vim, no vigor, no pride,—compulsion is apparent.

"Adequate health instruction . . . is undeveloped in the great majority of high schools and is required of only a small minority of the total of American college students", declared Maurice A. Bigelow, famed biologist and social hygienist of Columbia, in a recent article in the Journal of Social Hygiene.

THE CHILDREN OF AMERICA

One third or more of the people of our country, according to our president, are "ill fed". In our urban and rural slums, a third of the children are suffering from malnutrition. Pellagra, still prevalent among our southern sharecroppers, is wholly due to lack of proper food.

"The White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, estimating deficiencies on the total basis of all under 20 years of age, figured that there were in the nation 6,000,000 children improperly nourished, 1,000,000 have damaged hearts and another similar number have defective speech, with 3,000,000 having impaired hearing. A half million are dependent, 200,000 delinquent, 300,000 are crippled, and another 1,000,000 are variously handicapped." (Howard W. Odum, "American Social Problems", p. 212)

Physiologists, sociologists, idealists and a host of novelists and playwrights have presented moving pictures of the situation. MacWilliams, in "Factories in the Field", has substantiated Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath". If we could hear the children crying themselves to sleep, hungry, we might be more Christian, we might at least see that we develop better manpower. But we remain callous to this until we have to draw upon youth for cannon fodder, and then find that they are not the quality that can be conditioned and hardened so that we may use their energies in defense and perpetuation of the system that has produced them.

PRESERVING THE DEFECTIVES

"This world is depicted with ironical overtones" by Caroline Slade in "Job's House" (Vanguard Press, 1941) which "makes 'Tobacco Road' seem a country club." Thus in the Saturday Review, April 12, 1941, writes James T. Farrell who in his novels has revealed the plight of youth. "When these people become consumptive owing to the bad conditions in which they must live, the state provides for them at a fine hospital. When these poor people give birth to imbeciles, the imbeciles are given much better attention than are the normal children of the same parents. When these people die, the state will bury them. But while they live, all that they can receive is a miserable pittance that keeps them alive in misery, and in an ugliness that is man-made and that all the sermons, literary and otherwise, will never cure."

The mental incompetent "if he is housed in a state institution is spared the horror of insecurity, breadlines, and starvation pay which are reserved exclusively for the more intelligent of our citizens as a bonus for their brightness. The certified idiot is well housed and well fed by a government which shows far less concern for a sharecropper with the brain of an Einstein. Another amazing paradox is the fact that while humane legislators appropriate generous funds for the care of the unfit, the same legislators unfailingly balk at generous funds for a far-flung public health program which eventually would reduce enormously the proportion of unfit." So in The Progressive, April 19, 1941, writes Ernest L. Meyer, former columnist of the New York Post who lost his job because he refused to confine his writing to 'birds' and 'flowers'.

IS THIS CHRISTIAN?

Why do we give the defectives, the socially useless, better care? Like almsgiving it salves our consciences, and we think it is Christian. Many tribes that take the old people out in the bush and let them die, or kill at birth the children less desirable according to their standards, have as their worthy purpose and motive the building of a brighter future for their tribe. Preserving the defectives can have no such purpose. This humanitarian doctrine of the sacredness of life isn't essentially Christian. Christians forget it when their hatreds are aroused and they go to war, or when their tabus are violated and they execute him they call a criminal. Christ was legally executed.

In India there are people who, long before we wore other than the skins of beasts, actually believed in the sacredness of life. For a thousand years no devout Jain has ridden a camel without wearing gauze over mouth or nostril lest he breathe in a gnat and destroy its life. His religion requires that walking along a path he sweep before him lest he step on a worm or an ant. All through India men for their own soul comfort, to preserve life, not mend it, establish hospitals for sick and injured cows and bulls where, emaciated and starving, they drag their bones around. Millions of animals and humans in India, crippled or diseased, are thus kept alive. For it is tabu to take life, and euthanasia remains a crime.

This sentimental humanitarianism is something that came to us out of the East. It isn't Christian. It isn't sensible. But a priesthood, political or religious, could hardly thrive on a healthy vigorous people. Pain, degradation, and terror,—of foreign devils, of submarines, of hell,—is the stock in trade of those who would compel us to their ways.

ARE WE DEGENERATE?

Hooton of Harvard has been hooting at us for years about what we are doing to preserve the defective and promote physical degeneracy in the race. To get the attention of his callous colleagues he has seized the headlines by playing the clown, has jibed at democracy as "making the world safe for morons" and charged that mankind "preserves the worst of his kind" and "destroys the best". He has shaken the pillars with such statements as "Society faces the immediate prospect of domination by quick-breeding dullards". (cf 1937-38 edition of this Handbook, pp. 148-9, 161-2)

"Why Men Behave Like Apes" (Princeton, 1940) is his latest, justified perhaps by his associates on the Harvard faculty, now hysterically scared by Roosevelt's fireside stories and President Conant's insistence that they go "all out" in this "religious" war, all of which meets with the approval of Harvard's patron saint, Thomas Lamont. In his latest book Professor Hooton elaborates his Vanuxem lectures at Princeton on "Body and Behavior" (cf last edition of this Handbook, pp. 39, 119). In the introduction he tells us, "Modern warfare has conspired with humanitarianism to ruin man and has been even more evilly efficacious in so doing. The first World War killed off the greater part of the best male breeding stock in Europe and left those who survived shell-shocked or otherwise impaired mentally and physically."

THE PSYCHIATRICS

That we have so high a percentage of psychiatrics is due largely to frustration, dissatisfied lives, a theme that has been expounded in these Handbooks in the past. Under the title "Too Mad to Fight," Walter Davenport in Collier's, May 10, 1941, tells us that "justly renowned neurologists, psychiatrists and similarly minded scientists" summoned by the President to keep our new army free of "the psychopath, the feeble-minded and the frankly insane", "were unanimous in that whereas two per cent of the young Americans up for induction into military service were being rejected as mentally unfit, the percentage should be nearer fifteen".

The draft boards were passing the men so rapidly that the psychopaths could not be eliminated. During the training of the A.E.F. in 1917-18, after spending money on them, 70,000 men were discharged as incapable, 50% for neuropsychiatric causes. Of the disabled veterans of the A.E.F. three-fifths are mental cases, psychiatrics who broke under the shock of the war. The care of them has cost a billion dollars since 1926. Of those totally disabled drawing pensions, 40% are mental cases. "And the bill next time is going to be a lot higher unless the Army finds some way to eliminate the thousands of mentally unfit that are certain to crack up."

INHERITANCE OF MENTAL DEFECT

Eugenists and biologists are somewhat divided on the subject of heritance of mental defects. Too often concomitant factors are covered up or omitted from consideration. The conditions under which men live determine their mentality,—how far will depend upon the individual and his genes. Some individuals will be more resistant to an adverse environment, some less responsive to a favorable and stimulating environment.

Can we by eugenic practice eliminate the producers of the unfit? Doubt is cast upon the possibility of so doing at present by Dr. L. S. Penrose, Ontario Hospital, Canada. Reporting on his study of "Inheritance of Mental Defect" in Scientific

Monthly, April, 1941, in conclusion he speculates "upon the possible value and limitations of eugenic proposals for eliminating mental defect by selective sterilization. Since the severe cases are mostly infertile the eugenic attack must be made on potential parents of imbeciles and idiots. This will involve the sterilization of the carriers of defects, who will themselves be healthy in nearly every instance. At present these normal carriers, though they are known to be much more frequent in the general population than are imbeciles and idiots, can not be identified with certainty until they are already the parents of at least one abnormal child. The attempt to eliminate recessive or sporadic conditions from the population by eugenic sterilization will be a thankless task to say the least. Natural selection has failed to do this in thousands of years."

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL HEALTH

But what about moral health and spiritual health, we are asked? President Bowman of Johns Hopkins, in an address on "Our Better Ordering" (Science, Feb. 28, 1941), a phrase taken from the Mayflower compact, reminds us that "a former Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States recently stated that the times called for a return to 'morality', defined as that which men and women through long discussion, observation and agreement about experience of social living have found to be good and have built into community character. This reads like a gloss on John Morley's conclusion ('On Compromise', 21-22), 'Moral principles, when they are true, are at bottom only registered generalisations from experience'. Vital to the general good is a sense of morality, felt, inculcated and built into a democratic society. It is fatuous, continues Morley, to believe that 'a government may depress the energy, the self-reliance, the public spirit of its citizens, and yet be able to count on these qualities whenever the government itself may have broken down'."

"In a world which regards war as desirable and its frequent occurrence as inevitable, the more aggressive and insensitive types have the best chances of ultimate survival. They are able to devote themselves to the congenial tasks of perfecting the weapons of destruction, while their more imaginative and gentler neighbors engage in the suicidal occupation of adding to the amenities and fullness of life. But though, unhappily, all this must be conceded, it is not less true that the creation of a world in which love and virtue have a greater survival value than hatred and brutality is still within our power." (quoted in Scientific Monthly, April, 1941, from "Eugenics and War", The Eugenics Review, London)

WHAT CREDIT TO EDUCATION?

In the use of our resources and opportunities, since the last war, to produce a generation in better health and of sounder physique, there is little cause for elation. Few who are familiar with the situation would deny that with lesser resources the Czechs, the Germans, even the Italians, have perhaps done better in developing good material for a fighting force, an improved quality of cannon fodder.

ANOTHER LOST GENERATION

Nor have we brought along the religious development of youth, if we may rely on the difficulty in arousing them to this 'war for religion' as President Conant testified it to be before a Senate hearing, February 10, 1941. Their moral education is not satisfactory in the view of MacLeish, our high priest of literature, who presides over the Congressional Library and weeps over "the irresponsibles". It is to the intellectual development of the generation, then, that we must look for results from the 40 or 50 billions we have spent on education since the last war.

There was need for such, for the psychological tests instituted by Yerkes and others showed at that time that one in ten was illiterate and that the average draftee had an intellectual age of twelve. Though we have spent on education as high as $3,000,000,000 a year, or 3 to 4% of the total national income, that has allowed only $6 a year for the Negro child in Mississippi, $130 for the white in the wealthier northern cities.

Taking "a realistic view of education" in the 1937 edition of this Handbook, from the parent's, the historian's, the anthropologist's viewpoints, we found that what had survived in education was largely anachronistic, that our acquisitive culture resulted in distortion of history and sterility of scholarship, that the schools taught what had been forced upon them in the past by earnest men which had not yet been eliminated as archaic. Much of this was propaganda of power groups.

The President's Advisory Committee on Education in 1938 reported that "more than 8,000,000 children in this country, between the ages of seven and thirteen . . . were not attending school; that 2,500,000 suffered under mental, physical and other handicaps; that 3,000,000 of the American people were sheer illiterates and hosts of others were near illiterates; that 36,000,000 people in the United States had not finished the elementary school; and that 45,000,000 American people . . . did not have access to free public libraries."

AUDITS

An enormous amount of money has been appropriated by the great foundations to investigate the result of our annual expenditure on education. Some educational group every little while gets a few hundred thousand for some such run around. Usually they loyally justify the work of those who didn't get the money.

The New York State Regents' Inquiry was carried on by a commission which included seven college presidents, four deans of graduate schools, two state commissioners of education, and a score of specialists. They reported the schools superior, well equipped, the curriculum behind the times, poorly adapted to the needs, civic problems ignored, health looked upon merely as a subject to be studied, but the product unsatisfactory. To correct the situation they recommended two more years of high school,—more of the same thing that they had condemned. (cf Luther Gulick, Atlantic, April, 1939)

Proposals for improvement or changes in the curriculum that don't make any essential modification have been the fad for two decades. "Nearly fifty thousand 'curricula'" are on file in one institution. "Curriculum construction and reconstruction", "curriculum laboratories", "curriculum journals", "curriculum societies and associations", hundreds of monographs, thousands of papers are evidence of discontented floundering. (cf Edgar W. Knight, School and Society, November 23, 1940)

The Committee on Implementation of Studies in Secondary Education, in January, 1940, suggested that the American Youth Commission should organize a brief report on the needed changes in the curriculum. Previous recommendations had "had little effect upon the schools" because of disagreement over details. The Commission appointed a committee with a preponderance of Teachers College professors. The members of such committees constitute a sort of perpetually rotating interlocking directorship whose cogs in turn mesh with those of the great educational, philanthropic, and financial foundations.

The report, brief, more concrete and definite than usual, discovers that there are many pupils in high schools for whom the courses are not appropriate, that many have reading abilities of the fourth grade level. They need practice in reading and interpretation, in the use of reference books, and in the development of a critical attitude toward what they read. Teaching today is largely "devoted to policing learners and making sure one day that they have read and analyzed minutely the assignments given them the day before" (Journal of N.E.A., November, 1940). Interest, curiosity, taste, and responsibility are not developed. The adolescent is not given incentives and does not acquire habits of work. The subject of social studies, personal problems, are as in most reports treated with hesitancy and timidity. Diagnoses and recommendations as usual lack vitality.

THE "INNATE GROWTH FACTOR"

The Pennsylvania study of colleges about which so much has been written, still affords material for additional study. Charles A. Drake, director of the Bureau of Educational Research, West Virginia University, in an article, "The Higher Education: Controlled or Uncontrolled", Scientific Monthly, April, 1941, finds that the disturbing facts revealed by the Pennsylvania Study are confirmed by his own repeated experiments on hundreds of students over a period of years. He asks, "Are teachers taking credit—and blame—for phenomena over which they have little or no control?"

In the Pennsylvania Study of the Carnegie Foundation, 1938, "The Student and His Knowledge", Bulletin Number Twenty-Nine, he says, "it is reported that students showed measured gains as great or greater in some subject-matters not part of their curricula as they showed in the subject-matters upon which they were ostensibly concentrating". That is, some who never took the course and had no teaching in it, knew more than those who took courses, were taught and studied the subject.

From his "figures, the measured gains were significantly related neither to grades as awarded nor to intelligence as measured. . . . We have always awarded grades with the tacit assumption that they reflected achievement, attainment, growth, mastery or gain—partially if not wholly. It is apparent that this assumption is quite unjustified in the situation studied. . . .

"It is a fair inference that higher intelligence implies an associated ability to make greater subject-matter gains" but the results are sometimes to the contrary. Some other than the conventional explanation must be found.

"We may suspect that these measured gains reflect some underlying or innate growth factor" or that "the underlying function may take the form of known growth curves" which "reach their maxima at different ages for different individuals, marking the points at which such growth stops. . . .

"If measured gains are due to some innate growth factor, a factor apparently not significantly related either to scholarship or to intelligence as these are usually measured, the individuals and the institutions they attend are not to be praised or blamed for such gains. Neither can individual instructors be compared with each other in teaching efficiency on the basis of the gains shown by their students."

SELECTING AND GRADING

All this merely emphasizes how little we know and how much there is to know. In our ignorance we charlatan educators claim as due to us and to our efforts much of which we complacently lack knowledge and over which we impotently have no control.

Well, this reduces the whole problem of selecting students for college courses to quite another basis. "Perhaps we are wasting both time and money in misguided attempts at instruction. Perhaps we are dispensing both praise and blame where they are undeserved. Perhaps we are dealing with a fact of human nature which we can only control through human adaptation, as we now control the weather." (Drake)

It makes the present college admission and marking practices which are constantly being modified by the jittery faculty members who establish them as absurd from any rational point of view as does the ritual of the Arunta aborigines of central Australia to the other tribe over the mountain range.

EDUCATION AND SCHOOLING

No true estimate of the value of what we educators actually accomplish can come from educators. Don't believe what the lawyers tell you about their value to the body politic. They serve their masters. Don't accept the estimate of the medical craft at any past time as to their value, the necessity for bleeding, purging, et cetera. Least of all accept at par the bumptious claims of the school master. 'Character building', 'building men', 'forming womanhood', 'establishing ethical ideals', 'moral responsibility',—such are some of their teaching aims.

William James pointed out that no priesthood ever originates its own reform. Reshaping comes from outside pressure. Pressure from within tends to blow up to a perfect sphere.

In this Handbook in 1933 (p 74) we wrote on "The Crimes of Teachers", pointing out that the greatest crime was the repression, stultification and frustration of children. "Our teachers still maximate their own ego rather than the child's. The teacher gets the kick and the thrill out of discovering rather than letting the pupil get the thrill out of discovering for himself. It is more fun to tell than to watch the other fellow exploring. But unless we allow our children to derive satisfaction from things that are worth while they will find satisfaction in things of another kind."

In "The New Immoralities" we wrote on "Immoral School Teachings" under such titles as "Making and Breaking Rules", "Practice Does Not Make Perfect", "Superficiality an Academic Bogey", "You Cannot Be Accurate", "Thoroughness an Academic Fetish". It's immoral to persistently frustrate a child, to make him a psychopath. But we still do it.

INDIVIDUAL IMMUNITY

One might conclude that some individuals are immune to some kinds of knowledge and especially at particular times, just as we well know that some individuals are immune to infection and that an antitoxin or a vaccine does not always "take". Immunity has to do with the physiological condition, the chemical or physical state of some cells of some organ.

In anything that is alive, where there is constant molecular, intermolecular, atomic, interatomic activity and changing relations between complicated structures, there is individuality. What will affect one at a particular time may not necessarily affect another the same way or the same individual at another time.

The neuro-histologist is familiar with the way in which some nerve cells or neurons selectively absorb the Golgi or the methylene blue stain and so stand out from among their fellows that are immune, just as the bright student in a class 'absorbs' an explanation of a bit of knowledge which is meaningless to others. In the case of the single neuron the chemical reaction is due to the physiological state of that cell at the time. A somewhat similar explanation may apply to the student who absorbs what the others do not get. Even blotting paper if greasy won't take up ink.

GENIUS NO MYSTERY

There is no need to lie down before this problem and say it's as mysterious as genius, which we know enough about today to have dispelled the mystery. Since Lange-Eichbaum's marvelous investigation of "The Problem of Genius" (reviewed in this Handbook in 1932, pp. 81-2), we see that genius, which to the Greeks was linked with divinity and to the modern with insanity, is not, as commonly supposed, "a mysterious form of hereditary equipment provided once for all at birth", but that "the individual is only the bearer, the sustainer of genius. . . . He is usually talented but not necessarily so, and becomes famous through a fortunate concatenation of circumstances . . . some one who 'has put it across', nothing more".

And as "full many" a genius is "born to blush unseen", so may one once recognized be forgotten, without further "fortunate concatenation of circumstances". Was Shakespeare a genius? To his contemporaries he was merely successful. For the following hundred years and more he was almost unknown. Then translated by Germany's great dramatists, Wieland, Schiller, Goethe, his fame rose abruptly, even in England.

WHAT IS EDUCATION FOR?

The air is full of objectives when educators meet, but few bombs burst in air, most fall as duds. Educational journals are full of pages of trite, rhetorical repetition about objectives, evidencing the fuzzy minded, confused thinking of boards and commissions which carry exalted names. Sounding through these abstractions, one must conclude that American educators lack clearly defined objectives.

AIMS AND OBJECTIVES

Educators speak of objectives, rarely attainments; school-masters of aims, seldom of hits. In a recent publication of the U. S. Office of Education, "Educational Objectives in Vocational Agriculture" I read the "aim of vocational education in agriculture" is to train "for proficiency in farming". The "major objectives of v. e. in a. are the objectives that must be attained to secure proficiency". From this it would seem that an objective was a portion of an aim which gives one the same feeling a snake had when he tried to swallow his tail.

Edgar W. Knight, educational satirist of the University of North Carolina, tells us (School and Society, Nov. 23, 1940) "More than fifteen hundred social objectives of English . . . and more than eight hundred generalized aims of the social studies have been listed in courses of study in the schools of this country. . . . The objectives of a junior-high-school course were so numerous as to require many pages merely for their listing." "The number of nostrums" provoke endless discussion. But "the general condition" of the patient "has not improved".

Most of these objectives set up are artificial, meaningless, a screen to hide the emptiness of what is behind. They arouse no enthusiasm on the part of the teacher or the pupil and so it is easy to become intent on mere technique or form. The trained musician who lacks depth of emotional reaction becomes interested in the technical training of his superficial nerves and peripheral muscles. Aldous Huxley remarks, "How few great stylists have ever said any of the right things. That's one of the troubles about education in the humanities. The best that has been thought and said. Very nice. But best in which way? Alas, only in form." ("After Many A Summer")

EDUCATORS CANT

The associations that gather during vacation periods afford head masters and school superintendents and their wives social opportunity. It is the fashion to unburden oneself of a laboriously prepared speech or paper, rhetorical abstractions which sound well and avoid the danger spots. Staunch old Romans uphold the mores in indignant periods. Idealists hold forth on what they imagine should be, without any relation to what is or may soon be realized.

Progressives report on things they have dreamed and hope to put in practice. The philosophy of educators tends to be progressive, but the relation to their practices or procedure is remote, for while they find it easy to idealize in talk or words, in the doing they fall into the rut and follow the traditional, Eells found as a result of investigation by questionnaire (cf 22d ed., p. 192, 23d, pp. 137, 152).

The idealism that is preached is mostly words. We are beginning to understand that underlying and controlling is the custom of the tribe, the social process. That's the way of the profession. That's the way it was in 1853 when the Rev. James Walker, president of Harvard, discovered that "Next to religion there is no subject on which there is so much cant as education".

After listening to or reading leading educators, one feels a bit like the State Department attache who, as Knight reminds, reporting to waiting newspapermen the results of a conference between Secretary John Hay and Chinese minister Wu Ting Fang, added, "Mr. Hay was a bit hazy and Dr. Wu was a trifle woozy".

CONFUSION IN HIGH PLACES

For years President Hutchins has been making the welkin ring with his clamor about "The Confusion in Higher Education". All this we dilated on in the 1937 edition of this Handbook (pp. 41 ff.). Prof. Knight, who keeps track of presidential sayings, and whose golden treasury of their gems of wisdom was reviewed in the last edition of this Handbook, pp. 2-11, in School and Society, November 23, 1940, finds this situation continuing. "There is confusion of aims in higher education, running all the way from the 'intellectualism' of President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, to the 'holoism' of President W. H. Cowley, of Hamilton College."

Classifying the higher educators, too, may be confusing. Occasionally one of them rebels. Charles H. Judd says (Educational Record, July, 1939), "If anybody classifies me as a neo-formalist", I will call him a "pre-Adamite. . . . One of my biological friends characterized that early pre-Adamitic period by saying that everybody was educated in the higher branches." His biological friend evidently had a college education. Which reminds that Charlie McCarthy remarked "a college education is a great thing and every college man ought to have one".

This confusion, worse confounded, has been the subject of philosophic inquiry by a mathematician and astronomer, Donald Faulkner, who in the Educational Record, April, 1941, holds forth on "Philosophic Bases of Confusion in Higher Education". He proceeds to outline nine characteristic 'philosophies' of education "which are generalizations from theories" and to discuss the conflict and confusion that arise from the attempt to apply two or more simultaneously.

"The appearance of efficiency and purpose presented by the modern American university does not survive long acquaintance or close analysis. Cross purposes and conflicting practices betray the lack of any general agreement on the aims of university education, on the best methods of attaining these goals, or—for that matter—on the nature of the educational process."

Ingenious as may be this classification of theories to justify ends, it ignores the realistic fact that the dominant group determines the purpose and the conflict of groups or forces produces the consequent confusion. But then, in academic circles pure intellect is supposed to prevail. Acts are supposed to come out of theories and philosophies. It is not recognized that the latter are the excuses or screens behind which powerful personalities act.

The student who has adopted his future alma mater, assured that he will be treated as an individual, finds the professors, Faulkner says, "preach democratic theories in a matrix of practices often as oligarchic or dictatorial as the Spartan or Nazi states".

'DEFENSE' OBJECTIVES

Of late all the slogans and catch words like 'integration' have been drowned out in the call for 'defense' and 'democracy'. 'Defense' is becoming an important function of the schools and colleges. Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker at Atlantic City in February, 1941, prophesied that by July, 1941, educational institutions would have trained "one million defense workers in the skilled and semi-skilled occupations, in addition to those who are regularly trained in vocational schools and classes". Policies must change with the times. In their "Plans for 1940" the Educational Policies Commission announced, "Those who are commissioned by society in the service of education should be the last to capitulate to the forces of hatred, greed, and fear. . . . Those who are to fulfill that mission [of 'rebuilding a world order'] can approach their task best if their hands are unstained by blood, their spirits uncorroded by hatred, and their minds uncrippled by months or years of wartime regimentation."

In 1941 hands don't have to be quite so clean, spirits not quite so uncorroded. Teachers should, and most of them do, remember that they are servants of the community, paid from taxes, and have a definite obligation to the government that collects the taxes and supports them. In a state university they don't have much chance to forget. There is the legislative lobby to keep one's eye on. In the great and ancient universities there is the "invisible government", as Elihu Root termed it, to which they have to be even more attentive. But teachers do occasionally forget that somebody is paying them and that they may lose their jobs.

'DEMOCRACY' AS AN OBJECTIVE

Idealistic as well as optimistic too is the statement of the Policies Commission that education is committed "to the maintenance and improvement of American society as now constituted and unfolding, and to the use of knowledge and practical arts in a manner conducive to these ends. . . . Among its many obligations, public education is charged with disseminating the knowledge and keeping alive the spirit necessary to the functioning of democracy." (Anderson, School and Society, November 23, 1940). That is one of the American dreams which war hysteria has transformed into a nightmare.

"The primary business of education, in effecting the promises of American democracy, is to guard, cherish, advance and make available in the life of coming generations the funded and growing wisdom, knowledge and aspirations of the race. This involves the dissemination of knowledge, the liberation of minds, the development of skills, the promotion of free inquiries, the encouragement of the creative or inventive spirit and the establishment of wholesome attitudes toward order and change."

But when the Commission goes on to say that "neither democracy nor real education can exist without each other", it is merely tossing abstractions about. The trick I suppose is interpreting "real". But we read on, "Our democracy needs education". So does Japanese Shintoism and the control of the state through the inculcation of the myth of the sun goddess.

Quoting the above words of the Policies Commission, George L. Anderson in "Education for Democracy in Retrospect" (School and Society, November 23, 1940) writes, "Democracy has never been imperiled from without but is always weakened from within. Only its own complacency or its feebleness destroys it. The job of answering the threat from without, if one actually exists, is a positive job of exposing and correcting every defect in our society and building a structure that does not provide even a toe-hold for alien 'ismic groups. . . . American democracy demands equality of treatment and opportunity and rejects privilege whether it be mere social custom or the exploitation of other members of society."

The most recent publication of the Policies Commission, "The Education of Free Men in American Democracy", written by George S. Counts, blows even more iridescent bubbles (cf School Review, May, 1941). The first of the six articles of social faith is "the individual human being is of surpassing worth". Wouldn't it be subversive to promote this among our southern negroes and sharecroppers? Another reads, "There is danger that the spiritual rather than the material defenses of democracy may be the first to crumble." The situation would seem to require a more realistic consideration of alternatives.

TO MAKE DEMOCRACY WORK

"The trouble with democracy is that it has to wait for an enlightened public opinion", remarked Goethe, whom Eliot Blackwelder quotes in his address as retiring president of the Geological Society of America, December 26, 1940, Science, April 18, 1941. "More pessimistic commentators, like Disraeli, were confident that the experiment could end only in disaster because they believed that even the best popular education that was practically attainable would be inadequate", continued Professor Blackwelder. "To insure a well-informed and intelligent people is a most difficult task. History affords no good example of such a nation. It is by no means certain that it is even possible. The eugenicists will assert that their advice must be followed."

It is only through the training of youth, educating them we call it, that the community or the state can perpetuate itself. No state can long endure unless it creates a body of citizens to carry on. The people must believe, in England, in the superiority of the upper classes; in Russia, in what Marx or Stalin stands for; in America, in that shibboleth of the politician, democracy.

Democracy was feared by the founders and Constitution makers of our country. The term was hardly respectable before Jackson's time. And no president up to the time of Wilson emphasized the democracy of the country in his speeches or messages. There are those today, for whom such as Merwin Hart are mouthpieces, who resent the growing conception of this country as a democracy. Such stand for representative government, easy to control. Grover Cleveland idealistically said, "A public office is a public trust," but Roscoe Pound, who has seen how democracy works, realistically remarks, "The administrator is not appointed to office because he is an expert but he is an expert because he has been appointed".

Democracy has become an abstraction, a bait to win votes. But few have the courage to say, as did Lindbergh, May 11, 1941, that democracy such as we fought for in the last war, such as Wilson envisioned, does not exist in the world today, not even in our own country.

Let's recognize it as an ideal, a way, not an end. Let's look at it realistically. If it promotes desirable types of human behavior, then it is good and would be just as good under any other name. But a little more democracy in our local or national affairs, even in our schools or in the home, would be welcome. In "This Is My Own" (Duell, Sloan, 1940), Rockwell Kent reminds us that "To a man who demanded the establishment of democracy in Sparta, Lycurgus replied: 'Go thou, and first establish democracy in thy household'."

THE TEACHING OF CIVICS

"The current fad at educational meetings is the discussion of some phase of Democracy, especially as it affects or is affected by education. Some of us suspect that those who proclaim loudest the merits of the democratic spirit and of democratic practices in our school program are the most autocratic in their own classrooms and offices," boldly declared George H. Deer (Peabody Journal of Education, September, 1939). "The real issue of democracy in education seems not to be whether teacher representatives sit on the board of education, participate in curriculum revision, or approve salary schedules and tenure laws. A benevolent despot may do these more capably and often to the better advantage of the teachers themselves. The real issue seems rather to be whether there prevails between administrative officer and teacher, between teacher and student, between students themselves, such relationships and such modes of practice as foster self esteem, absence of fear and restraint, and freedom of expression among all concerned."

James S. Plant, the psychiatrist (cf p 92), in the Educational Record, April, 1941, "A Psychiatrist Looks at Teacher Education", remarks on "the teaching of civics. The schools in my area are busy with 'preparing children for democracy'. I observe classes busy as bees learning the structure of our government and the responsibilities placed upon the voters, where even so personal a matter as the child's going to the basement (if a person can't decide this for himself, what can we expect of him) is subject to authoritarian rules."

THE TEACHING OF POLITICS

Courses on government in the colleges are aimed toward the graduate school, the making of specialists of political science. But the training does not go through. It results in only half trained specialists, not citizens with broad general views, remarks J. Donald Kingsley, on the confusion in "The Teaching of Politics" (Journal of Higher Education, April, 1941). The undergraduate course is "merely a pale reflection of work at the graduate level", while the specialist, because of the "intensity of his concentration", develops "intellectual astigmatism". The college professor is obsessed by his "quest for what he calls objectivity. Indeed, it may be argued, as Karl Mannheim has so brilliantly done in 'Ideology and Utopia', that he can never succeed, for even the perception of phenomena is conditioned by the value-system of the observer. . . .

"We have forgotten the lesson of Faust, that knowledge, of itself, may be useless or useful, harmful or beneficial, depending upon the purposes or ends for which it is employed. . . . Many undergraduate courses in political science today are almost completely irrelevant to the needs either of the student or of society. This is especially true, perhaps, of the institutional inventory known as American Government."

THE 'GOOD CITIZEN'

The idealistic citizen, envisioned by Kingsley, would not be a practical man. He would prove refractory material to the political vote broker or the drill sergeant. Too many would break up our political party system and might even bring about a change in our social system. The instruction in our schools and colleges prevents many developing that way, as is clearly seen by Thomas L. Stokes, a native of Atlanta, and Washington correspondent, who in his autobiographical "Chip Off My Shoulder" (Princeton University Press, 1940) gives us intimate pictures of political Washington between two wars.

"Though I took much American history, I learned precious little about our democracy, that is, as it was working out. My political science course told me how democracy operated, that is, theoretically. I knew all the forms. But I did not learn how those forms were being twisted and used to suppress real democracy. We were not encouraged to be particularly curious. The sweep of great social forces was not brought to our attention. No startling questions were propounded to us to create the inquiring mind. We looked at the world around us passively, without asking too much why it was that way."

Of the House and Senate, "in time I learned, of course, that a handful of men really directed each body and I learned that they were not the real rulers, not their own masters. They were merely the puppets dancing to the pull of strings which led back elsewhere, led—for a long period of time for a great many of them—back to a few men sitting in fine offices far away, America's financial and industrial leaders."

TAMING THE TEACHERS

"The difficulty that meets us at the outset when we stop to examine the educational machinery which is to grind out democracy is that those who manipulate this machinery are themselves the products of the old individualistic system. If democracy can come only by example and practice, how can you expect an autocratic system to turn out products of democracy? Nowhere in our social organization is autocracy more firmly entrenched than in the process which has for its aim the training of democratic citizens." John Elof Boodin of U.C.L.A., one of America's outstanding social philosophers, in "The Social Mind" (Macmillan, 1939), brought out on his seventieth birthday, writes this and asks, "Would you like to live in a country governed as you govern your school? . . . Let us be frank at any rate. If we are convinced that democracy is a failure and must be a failure, then let us welcome Hitler. He has made the most successful experiment in autocracy that the world has ever known." If our teachers and education administrators "are nondescript and lack initiative, the chances are that the system selected them for that reason, and has kept them in subjection accordingly."

In England, Shaw tells us, the school master who taught citizenship would "find himself penniless in the streets, if not in the dock" (cf p. 46). Conant at Harvard these past few years has been brought around to carry out such a policy of elimination and suppression of those who do not follow the pattern set by those who control through the great philanthropic and educational foundations. The yearly purges at Harvard of the liveliest men bring unavailing protests from the undergraduates and have a taming effect on those who remain.

THE 'CASTE' OBJECTIVE

The real objective in going to school and college, for the boy or the girl or the family generally, is to get on in the world, to improve one's position socially or financially. Education in England serves to differentiate the castes or classes more strictly. In America, in this land of free enterprise which has democratic tradition behind it, we are reluctant to admit that there are classes. We still like to think that every boy is a possible Horatio Alger hero or a potential president. But similar possibilities exist in England (cf "They Wanted To Be Gentlemen", 23d ed., pp 49-56) and nowhere can you "keep a good man down". But in America and especially on our eastern seaboard, we have been imitatively initiating, as far as we could get away with it, class and caste distinctions of England.

As compensation perhaps for having failed in the large intents he announced at the Tercentenary, President Conant has diverted attention to his attempt to do away with class distinctions. March 25, 1940, at Berkeley, California, he declared, "To many of the present college generation the phrase 'equality of opportunity' seems a mockery. . . . Freedom of mind, social mobility through education, universal schooling . . . have represented the aspirations and desires of a free people embarked on a new experiment, the perpetuation of a casteless nation."

Now forced back to his old chemical job of making poison gas, he reports to the Overseers that it is "relatively easy" to "discover ways and means" of using the university for the government's purposes,—which of course is to get us into war. "The difficulty is to avoid jettisoning, in the process, ideals, hopes, ambitions, projects, which in the long run may be as essential to the welfare of the country as the immediate contribution for which the sacrifice is made."

THE FUNCTION OF A UNIVERSITY

In this President's Report of 1941, Conant considers "the primary functions of a university". Apparently unwilling to commit himself, he quotes "a brilliant Harvard graduate" who "has recently proposed the thesis that 'universities in the democracy of today have as their fundamental task the choice and the guardianship of eternal and spiritual values'". These "eternal values" do not emerge from the mass of vague verbiage though Conant declares that they are the "primary" and "ultimate reason" for the existence and survival of universities which "cannot be proclaimed too loudly".

It is inevitable that there will be disagreement and "heresy" as to these "eternal values" Conant reminds us, and tells us of "the martyrs' monument" at Oxford where one group burned another group "to emphasize a disagreement in this matter of eternal values". Once these dealt with "religion", today with "social philosophy".

Conant here seems to give some evidence that he is still the same man who outlined such high ideals at the Tercentenary in 1936 (cf 21st edition, p. 58), though in the meantime he has been eliminating, taming or making martyrs at Harvard of those who have not seen the "spiritual values" that he has promoted to please Wall Street and Whitehall.

UNDERLYING OBJECTIVES UNANNOUNCED

It should be sufficiently apparent now that the objectives announced by educators are not generally attained. Whose objectives are attained? Are the educational results determined by those who, unparaded, hold ultimate control? Discipline for the people, prestige for the rulers, have long been the purpose of training the children and the people. It is so today in Japan and Germany.

Till recently in England the children and the people were taught and trained and conditioned to respect their betters and to pray, "God bless the squire and his relations, and keep us in our proper stations". Such objectives, displayed in public today, have to be clothed in the language of democracy, patriotism, or religion, in which our professional men of politics, education, and religion are skilled. But when the big fellows get together it is as when Deterding, the Shell Oil king, conferred with Mussolini,—they both “agreed that the coping stone of education is a sense of discipline and respect for prestige” (“What Makes Lives”, p 59).

Drill is essential to these ends. Keep them occupied. Keep the child from learning by satisfying his natural curiosity; stultify his interests by keeping him to activities unpurposive, unrelated to his life; kill his interest in what is going on in the world by teaching current events in such a way that he will turn for satisfaction and compensation to the funnies; present biblical literature in such a way that he will never know the Bible, the great authors so that he will never turn to them; create a distaste for good reading so that he will turn to the pulps. So you will develop good citizens who will be respectable, have a horror of subversives, follow the patterns of opinions laid down for them, and find their keenest satisfactions in batting averages and contract bridge scores.

STULTIFYING DEVICES

Drill, in the old manual of arms, was to kill initiative. Spelling drill, oral callisthenics, has made most of us poor spellers. As Bernard Shaw writes, “The English language cannot be spelt, because there is no English alphabet. We make shift with a Latin alphabet. . . . Our attempts to make a foreign alphabet of 26 letters do the work of 42 are pitiable. We write the same vowel twice to give it a different sound. . . . We also double the following consonant . . . or make two consonants represent simple sounds . . . for which the Latin alphabet does not provide. . . . Those who think this a satisfactory solution overlook the stupendous fact that it takes twice as long to write two letters as to write one. . . . My surname has two sounds; but I have to spell it with four letters. . . . What chance has a people that cannot spell so simple a sound as Shaw?” (Time, May 12, 1941)

So in reading and writing we waste half our time because of the alphabet. Simultaneously with the drive on the so called “social studies” which might result in an informed citizenship, a politically literate electorate, there has been a great revival of spelling bees and spelling contests. In Boston the newspapers, and especially those most closely controlled by the financial and industrial interests, have given an enormous amount of publicity to such matters. At a time when the world was going down in chaos and we were being drawn into war dozens of columns were being printed on the lingual triumph of Miss

Murphy in winning through spelling "viaticum" and "dis-calced", but Miss Begley "clinched her honors by correctly spelling 'lactoscope'". From one point of view the world will be safer from intelligent action because of this kind of training.

OBJECTIVES BY PRESSURE GROUPS

The conflict over objectives is often due to the struggle for control. It is easy to see the conflict between Protestant and Catholic educational objectives which is out in the open.

Usually kept under cover is the conflict between political and social forces dominated by great industrial and financial interests. Those who ultimately control heavy industry, and hope to profit from our defense program, are using the newspapers, the periodicals, the publishers, the schools to promote their brand of patriotism.

The organized power monopolies, what we call our 'utilities', some years ago more or less secretly spent a good many millions employing school board members, textbook writers, college professors, teachers and legislators in a campaign to educate children so that their control would be perpetuated.

It takes a great Congressional investigation to reveal the millions spent by the power monopolists in the schools and colleges. It takes a crusading editor or political vote getter to disclose the propaganda in the schools of the National Association of Manufacturers. Often it has been shown they work through patriotic organizations whom they influence or subsidize.

EDUCATION IS ALWAYS CONTROLLED

The confusion about the objectives of education is in part due to the myths that must be maintained. Most of those who deal with the subject follow a set pattern popular at the time. The more innocent idealists that can be inspired to talk and write, the better. Keener minds find in this a way to advancement, and the more acquisitive, through articles and addresses, to added income.

College professors of national reputation have accepted retainers to maintain an attitude or promote an interest or modify their writings or insert in their textbooks what was desired by those who could pay, it has been brought out in sworn testimony in Congressional investigations.

This is, of course, oversimplification. Our democratic educational and social system is vastly more complex than can be presented in a few paragraphs. So sensitive are we that we evade the fact that every man has his price. Some can be bought only with a martyr's halo, some with a golden-strected heaven or a perfumed garden in paradise. But most of us yield to flattery, prestige, and are lured by the promise of comfort or security. Only the crude would grossly put such things in terms of money.

All this is difficult to see in familiar surroundings, easy to see in other countries where everything is strange. Americans generally are more active minded, more suspicious, less thoroughly conditioned than are Englishmen. An American can see that the middle class Englishman is bound by myths which to him are sacred traditions. Frenchmen, not so easily fooled, probably knew that those chosen for their famous Academie Française were mediocre intellects who secured their distinction through political wirepulling, that their news journals were owned, their politicians corrupt. But tolerant, they sought other satisfactions and attained an individual freedom while the dry rot went on. Competitive examinations, diplomas, degrees, appointments became very largely the objectives of education.

IN JAPAN

Japan furnishes a clearcut example of objectives set up for education. That intense devotion to the myth of the Mikado as the descendant of the Sun Goddess results in the most fanatical example of patriotism and readiness for individual sacrifice. In Japan, long isolated from western contacts, it was relatively easy for the dissatisfied and ambitious three southern clans to seize control from the three-century-old and rotting regime of the Tokugawa Shoguns. In the middle of the nineteenth century the Mikado was almost unknown to the people. For centuries he had been kept neglected, on a pittance, practically a prisoner, in Kyoto. The people had long been Buddhist, as they still are. The ancient Shinto religion was known only to a few antiquarians. The first task was to revive Shinto and make the worship of the emperor as the descendant of the Sun Goddess an integral part of education. It still remains the fundamental clearcut objective of education in Japan. "Dangerous thinking" along these lines is not permitted.

Behind this myth those who control the southern clans, the elder statesmen, the Mitsuis or the military, act for and in the name of the descendant of the Sun Goddess, just as in England those who control screen themselves behind the Crown.

IN GERMANY

"The Germans know specifically what they want in education, be it right or wrong. They see clearly the young German type that they want to turn out, and they do not consider the schools as the only educational agency which is to mold this product", writes William F. Ogburn of the University of Chicago on "Future Trends in Education" in the Elementary School Journal, October, 1939. His theme is that where "underlying social conditions are changing", education must adapt itself to the needs.

"One does not imply any acceptance of Nazi goals in pointing out that the young people of Germany have been given something in which they may lose themselves—a set of values, an assumption that lights every item of life with meaning", remarks James S. Plant, the psychiatrist (Educ. Record, April, 1941.)

President MacCracken, in writing on "Educational Reconstruction" (Vassar Alumnae Magazine, December, 1940) contrasting our own indefiniteness with the German's clearcut philosophy, says, "It is essential that America should set forth its belief in the democratic ideal by a philosophy of education which can be commended as the means by which democracy is achieved. The opponents of democracy have not been so remiss. They have expounded their philosophy of totalitarian education, and they have put it into practice."

DEFINITE PHILOSOPHY

"The Educational Philosophy of National Socialism" (Yale University Press, 1941), reviewed in Newsweek, June 24, 1940, at the time it was offered as a Ph.D. thesis at Yale, is a "strictly objective" study of the "strength and 'fanatic fury'" of Germany. The author, George Frederick Kneller, is a thirty year old Englishman who has lived in America nineteen years, studied at fourteen universities, and visited Germany five times. He shows that the philosophy they are now putting into action has been developed through past generations as the result of conditions imposed from without. He tells us, "The good of the Volk (race) in Germany dominates everything, including education. The schools are ordered to turn out perfect 'Nordic man'. . . . Says the Führer: 'It is our ideal to render the youth of the future tall and slender, as fast as the greyhound, as tough as leather, and as hard as Krupp steel'."

The history of central Europe and its relations with the great imperial powers has been such that the Germans have necessarily adopted a philosophy quite different from that of the English, and have established educational objectives that seem to us outrageous. As Kneller remarks, "Liberalism sees the individual sacrificed completely for Volk welfare, and not without justification. But the fundamental premises of individual freedom are wholly different in National Socialism from those of democracy, so much so that the freedom of the individual German is considered today even greater than that enjoyed in a democracy."

Giovanni Gentile in his "The Reform of Education" repeats Kant as quoted by Kneller. "Man can enjoy freedom only when it is nurtured and protected by a community, which is both the producer and consumer of its benefits." "If individual freedom seeks to struggle against social necessity, it combats its own essential characteristics; for it is only through the social organism that individual freedom may become expressive". The historic trend of the German people is being followed today, adapting education to needs of the time, an ideal that Goethe put briefly, succinctly, "I detest everything I am merely taught and which I cannot put to good use in my actions".

"The philosopher Lagarde says, 'Education is the capacity for separating the important from the unimportant and then stressing the former'. This approach is emphasized by Hitler in his third aim of education—that of ordinary instruction: 'Youthful minds should not be burdened with information which ninety-five per cent of the time will not be used and is therefore forgotten'."

Hitler's "greatest 'reform' comes in the teaching of history. History should not be studied retrospectively but as a guide for future behavior, History in the curriculum should be shortened, dates and names minimized in importance, the main value being in the study of trends and great developments." "Hitler's remarks regarding language study: 'It is hard to see why millions of people have to learn two or three languages which they can only partially ever use and which are completely forgotten by the majority'. Latin has its place, but a thorough reorganization of its instruction should be effected, so that only essentials are stressed, and the values of the subject limited to its relation to present-day living. . . .

"Private schools other than those sponsored by the state or party are allowed only for those who need special attention because of health or family conditions. Permission to operate private schools is granted only on the tested basis of the absolute political dependability of the headmaster and owners of the schools."

UNDERSTANDING THE OTHER FELLOW

"The excuse for . . . this investigation", Kneller writes, "is traceable to the existence in English of a deplorably small amount of dispassionate, objective literature on National Socialist education. Instead, commentators have been content to use secondary source materials, such as local and foreign newspapers, personal testimonials, or the scant literature already available. The result has been hardly more than a constant reworking of a point of view previously expressed". This "is an attempt to present the situation as it is, seen in its own light and from its own point of view."

We Americans are very ready to criticize the educational objectives of other peoples whose needs, resources and circumstances are entirely different from our own and who could not possibly survive if they lived up to our standards any more than we could survive with our methods under their conditions.

A people or a nation submits to leadership, authority, government, in the hope that conditions necessary for survival may better be maintained. In a state of siege, there must necessarily be restrictions, rationing, regimentation in order to make the best use of limited supplies and resources. This leaves no opportunity for democracy, and as conditions become more difficult the useless must be ejected that the defenders may survive. A people surrounded, restricted, over generations must prepare the coming generation for the conditions under which they must live or to bring about a change.

It comes down to a matter of understanding how the other fellow feels,—the world he lives in. How men act as the result of the mental content given them through our educational or propaganda systems was explained somewhat in "What Makes Lives", the introduction to this Handbook last year and, more specifically with reference to the last two years, in "Getting U S Into War", 1941.

We have been prone to criticize German education without understanding the conditions that must be met. As a people, the Germans delight in philosophy, metaphysics and theological discussions, but under recent circumstances they have felt obliged to discontinue instruction in these subjects, and to concentrate their university work largely on what would contribute to survival. More recently the same process has been taking place, President Conant now reports, at Oxford and Cambridge. Now in American universities we are turning attention to training for defense industries. But a few years ago when Heidelberg was celebrating a Tercentenary, President Conant of Harvard went out of his way to snub and insult Heidelberg, without understanding the conditions that had to be met.

A SOCIAL PROCESS

From this glimpse about the globe, it is apparent that what we call education is a social process by which those in control prepare the next generation for what they believe is important. In the process home, community, people, nation, government are all enlisted to give the growing child a set of habits and attitudes and to provide him with a selected mental content.

Idealists have pictured what education might be if it were designed to produce the utmost development of each individual. But such an ideally produced individual should have an ideal environment to live in. In this as in all other things there must be compromise. As we improve our social system we may improve our education. To attempt to put into practice under existing conditions an ideal education such as you may have conceived, is to lead to disappointment. But it is only through taking a step at a time in revising procedure, by trial and error that we find new and better ways of living our lives and living with our fellows.

We have been fascinated, lured and deluded with all sorts of will o' the wisps, clouds by day and pillars by night, false leaders, false doctrines, easy ways to salvation, ideal systems of training. The important thing for us educators and parents is to see straighter and more clearly what is before us, to strip away the falsity, the myth, to be a bit more realistic without losing our idealism. If we keep our heads in the clouds, we must keep our feet in the mud. We must know that this is not a democratic nation as some dream it may be. We must realize that we are a nation of corporation and government employees, tenant farmers, share croppers and slum dwellers, trained, conditioned to be subservient under ill feeding, ill housing, in tattered clothing, in the presence of lavishly displayed wealth and prodigal government waste and great political graft reaching even into our school system. When we see things more clearly, describe them more accurately, when we have used our intelligence service and mapped the country about us, then we can plan more wisely the road ahead.

A CONDITIONING PROCESS

For the individual, education is a conditioning process, a process of adjustment to conditions. Looked at realistically, education is the sum total of all the processes and influences to which the individual is subjected as a result of associations, contacts, environment that make up the milieu in which he lives, grows and develops. Until the mind closes and intellectual growth ceases this goes on through life, but in the upper classes of our society it is not unusual for complete stultification to set in early. Most of these processes are unconscious, we don't know they are going on, the individual doesn't know he is being subjected to them. Those are perhaps the more important. We sometimes refer to all this as the effect of environment, the absorption of culture, or something of that kind.

In thinking or speaking of education, however, we usually have in mind the more or less controlled conditioning of the young. In that conditioning, and it is equally true of adults, we can train them to respond to symbols, signals or slogans by the reaction of certain glands. The adrenals of a member of the Union League Club can be stimulated as certainly by a word as could the parotids of Pavlov's dogs by an auditory or visual signal. Medieval monks trained the monastery carp to come to be fed on the signal of a bell.

We train our children in schools to react to such signals for less desirable rewards. A good part of what we call education is that kind of conditioning.

WHAT MAY BE

The long course of man, dipping and spiraling, may be seen as an upward climb or as a martyrdom, viewing it through this or that temperamental glass. So long have men been conditioned to respond to fear, to symbols, slogans, signals, and so universal is that response, that even our greatest thinkers and philosophers see little hope of fundamental change.

Symbols, some believe, will always afford the means of controlling human behavior. Though we still protect our fetishes, believe in myths, are befuddled with abstractions, follow the ancient folkways, and treasure fixed ideas, our opinions, when we look at such sacred things in other times and other places nothing seems less permanent. With more extended view, wider experience and increased knowledge they dissolve like the mists before the climbing sun.

Get into the skins of other people and look out at their world through their eye holes at the things that they hold sacred which to them seem eternal. Then you will have less respect for their beliefs but more understanding and sympathy for those who hold them. What is sacred and seems eternal to the one, we will then understand must seem slight and ephemeral to the other. With such a broad comparative view myths dissolve, abstractions may be analyzed, and symbols take on a merely historic significance.

All that will come to those who preserve the vitality to question, to challenge, to investigate, to learn and not stolidly accept. That is our heritage from primitive man without which he would not have survived, from the Greeks which brought them glory which looted by the Romans brought them grandeur.

With such vitality we may feel the drive again to create, like the Greeks, within ourselves and about us, not merely to acquire education or possessions. For those not stultified by our anachronistic educational system, by our acquisitive culture, for those who can rise each morn to worship a new sun, to feel life throbbing within them, and at night to stretch their hands out among the stars to finger pearls of light, there is joy in living, sensing, knowing, doing, creating from our ever-widening experiences new arrangements to inspire others.

COMPARTMENT EDUCATION

Stimulatingly promising is the rate at which in recent decades we have swept away myths, abandoned ancient folkways, dissolved abstractions. But we are still held back by restricted vision, limited knowledge. Such information as is taught in the schools is fragmentary and piecemeal, kept in compartments and served up by departments, with all the talk of curriculum revision.

OUR EDUCATION IS PIECEMEAL

Moreover, in each department of knowledge, the custodians who work over the junk in their bin are supposed to know little or nothing of what is in other compartments. The members of each department join up for life. They have a vested interest in their subject. Classicists, mathematicians or historians, they have their own associations and periodicals, just as do dealers in other secondhand commodities like scrap or old furniture. They know little about what is in the other compartments, and jealously guard their own. To the student seeking knowledge, these departmentalists from their compartments dole out information in forty to fifty-five minute periods, and this is the core of his education.

"The disconnected curriculum pieced together in semester installments to suit the unstudied and constantly shifting average demand; the rigidly administered courses imposing their average selection and quality on good and poor alike; the domination of the average performance of a small group as reflected in comparative class ratings",—this was the trenchant criticism of those who carried on the expensive and extensive study of Pennsylvania college and high school teaching.

It is little wonder, as that study showed, that the student sometimes knows less, after four years of living among these junk piles and scrap heaps, of the wide and growing field of human knowledge, of the wonderful world in which he lives, of the gradual dissolving mysteries of the past, of the joy of taking apart abstractions, of seeing through slogans and symbols. But it is not for lack of perception and advice of wise men that the young are still fed from these separate troughs the traditional slop which derives from ecclesiastical and medieval origins. Three hundred and fifty years ago Lord Bacon protested, "Let this be a rule: that all divisions of knowledge be accepted and used rather for lines to mark or distinguish, than sections to divide and separate them. . . . For the contrary hereof has made particular sciences to become barren, shallow, and erroneous; not being nourished and maintained and kept right by the common fountain and aliment."

WHAT WE TEACH AND WHY

With forces conflicting for control of how youth shall be prepared for their own purposes, it is not surprising that our curriculum comprises accumulated fragments not yet thrown out. Always there are pressure groups and individuals urging new subjects or raising objection to what is being taught.

How Greek, geometry, English were introduced by the progressives of the centuries past was outlined briefly in this Handbook two years ago under the title "What's Taught Is What's Left". Opposition always developed, for the new crowded out the old, arithmetic the catechism. It was the growing merchant class that two centuries ago insisted on the teaching of arithmetic, taught only privately in New England and introduced into Harvard College about the time of the Revolution.

Curriculum revision is as ancient as tribal life. The pressure once swirling controversially about religious tenets is now centered over what we call the social studies. These approach timidly and tentatively some understanding of how men modify the behavior of each other in living together, which may lead to disclosures dangerous to some.

With no clearly defined objectives, we don't know where to go and, timid lest we overstep the bounds set by our masters, there is little incentive for us teachers even if we had knowledge of pragmatic value about the world and life to make it available, or to explore or develop interest in new fields of knowledge. So we continue to teach what's left, until individuals or groups powerful enough succeed in throwing it out.

WHAT IT LEADS TO

The teacher's job is to grade the pupils as the result of catechizing, to ascertain the amount of secondhand unrelated facts the pupil is supposed to have absorbed and be able to work off on an examination paper. As a result of this he gets marks, and that determines scholarship and graduation. Then the pupil may go to the university, "a company of scholars". "A scholar is a man who wears second-hand clothes and lives in a junk shop", remarks Uncle Robert in H. G. Wells' "Babes in the Darkling Wood" (1940). In this Handbook two years ago and in the American Teacher, March, 1939, we paid our respects to the scholar and his "sterility".

Bernard DeVoto, who lives among them, in "Minority Report" (Little, Brown, 1940), tells us that when a scholar writes or speaks there are "no incorrect case forms", however "ponderous, torpid, opaque, rambling, diluted", however "inept" the sentences, however "bogged down in vague and abstract polysyllables" or "frayed out in that maddening indefiniteness which permits the writer to believe that he has said something pretty acute, when he has actually said nothing at all".

To President Butler of Columbia, who has known more scholars for a longer time than any other, Professor Brander Matthews of Columbia, who liked the stage, is reported to have said, "In the case of the first man to use an anecdote there is originality. In the case of the second man there is plagiarism. With the third man, it is lack of originality; and with the fourth man, it is drawing from the common stock of the race." "Yes", broke in President Butler, "and in the fifth case, it is research". (E. W. Knight, "Getting Ahead by Degrees".)

ISOLATED SUBJECTS

The bells rings. The shouting dies. There is a shuffling of feet and silence. School is opened, once with the Bible, now a convocation homily. The bell rings,—feet shuffle. For forty minutes the pupil supposedly follows the intricacies of the Greek mind through the modern version of Euclid. The bell rings. The pupil marches with Arnold through the Maine wilderness to attack Quebec without knowing what in Europe drove him to it. More bells and shuffling. Shakespeare takes you to ancient Rome to see Caesar assassinated.

The pupil has "had" Shakespeare, he "took" geometry. Fortunately there are some extra-curricular activities and playgrounds on which to work off some of the extra energy he couldn't put into human knowledge. But he doesn't know the Bible, which has entered into the web of life of the English speaking peoples, and he doesn't know the plays of Shakespeare, though in any German provincial town he could have seen several performances a month. Oscar Ameringer, in his autobiography "If You Don't Weaken" (Holt, 1940), writes "Odd as it may seem, I still prefer my Shakespeare in German. The reason for this, and also, perhaps, for the popularity of 'Unser Shakespeare' in the Germany of yore, is that he was translated by dramatists as great or nearly as great as himself—such as Goethe, Schiller and Wieland. Moreover, shorn of Elizabethan English and expressed in the folksy language of Germany's greatest poet, he is much easier to understand. The Weimar Players . . . were organized by Goethe and rescued the Bard of Avon from virtual oblivion, for by that time he was rarely played even in England."

WORSHIP OF FACTS

"A collection of facts is no more a science than a heap of stones is a house", remarked the French mathematician

Poincare. But these are the treasured items reassorted by scholars, doled out by teachers to clutter mental atttics. Without facts you cannot build even an hypothesis, just as without bricks or stone you cannot build a cathedral. But arrangement of what's selected determines how long the structure stands. The scaffolding for restoration perpetually about Gothic cathedrals reveals that the stone was not always selected wisely. So it was in the time of the Psalmist as Christ quoted, "The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner". But the worship of facts is as absurd as venerating the stones instead of the cathedral.

"There is far too much emphasis upon the learning of facts, on the mistaken supposition that knowledge, as distinguished from understanding, is the chief object of schooling", writes Eliot Blackwelder (Science, April 18, 1941).

THE FUTILITY OF FACTS

"Owing to the contemporary mania for what are called facts, we are apt to forget that an age can only learn to know itself if the different methods of approach, the power of formulation, and the analysis of complex phenomena, do not lag behind the collection of data. . . . It cannot be denied that owing to the defense mechanisms created by this period of specialized fact finding, our sociologists have avoided the greatest themes.

"It would be a tremendous step forward if social scientists realized that not only the collection and description of facts but the theoretical formulation of new problems must keep pace with the changing social process. In the social sciences the questions involved do not reveal themselves in bare facts but in a series of conflicts and crises which can only be illuminated by adequate analysis", writes Karl Mannheim in his brilliant and clear sighted "Man and Society in an Age of Reconstruction: Studies in Modern Social Structure" (Harcourt, 1940).

"What is the cause of this fascination with facts, this sterile contemplation of the obvious?" asks J. Donald Kingsley in "The Teaching of Politics", Journal of Higher Education, April, 1941. Facts are essential to the scientist. But we don't train pupils in the scientific method. We don't give them ability to compare, to interpret, to make judgments. If we do there is protest from the scholars, of superficiality or indoc-trination or something else. They want us to stick to dry facts.

But "every year if not every day we have to wager our salvation upon some prophecy based upon imperfect knowledge", the late Mr. Justice Holmes recognized. And Lord Bryce long ago observed that the American was "like a sailor who knows the spars and ropes of the ship and is expert in working her, but is ignorant of geography and navigation".

THE WORLD HAS MEANING

With all the idealistic talk as to possible objectives in education and the great confusion as to the ends we are actually working for, with knowledge kept in watertight compartments, the rapidly growing knowledge of the world we live in remains largely unavailable or uninterpreted in our schools.

HOW LITTLE WE KNOW

We sometimes forget that only a few hundred years ago the Church was the repository of all knowledge that was necessary for the human race. All truth came from God, and the only direct line was through his legate in Rome. Before Copernicus the universe was simple. Above were the heavens, hell below, and the sun, planets and stars in their courses revolved about the earth, the footstool of God.

Our universities, ecclesiastical in origin, naturally enough are still permeated by medieval tradition. When "Veritas" was written on the Harvard shield, the truth was all known, it had been revealed. Now they are busy hunting for it. All the eternal verities, the absolutes that still linger, carry over from this earlier time when all truth came through the Church. There were devils in those days. The evidence was before us. We saw men possessed of them, frothing at the mouth. And all devoutly believed, as did Luther, the biblical injunction "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live."

Now because of our heresies we seek new explanations. But this freedom to seek, with us Christians, is relatively recent. It has hardly yet penetrated to our schools, that are still doling out for the most part the same kind of mental pabulum they did some time ago. Our universities are progressing a little more rapidly. When I was at Harvard there was nothing in the curriculum to show that they had learned that the world was round, except for Lanman's course in Sanskrit.

As our heresies have deepened, our knowledge of the world we live in has increased in geometrical progression in recent decades. But with widening horizons we begin to realize how little we know of how much there is to know.

NO CONSISTENT BODY OF INFORMATION

Departmentalized scholars confined to their compartments seldom have a broad view of human knowledge. Even historians and scientists rarely envision the world as a whole. They are busy sorting their own particular group of facts. Correlation and synthesis are relegated to the metaphysicists and philosophers, whose powers of observation have not been developed, who have more or less contempt for what is derived through the senses, and whose lives are spent in pure cerebration. The wise men of the East, the anchorites of Tibet walled up in their mountainside cells, go even farther.

Our universities are anything but universal. They are very particular, very dependent upon donors, benefactors, and of late under our democracy upon politician vote brokers, the go-betweens with the financial powers. Our encyclopedias are anything but encyclopedic. They tend to be nationalistic,—Britannica, Americana,—and present unrelated scraps of knowledge so arranged as to be found by one who knows the alphabet, and are decorated with beautifully colored pictures to sell them.

In vain H. G. Wells has cried for a "World Encyclopedia", a "World Brain", that learned men in universities get together and make available their knowledge. Though no historian, his attempt to present the story of mankind in outline was tremendously stimulating in producing an epidemic of outline surveys of many other subjects. Will Durant in "Our Oriental Heritage" and "The Life of Greece" (Simon and Schuster, 1939), to be followed by other volumes, gives us an interpretative survey. But such 'superficial' interpretations are regarded with contempt by our academic historians.

Of immediate "problems in a changing age", Harry Elmer Barnes' 1000-page survey of "Society in Transition" (Prentice-Hall, 1939) brings together a mountain of material not elsewhere available in one volume. Similarly from a more psychologically scientific standpoint, E. L. Thorndike's thick volume "Human Nature and the Social Order" (Macmillan, 1940) correlates a vast amount of more or less unknown information. But such scientific surveys, incomplete and imperfect, are not in the academic tradition.

DISTORTED HISTORY

Not only is our education piecemeal, fragmentary, but subject matter has had to conform to pressures. Public utilities, railroads, banking interests, our industry, N. A. M., prohibitionists, D. A. R.'s, have exerted pressures. These stresses and strains have resulted in distorting the body of knowledge that can be safely imparted by the teacher or superintendent.

History is always written by the survivors. The writing of it is controlled by those who wish to perpetuate their power. They would be unwise or fanatically idealistic if they did not. This we explained in this Handbook in 1939, pp. 109-118, and brought it up to date in "Getting U S Into War," pp. 13-15.

To the claim of 'objectivity' of the academic historian Charles Beard in his presidential address to the American Historical Association in 1933 replied, "Any selection and arrangement of facts pertaining to any large area of history . . . is controlled inexorably by the frame of reference in the mind of the selector."

At the 1939 meeting of the same Association, papers on the cultural approach to history were presented, later edited by Caroline F. Ware, "The Cultural Approach to History" (Columbia University Press, 1940). She wrote, "In recent decades . . . the sight of historians becoming propagandists in war time cast doubt not only on the individual historians but on the possibility of real objectivity." "The scientific approach no longer inspired . . . confidence" especially when we saw university scientists exhibiting the most violent partisanship.

Arthur M. Schlesinger, Harvard professor of history, speaking at the University of Pennsylvania, September 20, 1940, placed much of the blame for international antagonisms upon historians "who have compiled case studies of abnormal and exceptional behavior and stressed national differences to the exclusion of essential national likenesses. . . . Diplomatic history has been an undiplomatic account of the distempers of nations. . . . The secret of international peace is elusive. But if war is ever to be banished . . . peoples must not continue to learn of one another only as dreaded rivals or armed foes" but "as collaborators in the grand enterprise of advancing civilization. When this is achieved, they will reject false prophets who summon them to desperate adventure."

NO INTERPRETATION

Not only is it academically respectable to keep knowledge in separate compartments, but to treat of recent knowledge, to correlate scientific knowledge with recent events, is somewhat dangerous. Moreover, interpretations are unfashionable today. One is considered naively out of date, "Victorian," if he quotes Browning's "Fra Lippo",—"This world's no blot for us, nor blank; it means intensely, and means good: to find its meaning is my meat and drink."

This attitude of academic superciliousness toward what is regarded as "Spencerian" sentimentalism is evident in Vernon Parrington's "Main Currents in American Thought" (Harcourt, Brace, 1940). A college professor, he wrote for academicians to stretch their minds a little, but not too much. That's the reason they like it. But Parrington, though academically conditioned, is not cast in the academic mold. He sees more than he can conventionally admit. Though he calls Brooks Adams a "rebel", but hesitates to express his admiration frankly.

With anticipation one picks up "Interpretation in Teaching" (Harcourt, Brace, 1938) by the great semanticist I. A. Richards, co-author of "The Meaning of Meaning" (cf 20th edition, pp.

113-4), of Magdalene College, Oxford, now at Harvard. There is a chapter on "The Interpretation of Is" preceded by a quotation from Mitchell's "The Place of Minds" (this isn't the Wizard of Oz in Looking-glass Land). Deep but narrow is the book, which hardly touches on teaching or interpretation.

"For the third time Jimmie answered, 'The robins come in the fall'. 'James, James!' shouted the teacher. 'Read that lesson again. Now tell me, when do the robins come?' In tears the boy finally answered, 'The robins come in the spring.' And so they do—in Boston, where the text was written. But in Louisiana, just in order to avoid the Northern winter, they come in the fall, as the boy well knew." (Edwin R. Embree, on traditional northern white practice for negroes in Louisiana, in the "Little Red Schoolhouse", Atlantic, November, 1937.)

EDUCATION FOR FRUSTRATION

"A functional program of instruction that will be based upon large areas of life activities . . . of which an important one should be vocational life" has been called for by U. S. Commissioner of Education Studebaker. Such curriculum shifting is futile in the opinion of Charles C. Fries of the University of Michigan. In "Educating for Frustration", School and Society, November 30, 1940, he says, "There is no evidence that a greater emphasis upon vocational training will keep a larger proportion of our youth in the high school", or "that the present unemployment of the youth that are out of school would be appreciably changed by training these youth for vocations that require special skills. . . . To train more of our youth for the vocations requiring skill would increase the acuteness of the social problem," and "would be also preparing the conditions that would necessitate the vocational frustration of our youth."

Less than one fourth of those investigated in the Maryland study "left school for reasons that can be even remotely connected with curriculum adjustment." Fries quotes Dorothy Canfield Fisher's explanation of frustration,—"The process seems to be a simple one: the animal is trained to react in certain ways to certain stimuli, and then is placed in a situation in which these reactions are impossible."

FUTILITY

Denied any possibility of interpretation or understanding, with loose facts rattling around in our mental attics, we arrive at frustration and futility. James S. Plant, famed psychiatrist for children, addressing teachers at a Conference on Teacher Education at Cornell, September, 1940 ("A Psychiatrist Looks at Teacher Education", Educational Record, April, 1941), gave his "'clinical hunches'—as to some thousands of adults who have been exposed to this process which we call 'education', who have had long-term relationships with teachers."

"The most startling and pervasive thing about these adults is their fear of and resistance to change. This is particularly striking in view of the fact that all of life is change. Why is it that only about one in six of my parents or teachers sees the close relationship between change and growth? . . .

"The second thing that persistently presents itself is what might in shorthand terms be called 'a feeling of personal futility'.

"Something over four-fifths of our population has as its answer to pressing social problems that we get back to something we used to have—the family we used to have, the church we used to have, the political integrity we used to have."

The school should be able to do something to overcome this early conditioning and give the child understanding. Growth is accompanied by growing pains. As the child develops "it asks embarrassing questions, breaks cherished toys, bursts the seams of garments sewn with loving and patient hands. It is the same with nations—and peoples. If we cannot, as a very fundamental part of the educative process, teach children the relationship between change and growth—a willingness to ask at least how much of change is growth—we face further generations of anxiety and timidity as the race works out its problems."

SEEDBEDS FOR PROPAGANDA

To minds trained in the schools comes the information selected and controlled, slanted and directed through the newspapers, periodicals and publishing houses. Myths to deceive and nostrums to serve certain people, flourish in these minds, seedbeds for propaganda. With increased literacy and facilitated communication, great numbers are affected who were formerly quiescent, peasants close to the soil. This brings to modern sociology an element now out of all proportion to what it was in the past. For while education and the democratic method have stimulated mental activity, they have not insured against gullibility. Loyalty goes to the good radio voice, to the clever salesman or politician. People can not develop judgment because they have only isolated unrelated facts to work with.

Some fall for ancient mysteries, even astrology. Dorothy Thompson in her recent sketches of "Roosevelt, Churchill and Hitler", Look, January 14, 1941, shows her faith in astrology. She gives the constellation under which each was born. Evidently she believes too in something akin to clairvoyance, for once she wrote that the response to one of her columns convinced her that she had not written it herself. She wasn't admitting plagiarism, of course.

AWAY WITH ABSOLUTES

What an opportunity to write an intellectual history of the past two generations under the new conditions of finance capitalism, increased literacy, and increased control of mental content. It's a bigger story than Lecky dealt with in his history of "rationalism" and "morals" under the declining Church.

"The influence of the abstract forms guiding and controlling human thinking is more subtle, less obvious, and by all odds the most enduring and significant phase" of the system of logic preserved by the scholastics throughout the Middle Ages. This 'evil' is generally batted onto Aristotle. But as Oliver L. Reiser, philosopher of the University of Pittsburgh, points out in "The Promise of Scientific Humanism" (Oskar Pietsch, 1940), this is hardly fair to Aristotle. "If Aristotle had lived in the Middle Ages, or for that matter in modern times, he would not have been an Aristotelian! . . . A modern advocate of non-Aristotelian logic may be a truer apostle of the master than those contemporary advocates who render lip service to Aristotle and his teachings and study his works in a spirit of pious humility. Aristotle himself had too great a respect for intellectual independence and for the authority of facts to demand an eternal allegiance to a system of philosophy. . . . Both Jesus and Aristotle were individualists, but their followers have been the most servile of intellectual acolytes. Eternal revelations have no place in a world dedicated to the 'Unknown God'."

Relativity physics, Reiser observes, "requires a non-Aristotelian approach. . . . But what are the implications of this logical-physical revolution for science in general?" He points to the need of "rewriting the entire domain of science in terms of such principles of complementarity, mutuality, and relativity", a sort of "intellectual synthesis".

Men "are on the road to freeing themselves from slavery to traditional habits of thought when they come to see that the concept of anything is the law of its behavior, because a thing is what it does". The "introduction of a new type of entity or force" for each new type of behavior Reiser explains as a consequence of the "inveterate tendency of our reasoning processes to make entities out of modes of behavior".

THE PALEONTOLOGICAL VIEW

The paleontologist has a great advantage over all other men. His perspective is not restricted by the range of human history or archeology. His vision is in millions of years. I well remember the light that would come into old Shaler's face as he pictured to us the life of paleozoic times, the experiments and failures that old Mother Nature made during those periods hundreds of millions of years ago. He could not only transport himself by means of his paleontological knowledge and imagination farther than any magic carpet of Bagdad ever took Sinbad, but he could see more marvelous creatures than the roc. He could share the pains of the organisms undergoing evolution and the perplexities of old Mother Nature herself. He could compass the trials and errors and results of a hundred million years in a hundred seconds.

The record that man has written in the rocks is less complete, and we have only begun to learn about it. We know now that we inherited much not only from prehistoric forebears but from other species and genera. Sinanthropus first learned to use fire in the caverns of China. Neanderthal man improved in tool making and felt the first spiritual impulses which led man to bury his dead with some care. Because he placed with the dead their ornaments and weapons he must have felt that there would be need for their use in another world at another time. He was probably pushed off the earth without so much as "thank you" by the ancestors of our upstart species from whom we inherited this brain which we have done so little to improve by use these twenty thousand years.

Of "The World's Advance" in the brief time since,—“spiral” George Meredith “terms our mind’s ascent: our world’s advance presents that figure on a flat; the way of worms. Cherish the promise of its good intents, and warn it, not one instinct to efface ere Reason ripens for the vacant place.”

TOWARD UNDERSTANDING

“Ours is not an age of science”, declared Professor Anton J. Carlson of the University of Chicago at the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in December, 1940 (Science, January 31, 1941). This is an age of invention, which is often confused with science. Edison was an inventor, not a scientist. The inventor is usually applying power in some new way to save labor. The purpose of science is not to invent but to investigate that we may understand.

Science has done much for man, Carlson tells us, “but man may and does use these and other achievements for a greater social injury, instead of for a further social advance. . . . Men are still driven by greed and confused by guile, rather than guided by reason based on our expanding knowledge. . . . The world is now in the midst of one such period of violence, labeled ‘the worst’; because human memory is short, and even yesterday’s experience is less vivid than that of to-day Considerable responsibility for the failure of science to essentially modify human conduct must be laid to the scientists themselves. Many of us are scientists only during our working hours, and fall into the common errors of the average man when we step outside our own specific field."

Men of science "are human beings with human emotions and frailties and, like the rest of humanity, their opinions are consciously or unconsciously tinged by personal interest", writes Dr. Albert Francis Blakeslee, "Ideals of Science", Science, December 27, 1940. Most scientists carry into their laboratories a heavy load of atavisms, myths, fetters. They swallow propaganda and in war time become hysterical and hate. But no one can hate what he understands and does not fear.

"The scientific method is relatively new", said Eliot Blackwelder in his address as retiring president of the Geological Society of America (Science, April 18, 1941). "As recently as four centuries ago it was not in vogue even among the most learned thinkers of the time. Today it is used only incidentally by most of the people in even the most civilized countries. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that the majority of even those with college degrees—do not really understand it.

"The basic thing about science is an attitude or habit of mind, a way of thinking" which makes one avid for new data, creative in attempting to arrange facts in new patterns and to build hypotheses, iconoclastic in insatiable desire to find faults in and demolish them if possible in order to build better.

"Most subjects of human concern may be dealt with in a scientific way. The essential condition is freedom from bias and prejudice. . . . 'The purpose of science is understanding'. This is only a modern version of the well-known admonition of King Solomon to 'get understanding'."

The artist has another way to understanding. He has "seen the world—the beauty and the wonder and the power, the shapes of things, their colors, lights and shades, changes, surprises". Most of us see them "first when we see them painted, things we have passed perhaps a hundred times nor cared to see". But for both scientist and artist the world holds purport, life they wear "proudly, as kings their solemn robes of state; and humbly, as the mightiest monarchs use".

Let us parents and teachers help youth to "get understanding" as Solomon advised, and not inveigle them into believing that we can bring them complete revelation or eternal truth. Let's limit our own arrogance and leave something for them to do that they may satisfy their egos and avoid frustration. Then they may "create new gods of fairer image and build them temples as none yet envisage".

THE LEADING PRIVATE SCHOOLS

SOME FIFTEEN HUNDRED IN NUMBER WITH PERTINENT STATISTICAL AND CRITICAL DESCRIPTIONS

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The representative and more important private schools and junior colleges of the United States, about 1500, are here presented, pp. 99-590, listed alphabetically under cities and towns; cities and towns likewise arranged alphabetically in each state, from Maine to California. European schools, similarly treated in previous editions, are omitted this year. Some 2600 other schools and junior colleges, about which we have less information, will be found in the Supplementary Lists, pp. 593-716.

The statistical paragraphs in bold face type give basic facts as reported by the schools,—for Boys, for Girls or Coeducational (Coed); the Ages of the pupils enrolled; the date of establishment (Est); the head, with degrees, colleges, and title. The enrollment (Enr) is classified as boarding (Bdg), Country Day (Co Day), and Day; the courses given, as college preparatory (Col Prep), academic (Acad), and special (Music, Art, Domestic Science, etc.). The number of the faculty (Fac) is assumed to include only full-time instructors. Tuition (Tui) with its various ranges, boarding and day, is indicated. The type of ownership,—incorporated not for profit, partnership, proprietary; denominational influence or affiliation; colleges and associations by which the school is accredited, number of graduates entering college in 1940 and over the five year period 1935-39, and number of alumni are given where reported. Accrediting by state departments of education and by church boards, and membership in non-accrediting associations are not indicated.

Enrollment figures are supposed to represent actual enrollment, but optimistic school heads occasionally list capacity figures. Still others give a blanket approval of the statistics published in former editions. Such figures are printed in lieu of more up to date data. Many fail to report and others send figures asking that they be not published.

College Entrance Board candidates, formerly in this section, will be found listed for 1936-39 in Schools Classified by Type to Meet Special Needs; Boys, p. 719, Girls, p. 741, Coeducational, p. 765.

Drawing boys and girls from all the New England states with a scattering from New York and the west, Gould Academy has equipment unusual for the region and rate. Mr. Ireland, former principal of the Newport, Vermont, High School, in 1940 succeeded Philip S. Sayles, head master from 1936, who had strengthened the pre-vocational courses. The current interest in academic work is balanced by a well organized health program. See page 935.

A group of local residents founded this academy, and land was appropriated for it by the Massachusetts General Court when Maine was still a part of Massachusetts. Mr. Sampson, principal for over two decades, has developed the plant, adding a new gymnasium in 1940. Taking advantage of the surroundings, he has encouraged vigorous outdoor life, developed working scholarships, and introduced an all inclusive rate. Most of the graduates go on to northern New England colleges.

This unique institution which makes so strong an appeal to head masters has created for itself a definite place in our plutocratic educational system. Tutorial in function, giving boys virtually individual instruction, it avoids the cramming of the regulation tutoring school. With adaptability and foresight, Mr. Hatch, a man of inexhaustible nervous energy, former member of the faculties of Bowdoin and Cornell, devotes himself zealously to his school and his boys. A summer session, Was-sookeag School-Camp, antedating the winter school by a year, is affiliated. See page 828.

Since its establishment almost a hundred and fifty years ago, this academy has attracted about an equal number of boys and girls. Paul Langdon, the Bernard Langdon of Oliver Wendell Holmes' novel "Elsie Venner" was the first principal. His most eminent successor was Daniel Webster, who here made his first and only attempt at teaching school. The academy has been under Mr. LaCasce since 1922. On the roll of its earlier alumni are many names of more than local fame. Maine still continues to furnish many of the students, but other parts of New England, the south and the west are represented. College preparation is stressed, some eighty per cent of the graduates entering college each year.

PORTLAND, ME. Alt 26 ft. Pop 70,810 (1930) 73,643 (1940).

The gateway to, and the metropolis of Maine, Portland still wears an air of mellow dignity which modern innovations and summer tourists have not wholly obliterated. Its eighteenth century homes and well kept shade trees enhance the city's natural loveliness. Extending along a saddleback about three miles long at the southwestern end of Casco Bay, it is the leading industrial city of the state and the home of many specialized manufactories.

In the West End residential section is The Waynflete School, and nearer the center of the city the Portland Society of Art. The Portland Junior College holds classes in the local Y.M.C.A. Westbrook Junior College, in the Deering section to the west, is the oldest educational institution of Universalist origin in the country.

Coeducational for nearly a century and for a time under Universalist control, Westbrook was reorganized in 1925 as a non-denominational girls school and is today a full fledged junior college. The low rate and wide variety of courses, practical and in the arts, which Dr. Proctor has developed since he took over the school in 1933, have resulted in a tripling of the enrollment. Transfer curricula prepare for senior college and for business, professions, teaching and further work in the arts.

Endowed and well organized, Oak Grove School enrolls girls from many states and from foreign countries. Established by five influential and scholarly Friends who desired a "select school" for their children, it is still a Friends school though patronized by all denominations. Oak Grove was coeducational for seventy-five years, but Mr. and Mrs. Owen, convinced that the one-sex school was more wholesome for adolescents, reorganized it for girls only in 1925. Unusual in a country school are the contacts provided through Mr. Owen's position as state senator, and the foreign travel and graduate study of most of the faculty. A new quadrangle of seven modern buildings, four already constructed, others planned for the near future, are among the material fruits of the untiring zeal of Mr. and Mrs. Owen and the devotion they have given their girls and their school in their twenty-one years as principals. First called The Latin Grammar School, preparatory to The Maine Literary and Technological Institute, now Colby College, and later known as Waterville Classical Institute, its first principal was Elijah Parish Lovejoy, anti-slavery editor and apostle of the Freedom of the Press. The present name was taken in 1883 to honor ex-Governor Abner Coburn who donated the institute building. Only boys are now accepted in residence. Although some local boys and girls attend as day pupils, the institute, unlike many of its kind in Maine, does not serve as the public high school. See page 828.

Chartered by the General Court when the territory was part of Massachusetts "for the purpose of promoting piety and virtue; and for the education of youth in such languages, and such of the liberal arts and sciences as the Trustees shall direct," this old academy has been revived under Mr. Hyde, principal since 1927. Cyrus H. K. Curtis in 1928 gave over a quarter of a million dollars for new buildings and equipment. Vigorous, far-sighted, with unusual breadth and independence of thought, Mr. Hyde maintains this as a low priced school fitted to the needs of the boys and girls of the neighboring coast and islands, though some of the students come from farther afield. Through a cooperative plan, the girls of the home economics department, under supervision, cook and serve the meals. An increasing number of graduates go on to college. See page 935.

Since 1936, when Mr. Gulick was appointed head master, the school has considerably broadened in scope. Member of a famous missionary family that played an important role in the part of the summer camp, he has had experience in various New England colleges and schools. Alert to the needs of the boys, he has adjusted the curriculum to meet their individual requirements, and although college preparation is emphasized, interesting work is provided for those whose aptitudes lie along more practical lines. Originally the coeducational Andover Academy, renamed in 1879 in honor of a liberal local benefactor, the school has since 1930 enrolled boys only. Although affiliated with the Unitarian Church for over fifty years, it is undenominational in practice. See page 831.

The capital of New Hampshire, a busy city on the west bank of the Merrimack river seventy-five miles from Boston, Concord still retains something of the charm of a residential village. The state house and the beautiful building of the New Hampshire Historical Society, presented by Edward Tuck, benefactor of Dartmouth, lend an atmosphere of individuality and distinction. Here the Rumford Press publishes many of our national magazines. The cross state route that formerly ran through the grounds of St. Paul's School now swings north through the valley of the Turkey river.

A new trend was given education in America in the establishment of St. Paul's. It was the first of the Church schools to make appeal to the new class that was rapidly acquiring wealth from the development of water power, textile mills and exploitation of the continent. In 1855 Dr. George Cheyne Shattuck gave his country place near Concord for "a school of the highest class for boys, in which they may obtain an education which shall fit them either for college or business, including thorough intellectual training in the various branches of learning, gymnastics and manly exercises adapted to preserve health and strengthen the physical condition, such æsthetic culture and accomplishments as shall tend to refine the manners and elevate the taste, together with careful moral and religious instruction."

The Rev. Henry Augustus Coit, then only twenty-five, was chosen by the trustees as the first rector. Of a family long prominent in American education, his early training had been under the Rev. William Augustus Muhlenberg, at whose suggestion he was later an instructor in the College of St. James, Hagerstown, Md. Dr. Muhlenberg's school at College Point, L. I., which later became St. Paul's College, in its eighteen years existence exerted a great influence on the future private schools in America, for among his pupils in addition to Coit were several future bishops who were later influential in organizing the earliest Episcopal church schools. From his master, Muhlenberg, Dr. Coit adopted the "in loco parentis" attitude, and from the English public schools which he had visited he adapted much. Even in outdoor life English influence was at first apparent. Dr. Coit encouraged cricket rather than baseball. The English schoolroom nomenclature, too, was here introduced to the American boy. St. Paul's still has "forms," but the "removes," "evensong" and "matins" of Dr. Coit's time are now forgotten. Most of the boys in the four upper forms have separate rooms. The young boys have "alcoves" in the dormitories similar to the "cubicles" of many of the English public schools. This custom here first introduced in the American private schools has been followed by Groton, St. Mark's and other schools.

So awe-inspiring a man was Dr. Coit that only in recent years have his old pupils been able to write of him realistically. Owen Wister describes him as "a stern, sad man in clerical black, born seven hundred years later than the days of his spiritual kin." Arthur Stanwood Pier, now a member of the faculty, in his history of the school reviewed in an earlier edition of this Handbook, speaks of him "in character and zeal and temperament very like the man of wrath, John Brown . . . a ruthless fanatic." To John Brown whose aims and "actions he abhorred . . . his soul was akin." Following Dr. Coit's death, his brother Joseph Howland Coit, who had been vice rector since 1865, carried on, and later the Rev. Henry Ferguson, a St. Paul's "old boy."

Samuel Smith Drury was rector from 1911 for over quarter of a century. Priest, preacher and writer, a man of compulsive type, of great driving force, to his boys he was sternly aloof, to his aides an inspiration and a saintly man. During a period of exhaustive search for a new rector, following Dr. Drury's death in 1938, Henry C. Kittredge, one of two vice-rectors, son of the famous Harvard Shakespearean "Kitty", and author of several books on Cape Cod, was acting head for a year and a half.

Though St. Paul's boys no longer play the English game they are fully aware of what is "cricket." "Quite uncritical in his outlook," Mr. Pier says, the St. Paul boy goes out into the world with "an eagerness to join in some common effort for the good of all—if only some one will direct him where that common effort is being made! Again a qualification that indicates there may be something lacking in a school spirit that is solely one of cheerful cooperation." The largest of the Church boarding schools, St. Paul's enrolls over four hundred boys, some receiving partial remission of tuition or full scholarships. At times as many as thirty-five per cent of the boys enrolled have been sons of alumni, and on the long waiting list are about a fifth such.

It will seem to many an advantage that Dr. Nash, who came to St. Paul's as head master in 1939, prepared at a public high school in his native city. After Harvard he entered the Episcopal Theological Seminary where his father had long served. There, on the faculty, he established a reputation for broad-minded liberal teaching. At St. Paul's he early instituted, among other innovations, a department of Public Affairs with an instructor who devoted his full time to non-credit courses on social, economic, political and international problems, which developed in the second year to a credit course on Contemporary American Society. Aware of a changing world, his cheer, warmth and understanding have already brought new life and vitality to this largest of the Church boarding schools.

With wide, elm-shaded streets and an air of undisturbed tranquillity, Exeter resembles perhaps more than any other New England town an English provincial village. The second oldest town in the state, it was the seat of the legislature during the Revolutionary War and is still the county seat. The port of Exeter is on the tidal Exeter river that flows into Great Bay at Portsmouth fourteen miles away. The buildings of Phillips Exeter Academy are set on a spacious campus on either side of Front Street. The main building, designed by Cram and Ferguson in 1915, is a reproduction in brick and marble of the smaller building erected in 1794. The Plimpton Playing Fields extend from Court Street to the river, across which are the Plimpton Fields Beyond. Bordering on Front Street is the sixteen acre campus of Robinson Seminary, and Emerson School on High Street adjoins the Exeter campus near the stadium.

Encouraged by the immediate success of Phillips Academy at Andover, John Phillips established in his home town in New Hampshire a new academy which was opened in 1783. William Woodbridge was preceptor for the first five years. Benjamin Abbot, the second in charge, bore the title principal. He was trained at Andover under Principal Pearson and ruled over the institution with great power and wisdom for fifty years. Daniel Webster came to him for schooling in 1796. In 1838 Gideon L. Soule, who had already been a teacher in the school for seventeen years, succeeded Dr. Abbot, and in 1872 the fiftieth year of his continuous service in the academy was celebrated. Harlan P. Amen in his eighteen years from 1895 by strong and sympathetic leadership brought Exeter again to her ancient standards.

There were strong men on the faculty, too, none more famous than "Bull" Wentworth, the terror of whose name extended into other school rooms through his innumerable mathematics textbooks. Such men gave Exeter the reputation of being faculty controlled, more democratic than Andover which then was under autocratic dominance. No theological seminary as at Andover held to strict orthodoxy, so there was freedom to question. For generations graduates resorted chiefly to the less godly and more liberal Harvard. All these things may have prompted President Eliot to characterize Exeter as "one of the most precious institutions of the country."

Exeter influenced teaching at other schools and established a pattern that remains almost unchanged. But today the school catalog emphasizes, "the simplicity of an old New England village; the austerity of Puritan schoolmasters; the . . . earnestness and self-reliance of boys who earn their way," rather than the ancient maxims long repeated, "Exeter is still a hard school," "the process of learning is in the main irksome," "the pupil should bear the laboring oar," "from the past comes the ancient Exeter tradition of thoroughness, accuracy, and severity." The tradition of rugged democracy is made much of,—to bring out that there is no conscious distinction between rich and poor.

Dr. Perry, who comes of a distinguished educational family long associated with Williams College, has served as head master for over quarter of a century. Broadly tolerant, he fosters an unusual freedom of attitude and speech among the students. A gracious after dinner speaker, he is also in demand at commencements. Under him there has been a great expansion and reconstruction of the school plant. Harkness millions in 1931 brought many new brick structures and the Harkness Plan,—small groups of students about oval tables,—since adopted by a number of other schools.

But Exeter in its greatness transcends any time or group. Its able faculty and the Harvard tradition continue to attract from the best of the nation's product.

The school had its beginnings in a Methodist coeducational academy established in Northfield. Under Dr. Coons, in charge since 1935, former minister of a Methodist church in Boston and instructor in Boston University, a liberal arts junior college was developed and the work of the grades discontinued.

Mr. Kingsley came to the old Montpelier Seminary in 1938, raised scholastic standards, put the plant in order, trebled the enrollment, and in 1939 remade the school into a four year junior college with a new name, continuing courses inaugurated in 1936. The needs of high school graduates are met through a great variety of practical terminal courses. A plan of cooperative housekeeping enables women students to live inexpensively by preparing their own meals after a six weeks training course. Established over a century ago at Newbury and transferred to Montpelier in 1866, the seminary was long popular in small towns and rural communities of the state, widening its appeal in recent years.

A delightful old New England town, Andover has long been an educational center, and its substantial Colonial houses are still reminiscent of nineteenth century men of letters. A mile south of the center, crowning Seminary Hill, is the imposing plant of Phillips Academy,—the buildings designed by Charles Platt; the grounds landscaped by Olmsted Brothers. On the campus, outstanding among secondary schools, is still the old Theological Seminary. The Memorial Clock Tower with its carillon is a conspicuous landmark from afar. The buildings of Abbot Academy are grouped about a central green to the west. The plan of an old New England village was followed in laying out Brooks School, on Lake Cochickewick in North Andover.

Established "to regulate the tempers, to improve the taste, to discipline and enlarge minds, and to form the morals of the youth who may be members of it", this first incorporated school for girls in New England was named in honor of Madam Sarah Abbot whose funds made possible the first building. For more than a century it maintained the even tenor of its traditions, undiverted by passing fashions. Daughters, granddaughters, and great-granddaughters of loyal alumnae from every state in the Union turn to Abbot for their schooling. Today under Miss Hearsey, former professor of English at Hollins College, who succeeded Bertha Bailey in 1936, preparation for the leading women's colleges is emphasized, though a five year course with stress on fine and practical arts is offered. The best of the old traditions have been retained, and the school has taken on a more modern slant in social as well as academic phases of the life. Well endowed, the income is devoted to improving the facilities. A new dormitory in 1939, Abbey House, housing the youngest girls, was the first step in a considerable building and remodelling plan. Of the two Phillips academies which have become so distinctive in American education, this at Andover, the older, was founded by Samuel Phillips, who, together with his father and his uncle John, deeded both land and money for the establishment of a school to be opened at Andover, where the grandfather of Samuel Phillips had been head master of the Grammar School. The donors proposed "to lay the foundation of a SCHOOL OR ACADEMY for the purpose of instructing Youth, not only in English and Latin, Grammar, Writing, Arithmetic and those Sciences wherein they are commonly taught; but more especially to learn them the great end and real business of living." Further "it is again declared that the first and principal object of this Institution is the promotion of true piety and virtue."

Opened during the Revolution, the school was incorporated in 1780 with the title Phillips Academy, the first chartered academy in New England. Among its early patrons were Washingtons and Lees from Virginia, as well as Lowells and Quincys from Massachusetts. The first head master, Eliphalet Pearson, had been a classmate of the founder at Dummer and at Harvard. A man of force and commanding presence, he was known to his awed students as "Elephant" Pearson. Later he was professor of Hebrew at Harvard and the Andover Theological Seminary.

When John Adams came in 1810 to the master's throne, twenty-three boys were enrolled. By 1817 the number had increased to a hundred, and during his twenty-three years Dr. Adams admitted 1119 pupils, nearly a fifth of whom became ministers. Under Samuel H. Taylor, a man of picturesque and striking personality, head master from 1837 to 1871, the institution gradually took on its present character. After his death, however, it declined in prestige until it was rejuvenated and brought in touch with modern methods of education by Cecil F. P. Bancroft, principal from 1874 to 1901.

Andover long remained conservative, less influenced by the Unitarian movements which have stirred New England, and perhaps for that reason Andover early became primarily a preparatory school for more conservative Yale rather than Harvard, which soon came under more liberal influences. Of the more than twenty thousand boys that have graduated from the school about sixty per cent have gone to Yale and perhaps twenty per cent to Harvard. Its ten thousand loyal living alumni are organized in numerous associations throughout the country and their continued interest through the years has brought increased endowments and gifts.

First of the head masters to give his whole time to administration was Alfred E. Stearns, in office for thirty years from 1903, alumnus of the Theological Seminary and of Amherst, under whose administration the old primitive austere atmosphere of Andover gave way to a richer life as Thomas Cochran, '90, a Morgan partner, brought wealth to the school to enlarge and beautify the plant, today an ensemble designated 'the loveliest group of buildings in America.' An enlarged teaching staff makes possible smaller classes and close and intimate supervision, though there is no study hall and to the occasional visitor Andover looks like a college. The boys wander from their dormitory rooms across the campus to their recitations. The archæological museum, with its research workers, the art museums with special exhibits, add to the college flavor.

"Feeling the compelling obligation of an endowed secondary school toward its community," Horace Blackmer, editor of the Bulletin and instructor in English, largely through his own initiative in the last few years has developed a series of courses four evenings a week in current events, science, etc., for the townspeople.

Dr. Fuess is a graduate of Amherst, and before accepting the headmastership in 1933 had been instructor in English from 1908, secretary of the alumni fund, editor of the alumni magazine, and secretary for information. The official historian of Andover, he has published a series of biographies of national importance. From the first he has boldly established new policies and strengthened the bonds with the alumni through frequent visits. In numerous addresses all over the country he has displayed versatility, tact, and skill. It is his announced purpose to teach the boy "how to adjust himself to his environment and to remold it to his heart's desire." See page 827.

BOSTON, MASS. Pop 781,188 (1930) 770,816 (1940).

Once the literary center of the nation and the hub of the universe, Boston remains a city of individuality, with the provincial flavor of an old English town. It is also one of the world's greatest Irish Catholic cities, with expensive vicissitudes of inefficient government. The older residents no longer live in Boston, but have moved to the beautiful country round about, where they have created a life more English than the Philadelphians, less cosmopolitan than the New Yorkers. But the glamour of this lovely old city is still such that those that live within fifty miles boast that they are Bostonians. The older families, who are not residents of the municipality, show a somewhat veiled contempt for other centers of the country that have outstripped their own in population and prestige. It takes about three generations of trustee wealth to make an old Boston family, though their roots may reach back to almost any time or place. The older families of today are descendants of the men who poured in from the smuggling centers to the north when the loyal followers of the king, who had made their wealth in the slave labor of the West Indies, left with Lord Howe in 1776. The China trade and later exploitation of western railroads and, after the war, mortgaging the South, have maintained their revenue. Satirical novelists delight in portraying the later scions of decayed Boston families. But still there are bred about Boston a superior lot of tall, tanned, horsey or sea-going god-like men of little brain.

The trustee wealth of past generations, acting through financial institutions in conjunction with the wealth of the Catholic hierarchy, makes profitable political brokerage with those that run the machinery of government. Boston still awaits the civic house cleaning that has purged New York. The best that has been done yet is to gloss over and cover up. The per capita cost of government remains at the top.

Boston was once foremost in education, and on its Board of Education served Puritan aristocrats, nationally known. Today one still holds out against his colleagues who regard the Board as a political training school. But Boston still remains a great student center. Today the higher institutions of learning in the city, Boston University (Methodist), Boston College and Emmanuel (Catholic), Northeastern and Simmons; across the Charles, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Harvard, and Radcliffe; on the outer fringes, Tufts and Wellesley, together with the junior colleges and the professional and vocational schools enroll some 50,000 students.

The private secondary schools in the Back Bay and the Fenway have dwindled in number as the wealthier Bostonians have moved out of the city. Brookline, the Newtons, Wellesley, Dedham, Weston, Waltham, Cambridge, Belmont, and Concord all have their private schools, separately treated.

The equivalent of two years of college is usually required for admission to this school whose primary object is the training of nursery school teachers. The curriculum includes some courses dealing with children of kindergarten age. The school is affiliated with Boston University School of Education where some of the courses are taken, and practice work is done in the affiliated demonstration nursery school on Ruggles Street and in various other nursery schools in and near Boston. Miss Eliot is discriminating in her choice of students, annually rejecting many applicants. Summer courses are available.

Some nine years after the founding of Harvard College this oldest endowed secondary school in the United States was established to prepare boys for that institution. Its work has continued without interruption. John Eliot, "Apostle to the Indians," when minister of the First Church of Roxbury, signed a statement with others of the town that they, "in consideration of their religious care of posterity, have taken into consideration how necessary the education of their children in literature will be, to fit them for public service, both in Church and Commonwealth, in succeeding ages. They, therefore, unanimously have consented and agreed to erect a free school in the said Town of Roxbury." In 1671 Thomas Bell, formerly a freeman of Roxbury, died in London, willing two hundred acres of Roxbury lands to the school and naming the Rev. John Eliot and two other officers of the First Church as trustees of the endowment.

"The Free Schoole in Roxburie," as it was called, was not then free in the sense of being supported by uniform taxation or free from all tuition fees. But today the school is free to twenty boys in each entering class who live within the limits of the original town of Roxbury.

William C. Collar, for more than half a century connected with the school, in his long career attained a national position in the educational world. Appointed a master in 1857 and head master in 1867, he resigned in 1907 and died in 1916. D. O. S. Lowell, a graduate of Bowdoin, became a master in the school in 1884 and was head master from 1909 to his retirement in June, 1921. Daniel V. Thompson, who came from Lawrenceville as his successor, maintained the high scholastic standards. It was in his regime that the school moved to its present site. Following his death in 1932 the trustees selected as his successor Mr. Northrop, once head of Brearley, and later of the Chicago Latin School for Boys.

The oldest institution in New England for the higher education of women, Bradford was established as an academy by the parishioners of the Congregational Church of the town of Bradford and until 1836 was coeducational. The school has been fortunate throughout its history in having on its board of trustees men and women of unusual capacity and devotion to the interests of Bradford. Alice Freeman Palmer long took active interest. The unusual advantages early drew students from all over New England, but for many decades the patronage has been national. During the century and more of its existence nearly ten thousand students have attended the school. The strong personality of Laura A. Knott, principal from 1901 to 1918, was long stamped on the life and work of the school. With Marion Coats, principal from 1918 to 1927, the great impetus toward the graduate courses began, culminating in 1930 in the acceptance of Bradford as a junior college member of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Under Katharine M. Denworth, president from 1927 to 1939, standards were raised, the faculty strengthened, first steps taken in an extensive building campaign, and courses multiplied so that since 1934 only work of college grade has been given. After exhaustive search for a successor, the trustees in 1940 called Miss Bell from the faculty of Oberlin College. See page 957.

One of the most widely known and successful progressive schools, Beaver has come to be socially accepted by discriminating Boston families. Liberal minded parents, desirous of bringing to Boston more progressive educational methods than were then available, called Dr. Smith, who had successfully developed the Park School in Baltimore, to organize a similar school here. He has been extraordinarily successful and has added constantly to the activities and plant of the school. Since 1931 the upper classes have been limited to girls. Among the many features unusual in secondary schools are the courses in instrumental and vocal music for which school credit is given, opportunities for instruction in the decorative arts and sciences, the kitchens in which girls are given experience under home conditions, a completely equipped theatre and beautiful art and library quarters. Most of the girls go on to the major colleges, many without taking Board examinations through the school's connection with the eight year study plan of the Progressive Education Association. A department for training apprentice teachers, many of them recent college graduates, has been in operation since the early days of the school. A small boarding department was opened in 1936. After his death in 1923 it was incorporated and has since been carried on by men who had been with him for many years and had helped to make the reputation of the school. Among them is Mr. Hall, long treasurer and member of the board, director since 1937. Though primarily a preparatory school for boys, both resident and day, the school enrolls a limited number of day girls, some daughters of alumni. Summer sessions are conducted both in Cambridge and on Cape Cod. See page 843.

The present open site near the Charles river has been occupied since 1926.

CONCORD, MASS. Alt 121 ft. Pop 7477 (1930) 7972 (1940).

Concord still thrives on the reputation made for it by Hawthorne, Emerson, Thoreau, and the Alcotts, and has long been attractive as a place of residence to a certain type of Bostonese. It is a literary shrine with the significance in America of England's Stratford or Germany's Weimar. A mecca of the patriotic, here was fired the "shot heard round the world." And here Thoreau in jail wrote his "Civil Disobedience" which through Tolstoi and Gandhi shook to their foundations the world's greatest empires.

Its schools are in no way revolutionary. Concord Academy occupies the former Samuel Hoar estate and the adjacent property on Main Street. The Fenn School is on Monument Street, about half a mile from the bridge. Thomas Whitney Surette's summer music school has been held for some years in Concord Academy. Three miles from the center of the town are the brick Colonial buildings and spacious grounds of Middlesex School.

Frederick Winsor at the turn of the century established Middlesex School with the aid of his brother, a Boston banker, and a group of Harvard colleagues, after serving as a master at Taft and Exeter, and for three years as head master of Gilman in Baltimore, the pioneer country day school. Eclectically he combined the English house system, first introduced at Lawrenceville, with some of the features of the church schools of England. From the first the school maintained satisfactory college entrance standards but with a wider outlook, as evidenced by the courses in music and the fine arts. Each member of the graduating class carves a panel for the assembly hall. In the middle thirties, to aid in recruiting pupils from a distance, Mr. Winsor traveled extensively, introducing his plan of competitive prize scholarships in the more distant states. Retiring in 1939, he died early in 1941. Mr. Terry, who succeeded, had been associate principal for a year and for some time previous assistant head master of Noble and Greenough. Tall and rangy, handsome and engaging, Mr. Terry is one of the half dozen "Grotties" who have been made heads of preparatory schools in recent years. As it becomes possible to pension the superannuated and build staff, he has every prospect of becoming one of the nation's leading private school men.

Beautiful old Colonial houses and quiet broad streets characterize this historic town which stretches along a terrace above the Connecticut. As early as 1896 the crafts movement was taken up here and interesting exhibits of local work may be seen. One of the nation's great secondary schools, Deerfield is the creation of Mr. Boyden. Fresh from Amherst he came to head Dickinson Academy, the local high school housed in an ugly brick building. Today Mr. Boyden is one of the most influential men in secondary school education, playing an important part in the reorganization and planning of other schools. Former masters trained by him are following in his footsteps as head masters elsewhere. So great has been the confidence and friendliness felt for Mr. Boyden that in 1924 when the school through state statute lost the support of the town, heads of schools like Exeter, Taft and Andover cooperated in his appeal for funds for the present beautiful equipment. Here Mr. Boyden was the first to work out a successful system of athletics for all. Social community activities and general participation in dramatics are made use of to train and develop the personality of each boy. Unusual, unconventional and natural are such features as the Sunday evening sings, and surveys and published reports by students on the geology of the country round about. The Amherst-Williams-Dartmouth tradition is strong, though an increasing number of graduates enter the 'big three' by Board examinations,—thirty-five or so each year. Mr. Boyden selects from his candidates the type he can develop with greatest success. Both he and Mrs. Boyden, who has long taught science and mathematics, have known individually each boy in the school. See page 837.

A century ago Samuel Williston, wealthy manufacturer of the town, took the radical step of establishing and endowing an academy in which science, mathematics and English were to be held as honorable and to be pursued with as much thoroughness as the ancient classics. Josiah Clark, principal from 1849 to 1863, established classical courses, but under his successor, Marshall Henshaw, principal until 1876, Mr. Williston's ideal of a school was realized. Of the more than ten thousand who have attended the school about a third have entered colleges and universities; a fifth, the learned professions. Its teachers have gone on to college presidencies and professorships, and half a score have become principals of other schools. Mr. Galbraith, who succeeded Joseph Sawyer in 1919, had been a master at Middlesex School for nearly twenty years. He has broadened the appeal, modernized the outlook as well as the plant, and brought the standards up to those of the efficient college preparatory schools.

WILLISTON JUNIOR SCHOOL, with its own head master, E. R. Clare, has been maintained as a separate unit since 1916. It offers work of the fifth through the eighth grades and has its own faculty of five. The majority of the boys enter the senior school. See page 835.

"Groton has been a Church school, believing profoundly in the power of the Spirit and in the duty of service being passed from generation to generation by personal intimate contact . . .," wrote Frank Davis Ashburn, alumnus and now head of Brooks School, in "Fifty Years On," published 1934. "For at least twenty-five years the texts and courses gave no hint that there had been men before Adam, that Charles Darwin and Andrew D. White, to name only two, had confronted established religion with the most startling challenge since Martin Luther . . . The code is strict, in some respects almost monastic . . . The question of the possible psychological cramping of a boy by too much of it is more serious. . . . The single spot in which the cramping has been most felt has been the spiritual. Individuals feel that there has been too much dogmatism and not enough reason; too much chapel and not enough freedom of thought."

Founded by Endicott Peabody for the cultivation of "manly Christian character, having regard to the moral and physical as well as intellectual development", the school was at first exotic and has perhaps failed of its great possibilities through too much inbreeding. Mr. Peabody's school has brought nurture, intellectual pap, and a spirit of aristocratic democracy not only to leading families but to some of the socially ambitious. Some two thirds of the boys enrolled are sons of "Grotties", including sixteen Roosevelts whose native talent for publicity has rather spoiled the seclusion long sedulously sought. For the past quarter century this has been somewhat changed by eight scholarship boys admitted annually on competitive examination,—boys who conform to type but who for economic or other reasons would have been barred from entering.

Mr. Peabody retired in 1940, but his lengthened shadow and the English practices he introduced still linger. A head prefect and six prefects are appointed annually from the upper form. They exercise a considerable measure of influence on the student body, which develops responsibility in the holders of these offices and lessens the load of the masters. The boys at Groton do not have separate rooms; all except the prefects live in cubicles. Denied their accustomed luxuries of living, they wash in cold water in tin basins. The two upper forms are provided with studies and the lower forms study at desks in large school-rooms.

Open-minded in introducing innovations in advance of his peers, particularly in the last few decades, Mr. Peabody added to the curriculum printing, woodworking, science in all its forms, music and drawing. The plan to have masters and boys live intimately together is perhaps more fully carried out by some of "Peabo's" old boys who, today in their thirties and forties, through his influence head such outstanding preparatory schools as Westminster, Middlesex, Belmont Hill, Holderness, Millbrook, among others. It is to his honor that some may have improved on his technique.

John Crocker, the new head, comes from the numerous family of Crockers of Fitchburg who for several generations have made paper and made the town. Fifteen of their sons have gone to Groton. Mr. Crocker after Harvard attended Oxford and Yale and was ordained at the Episcopal Theological School. He taught first at Andover and for ten years from 1930 was student chaplain at Princeton. Upstanding, wholesome, outspoken and inspiring, he recognizes the sound foundation on which he has to build, and the changed conditions he has to meet.

One of the early coeducational private schools in America, Derby has been continuously operated since 1791. Reorganized in 1922, under John R. P. French, now at Cambridge School, a new site was purchased and a country day program inaugurated. Under Mr. Davis, formerly head of Evans School, Arizona, who succeeded George F. Cherry in 1938, the school has benefited by the recent influx of families with young children so that, unlike many day schools today, enrollment at Derby is increasing.

This business administration institution for boys of college age is heir to the endowment and property of Leicester, one of the oldest academies in the country, which functioned as the local high school until 1921, and was leased to the town until 1939. The estate of the late Colonel Samuel E. Winslow, president of the board, was acquired by the trustees for resident students; the modern school building and gymnasium used for classwork. Mr. Tiffany, with experience at Nichols Junior College, was more recently instructor in business economics at Simmons College. See page 974.

Tabor is an unusual school, the creation of Mr. Lillard. Here he has built a successful college preparatory school which through boat building, sailing, weekend cruises in the school schooner, Easter cruises to the West Indies, and summer cruises to Central America and formerly to Europe, offers unusual incentives to good work. The sea had always made a strong appeal to Mr. Lillard, a master at Andover until 1916, and in the local academy at Marion he saw the possibilities of a boys school in which he could make use of the old New England seafaring traditions. Long interested in the interchange of students between American preparatory schools and those of England, France and Germany, he inaugurated the International Schoolboy Fellowship in 1927, and for years has enrolled a considerable number of foreign students. In his work he is now assisted by a son as director of admissions. The summer term is open to students from other schools as well as Tabor boys. See page 833.

High academic standing and a fortunate situation near the estates of some of the older Boston families have made the academy in recent years one of the country's leading preparatory schools. It draws the majority of its students from local families, although as a result of special effort to recruit from further afield, about half the residents come from outside Massachusetts. Contacts of boarders with Milton homes are encouraged. The Harvard tradition is strong, although the school encourages boys who wish to enter other colleges.

As early as 1798 steps were taken by residents of Milton to establish a local academy which finally opened in 1807 and was conducted uninterruptedly until 1866 when, on the establishment of a town high school, it was closed. In 1885, on a new site, the academy reopened, remaining coeducational until 1901. Under Harrison Otis Apthorp it won national prominence. Mr. Field, a naturalist and entomologist of scientific training, who took over the school in 1914, has fostered a science club and a War Memorial Foundation which provides conferences and lectures.

MILTON ACADEMY GIRLS SCHOOL provides in Hathaway and Goodwin Houses for two score girls in residence. Miss Faulkner has been principal since 1928, succeeding Sarah S. Goodwin, long in charge.

THE MARGARET THACHER SCHOOL superseded in 1940 the Lower School of Milton Academy and two local schools for young children,—Brush Hill established 1898, and the more closely affiliated Milton Preparatory School. From the first Mount Hermon has afforded abundant opportunity for a boy to secure an education or preparation for college. Established to make thorough secondary schooling available for the poor boys of the time, the school in the early years required daily work on the farm or in the buildings. Today each boy works ten hours a week. With decreased interest from investments the rate has been gradually increased and today about ten per cent of the boys pay up to $700, which permits the acceptance of others for whom even the minimum rate is impossible. The founder's rigorous ideals and ideas of life and training for the guidance of youth continued under Dr. Henry Franklin Cutler, principal from 1890 to 1932. He was succeeded by the late Elliott Speer, a man of liberal religious views, who had been president of The Northfield Schools from 1926. He inaugurated policies quite different from some held by the conservative fundamentalists then on the faculty. Horizons have continued to broaden under Dr. Porter, long active in the larger work of the Y.M.C.A., whom Mr. Speer brought to the school in 1934 to head the Bible department. The post of head master to which he was elected in 1935 he retains under the presidency of Dr. Park. See page 834.

Berkshire is the creation of and centers around its founder, the present head master, under whom it has enjoyed a consistent and solid growth. From the first, Mr. Buck's masterful and buoyant personality dominated the school and found expression in vigorous and wholesome ideals. Mrs. Buck has played a vital role in the life of the school. In recent years some of the administrative details have been passed on to an assistant head, Albert Keep. The sincerity of the atmosphere and the efficiency of the simple organization command admiration. Boys come from all over the country; the youngest have single rooms, the upper class boys may have single or double rooms with a common study and are given considerable liberty and responsibility to bridge the gap from school to college. The school achieves much more than mere college preparation, though this is met in a scholarly and efficient way. See page 841.

A church school of the parental type, St. Mark's carries on all its activities under one roof. It was founded by Joseph Burnett, inspired by the success of St. Paul's and by the desire to have a similar school in his native town of Southborough. Assured of prestige from the first, it developed steadily in strength and efficiency under the capable management of William E. Peck, head master from 1882 to 1894. His successor, Rev. Dr. William G. Thayer who remained in charge until 1930, zealously maintained the ideals of the school. The life remained intimate, proscribed; admission rigidly restricted; but in his later years Dr. Thayer became liberal and progressive.

From its opening St. Mark's has had a system of monitors, six or seven boys chosen from the sixth form who "are the representatives of the school, have certain duties and a general oversight of the life of the boys. They are supposed to stand for the school ideals and to exert their influence and leadership." This is now the center of a student council. Upper school boys have separate rooms. The three lower forms live in dormitories with windowed alcoves.

Dr. Parkman of the historical Boston family, an old St. Mark's boy and an Overseer of Harvard where he spent five years after graduation in study and administrative work, has been head master since 1930. He has brought a new alertness and straightforwardness which have won friends in every direction, has enriched the life and the curriculum with elective courses in music, politics, poetry. Military training, with elementary instruction in navigation, radio, gas engines, first aid, weather and map work, has more recently been introduced. The school now appeals to others than sons of alumni, and provides a few full scholarships each year for boys of promise.

This oldest secondary boarding school in the country was established by William Dummer, Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts, who in 1761 bequeathed his house and farm at By-field for the purpose. Two years later the school opened under the celebrated Samuel Moody who made it a grammar school of the earlier type. Here were prepared for Harvard many boys who later became prominent in the life of the nation, including the founder of Andover. It was an unimportant local academy when Charles S. Ingham took over early in the century, and not until 1930 with the coming of Mr. and Mrs. Eames, who had been at Deerfield with Mr. Boyden, did it enter upon its present era of life and vigor. They brought youth, enthusiasm, and steadfastness of purpose to the building of a new school on the old, modernized the name, added to the acreage and buildings, and made it one of the important secondary schools of the country. Boys are encouraged through their own labors and effort to contribute to the material welfare of the school, and their initiative has supplemented the efforts of the head master in raising the considerable building fund. One of the old New England Baptist academies, Worcester, under the direction of Dr. D. W. Abercrombie for thirty-six years from 1882, was reorganized as a boys school and as such gained a national reputation. From 1918 the school was directed by Samuel Foss Holmes as head master and George Dudley Church as registrar. Mr. Wade, long a teacher in the school and for some years in charge of alumni relations, became head in 1933. A man of energy and intelligence, he has reduced the school debt, united the alumni, and increased the enrollment.

Once famous as a shipping town and during the second half of the nineteenth century the summer social capital of the country, Newport is now dominated by the War College, the Naval Training School, and the Torpedo Station. Here is the oldest Jewish Synagogue in the country, built in 1760. On Training Station Road is the new St. Michael's School. Founded as the School of St. Gregory the Great, this is modeled after and follows the traditions of English schools of the order like Downside and Ampleforth. A daughter house of the Abbey of Fort Augustus of Scotland, the priory is under the English Congregation of St. Benedict, but both priory and school are American in personnel. Here boys from discriminating Catholic families are trained for college and for life. Father Diman, prior of the community until 1940, was the founder and long head master of the neighboring St. George's. To his personal interest and administrative genius is largely due the growth and prosperity of the school. His keen and flexible mind, his sweet and calm serenity, make a strong appeal. Founded by the Rev. John B. Diman who later established Portsmouth Priory School, during the administration of Stephen P. Cabot, a master in the school from 1901, and head master from 1917, St. George's went through a period of great material growth. The alumni took an increasing interest in the school, evidenced by St. George's Clubs at the three great universities to which the majority of the boys go. Mr. Cabot "ultimately resigned on religious grounds" in 1926. Those who know the school are impressed with the beauty of the setting and the matchlessness of the architecture. Under the control of Bishop

James De Wolf Perry, Mr. Merrick, for thirteen years a master at St. Paul's School, was brought to St. George's as head master in 1928. He has won the support of influential church people, and, interested in athletics, is popular with his boys.

In founding this school, Mrs. John Wallace Riddle had in mind making educational use of many of the characteristic features of old New England farm life and activities. Not only in educational plan is the school her concept but, a talented architect, designer of Westover School, she devoted ten years of her life and most of her wealth to the planning and building of the school and its setting. The varied and extensive acreage provides opportunity for forestry, fishing, and hunting. The boys participate as citizens in all operations of the community. They are given opportunities in music, art, and the applied arts and an unusually strong faculty prepares them adequately for college. Levings Hooker Somers, former head master of the Adirondack-Florida School, head of mathematics here for some years, acted as provost on the retirement of the Rev. Percy G. Kammerer early in 1940. Mr. Stabler took residence in 1941 after some years as chaplain and member of the faculty at the University of Pennsylvania. Extended travel and conferences throughout the country have given him a broad view of the nation. At Avon he looks forward to opportunities to make religion a more vital part of the life of his boys. Dr. Boris, lecturer in education at Harvard Summer School and the New School for Social Research, published in 1936 "The Ideal School" which gives some understanding of the ends towards which they are working. With new buildings and equipment and a larger enrollment, the school is making an increasing appeal to Gentile families in the neighborhood. See page 945.

Sarah Porter, sister of President Porter of Yale, in the eighty-seven years of her life made this school preeminent as the "result of her own unusual character. She gave to hundreds of the best born women of the land that poise and stability of character, that combination of learning and good manners, which is a mark of the noblest American womanhood." From 1900 the school was continued by her nephew, Robert Porter Keep, and later by Mrs. Keep who had been a pupil. Since 1917 their son and his wife, who had previously been at Andover, have carried on. As the school approaches its centenary there has been some modernization. A current events lecture is given every two weeks, and girls may use lipstick if they wish on Saturday after luncheon when boys call on them at Mrs. Keep's house. Sunday afternoon bible classes have been discontinued and for the geometry once required girls may take business arithmetic, including bookkeeping. College preparation has recently been provided for, and the cultural finishing courses for older girls, long characteristic, have been reorganized along junior college lines. Daughters of devoted alumnae are still housed in the same venerable houses along the same village street and are well prepared for the kind of lives their mothers live, with the same sense of security and solidity, unaware of change.

Vitalized by the vigorous and inspiring personality of Miss Langley, principal since 1922, this colorful school derives from the educational principles of Parker and Dewey and a busy hum of activity pervades. An interested and devoted board have made it possible for her to incorporate in the curriculum various attractive features, among them a training school for teachers. Boys and girls and an unusually attractive group of men and women, who constitute the faculty, work together unceasingly and happily toward common ends. The school catalog is produced in the printing shop, in charge of a veteran printer. An observatory was almost wholly constructed by the pupils, under guidance. The phrase, "the life of the school", is meaningful here. Everyone lives intensely, with the one end of accomplishment. But scholastic work is not neglected, and graduates are in leading eastern colleges and universities. See page 943.

Miss Ruutz-Rees, of English birth and education, a naturalized citizen of this country in which she has lived since 1883, with degrees from Columbia as well as St. Andrew's, established this school in Wallingford on the Choate Farm, moving to Greenwich in 1900. Broad scholarship, a masculine grasp of mind, keen human interest in her girls, her graduates and alumnae, an unusual teacher who used the classics to inspire her pupils—she created a school unlike any other. Miss Lowndes, skilled horsewoman, literary scholar, was co-head from 1910 until 1938. A distinctive flavor is given the school by the number of married faculty and staff members, many with children of their own. Here is no narrow conventual atmosphere. The intellectual and physical life is robust and well supervised. A pupil must pass examinations qualifying her for the major colleges, Bryn Mawr, Vassar, Smith, Wellesley, to receive the school diploma. Rosemary has much suggestive of English girls schools in the customs, the fostered traditions, the classical terminology, the stress on walking or "bounding", the uniforms, the faculty teaching in academic gowns. Boys are encouraged to come to the school for Sunday calls and an occasional dance. Since 1937 Mrs. Jessup, a Rosemary graduate, and Mrs. Evers who formerly had her own school in Italy, have shared executive responsibility. See page 911.

HARTFORD, CONN. Alt 38 ft. Pop 164,072 (1930) 166,267 (1940).

Well laid out parks and substantial public buildings early made Hartford, the capital of the state, the model and inspirer of many cities that have since improved upon it. On the Connecticut river fifty miles from Long Island Sound, here are the home offices of many of the large national insurance companies, so every fire alarm is heard in Hartford and every obituary brings tears to the eyes of its leading citizens. But the river floods periodically wash away all tears and other things. The city wears an air of complacent repose, but the vigor of its life pulsates in new extensions to the north and west and blossoms periodically in a beautiful bridge or a notable building. When Mark Twain, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and Charles Dudley Warner lived here, Hartford well maintained literary pretensions. Trinity College, started patriotically as Washington College in 1823, became Episcopal under its present name in 1845. Hillyer Junior College is in the Y.M.C.A. building opposite the capitol; Kingswood, Oxford and Highland in West Hartford.

Simplicity, self reliance, and directness of purpose still characterize Kent, although it has become one of the nation's great schools. When the Rev. Frederick H. Sill started in the one farmhouse, the plan of self-help by which the boys do practically all the work was developed,— a system which has since been modified and copied by many other boys schools. The simple and severe Norman chapel is an architectural gem, but the religious life remains actual and sincere as in the early days when, sweaty in their soiled smocks from the fields, the school knelt before the improvised altar. For more than thirty years Father Sill devoted his whole life to his boys. He still lived simply, serving tea in his attic study each afternoon to the seniors, although devoted patrons had given a million dollars for the architecturally impressive plant. As coach and coxswain of the crew, he took Kent School boys to Henley every three years, which won renown for the school. There is no time at Kent for boys to wander. There are duties and varied activities indoors and out. And the demand for places is such that only the studious and earnest boy who will respond to the religious atmosphere should seek admission. Money is non-essential, for the school maintains a sliding scale of charges, assessing parents enough to meet the year's budget, in accordance with their ability to pay, from almost nothing to $1500. Father Chalmers, on the staff for two years as assistant chaplain and acting head master, takes over in June, 1941, on Father Sill's retirement.

Yale and Hotchkiss have from the first been intimately associated. Edward G. Coy, the first head master, a graduate of Yale, had served at the old Phillips Academy in Andover and brought with him much of the atmosphere of Andover. The trustees, too, have usually been Yale men, and Frederick S. Jones, president today, was for years Dean of Yale College. The graduates have generally shown preference for Yale, though in recent years the number entering other colleges has greatly increased and now a large delegation is sent yearly to Princeton and many enter Harvard, Williams, and M. I. T., and a few Amherst, Cornell and midwestern universities.

Bearing the name of its founder, Maria H. Hotchkiss, widow of the inventor of the famous machine gun, who provided plant and endowment, it was under Dr. Huber Gray Buehler, affectionately known as "The King", that the school developed its present sturdy character. Each year the King declared "there is only one rule in this school, Be a gentleman!" and the implications of this one rule cast a shade of responsibility over the previously unruffled brows of those lads from homes of wealth where pleasure dominated. Under Dr. Buehler's direction Hotchkiss became recognized as one of the foremost preparatory schools of the country. Mr. Van Santvoord, old Hotchkiss boy, Rhodes scholar, in 1926 was appointed head master after teaching at Winchester School, England, at Yale and at the University of Buffalo. Under him the plant has been improved; the Spartan simplicity and intensity of the life relaxed. Physical welfare and athletics for health and recreation, forestry and winter sports are stressed. The curriculum has been broadened and the finer things of life, art and music, are encouraged. Broadened too in the last few years has been the scope of the head master's activities. Mr. Van Santvoord is on the board of a number of neighboring schools and in 1938 was elected a member of the Yale Corporation.

Established by Mary R. Something between a saint and a snob, she fostered a reputation for exclusiveness. Chapel, choir, confirmation play a large part in the life of the school. Carrying over from the Hillard days, there is charity work in support of a visiting nurse and the Grenfell Mission. Under Miss Dillingham, head mistress since 1933, Westover is no longer merely a finishing school. This ancient academy, established on the bequest of Edward Hopkins, seven times governor of Connecticut Colony, entered upon a new era with the appointment of Dr. Lovell as rector in 1916. Breaking with the two century academic routine, he revised, expanded, and enriched the classical curriculum, and when the school moved to its present site in 1925 inaugurated a full country day program. He has built up a faculty unusual in its breadth of experience. Some are of foreign birth, others have studied and traveled abroad. For its first fifty years the school sent its graduates on to Harvard. After Yale came into existence it naturally prepared chiefly for that institution and more than fourteen hundred of its students have graduated from that college. From 1795 to 1921 every president of Yale was associated with Hopkins as graduate, rector, or trustee.

This school is historically a connecting link between the academy and the high school. The movement to establish a free academy met with great opposition, for many at the time opposed free education beyond the elementary schools. The orators of the day were enlisted, including Daniel Webster, and the agitation which resulted did much to further the development of the high school system, but in Norwich no high school was established. Though amply endowed, the Free Academy planned as early as 1846 and incorporated in 1854 makes a nominal charge. Henry A. Westminster today carries out the ideals of Mr. Milliken, graduate of Groton, senior master at Brooks School from its establishment until 1936. Westminster boys enjoy to an unusual degree contacts with the head master and his family. Informal sports have been introduced and the prefect system revived.

There is some effort to give the boys an understanding of how the school is run, and they may share in the activities of carpenter, gardener, etc., in the upkeep of the school. The musical boy has many opportunities to hear and create, and pleasant social relations are maintained with neighboring schools, boys and girls. College preparatory work is of high standard, and most of the boys enter leading colleges and universities.

Founded by William Lee Cushing, the inspiration of the school lay in the ancient Uppingham School, established 1584, in Rutland, England. Westminster graduates have entered Harvard, Williams, Cornell and other colleges, though the Yale influence has naturally predominated. On Mr. Cushing's retirement in 1920 the head mastership was assumed by L. G. Pettee, still a member of the faculty, who in turn was succeeded by Raymond Richards McOrmond, head master until 1936. Recent improvements and new construction have added to the efficiency and attractiveness of the plant. See page 852.

Louisa Low and her niece, Edith Heywood, took charge in 1883 continuing as far as practicable the policies and ideals of the founder. Mary Rogers Roper, grandniece of Miss Low and niece of Miss Heywood, who had prepared for college at the school, came as instructor in 1916, was later made co-principal, and on Miss Heywood's death in 1927 became head mistress. Following Miss Roper's death in 1939 her sister, Mrs. Fox, associate principal since 1935, took over the direction in cooperation with Miss Tilley, an Englishwoman, a capable executive long on the staff. Thorough scholarship and an interested oversight of all phases of the life of the students have always characterized the school. Resident pupils come from all over the country; the day department has the patronage of leading local families. See page 909.

One of the most prosperous and successful of the more recently established New England preparatory schools, Choate is named for its founder, Judge William Gardner Choate, long a resident of the town. It has come into its fuller life during the able administration of Dr. St. John, head master since 1908, whose good judgment, ready sympathy, and discrimination have been ably supplemented by Mrs. St. John's personal interest in maintaining a friendly, intimate atmosphere. The ideal held up to the unusual corps of masters is to give each boy what he as an individual needs. College entrance is kept in view in planning the courses, but with the flexible system each boy may take subjects chosen from different forms to suit his own needs. However, there is no effort to make the life easy and every legitimate incentive is brought to bear that the boys be held to earnest work. Separate divisions for honor students; special opportunities in art, music, and literature; orthopedic and physical examinations with an individual corrective and athletic program for each boy; and a close personal relationship with the boy's family all play a part in accomplishing Dr. St. John's ideal. Taken over by the Church and incorporated under its present name in 1875, Saint Margaret's grew out of the local Collegiate Institute for Young Ladies. From the first it attracted a discriminating clientele. The spirit of the school today is in large part due to Miss Edell, whose modest but pervasive personality is particularly attractive to the conservative patrons. Distinction has been brought the school by the records of its graduates in the leading colleges which about half of them enter. But the limitations of college preparatory work do not have a restricting influence. For girls preparing for college, as well as those taking the broad general course, extra-curricular activities are encouraged. See page 910.

Forty-six years of his life were given by Horace Dutton Taft to the creation and maintenance of this school. He began life as a lawyer like his two brothers, one of whom became president and chief justice. But teaching drew him in 1887 first to Yale as a tutor in Latin, then, three years later, to his own school. He was a great head master, a tremendous worker, and inspired his boys to work, stamping his personality upon the school. Under him the only salvation was through hard work. But he won confidence by his geniality and large-heartedness, and comradeship in the classroom and on the playground. Mr. Taft retired in 1936 giving the school unconditionally to a self perpetuating board of trustees of which he is a member. Mr. Cruikshank's record at his own Romford School which he established after teaching at Hopkins Grammar and Gunnery, influenced his selection as head master. Under his direction Taft School has grown in enrollment, its debt greatly reduced. About a fourth of the boys continue to come from outside New England and New York, with a considerable number from foreign countries. The courses of study continue intensive, preparing thoroughly for all colleges though nearby Yale casts its shadow.

In 1874 five of the Loomis family drew up a charter for a school on what had been since 1639 the Loomis homestead, "for the free and gratuitous education of all persons of the age of twelve years and upwards to twenty years in all the departments of learning which are now taught or hereafter may be taught in the various grades of schools in this country . . . so far as the funds of the institute will permit." Members of the Loomis family and residents of Windsor were supposed to have preference. The first catalog announced, "The curriculum includes courses leading directly to gainful occupations, as well as those preparatory to college." The agricultural course at that time was planned to provide "sufficient training . . . to enable a graduate who has taken it to start farming at once as a vocation."

The completion of a new social center and dormitory marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the school and Mr. Batchelder's head mastership. Previously at Hotchkiss, in developing the boarding department he has followed the pattern of the best New England preparatory schools, sending most of the boys on to college, though agricultural and business courses are available. The day school was coeducational until 1927, when three houses across the river were acquired and, as Chaffee School, the girls there segregated. For his faculty, Mr. Batchelder has discriminatingly selected young men of larger caliber than are frequently found in schools. An awareness of beauty is due in part to Mrs. Batchelder, the sculptor Evelyn Longman, who maintains her studio on the campus. The student council plans and supervises student activities, affording a measure of self-government which cultivates a sense of responsibility. Pupils share in the useful labor of the school, caring for their own rooms, the classrooms, and the school grounds and athletic fields. The endowment makes numerous scholarships possible.

Second largest city in the state, Buffalo is an important port at the eastern end of Lake Erie. With electric power supplied by Niagara Falls, twenty-one miles north, it maintains many industrial plants, including the largest flour mill and grain elevator in the world. The University of Buffalo, the Albright Art Gallery, together with the schools described here, and some huge Catholic schools, Mary Immaculate and Sacred Heart, are the principal educational institutions. In Snyder, a residential suburb seven miles northeast, is The Park School of Buffalo.

And though the Bible still figures, interest in things political and economic, and in the arts, fine and domestic, is encouraged. There is greater freedom, physical and moral. Offering two years of work at the college level, this junior college has grown out of the school established fifty years ago by May F. Bennett, perhaps the first of her generation of school mistresses to independently maintain her own conception of what was desirable in the education of girls. She developed a school that, in addition to academic work, offered advanced specialized departments to the direction of which she called leading artists. After her death in 1924, the school was carried on in accordance with her wishes by her co-workers, Miss Carroll and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rann Kennedy (Edith Wynne Matthison), the latter in charge of the dramatic arts until 1940. Music, fine arts, the household arts, child training which involves work with the little children in the nursery school laboratory, and the academic work still hold to the standards which early gave Bennett its reputation. See page 959.

Founded as Hope Farm by the Rt. Rev. David H. Practical work supplements the academic, but the courses place emphasis on college preparation.

Interest in the individuality and aptitudes of his boys, success in meeting their needs, and in encouraging real interests in a thoroughly masculine atmosphere have characterized Mr. Pulling's school since he opened it a decade ago with twenty-five boys in the primitive buildings of an old farm. His teaching experience in such dissimilar schools as Groton and Avon Old Farms has resulted in a broad and liberal spirit toward the traditional school activities. Today an enrollment of nearly a hundred, new and adequate buildings that still retain something of the early simplicity, a loyal body of alumni and enthusiastic patrons are some of the fruits of Mr. Pulling's devotion.

Opened as Lebanon School under a board of trustees including head masters of many neighboring schools, this was for eight years under the direction of Charles H. Jones. In 1938 on the death of the president, Charles S. Haight, who had given financial and moral support, Mr. Heyniger purchased the school. Prepared at Lawrenceville for Princeton, after teaching in China and graduate study at Columbia he returned for a short time to Lawrenceville, then had a successful career with General Motors which he gave up in 1936. Two years as assistant to the head at Lawrenceville prepared him for his present work. Re-naming the school for a family prominent among the first Shaker settlers, he restored and renovated grounds and buildings and made extensive changes in personnel and policy. Stressing individual attention to his boys, he has won their liking and the support of their parents.

NEW YORK CITY, N.Y. Pop 6,930,446 (1930) 7,454,995 (1940).

With the war, London has lost so large a proportion of its population that New York has become the greatest aggregation of homo sapiens on the earth's surface. Into its swirling vortex, the sink of a continent, are drawn the restless and ambitious from every state and every country. In their mad rush through its narrow canyons, they seek their pot of gold, fabulous salaries or palatial penthouses. Behind the plate glass windows of Fifth Avenue is displayed the loot of centuries from every land. Here the clash of creative and experimental minds of many ethnic strains has carried man's aspiration and social conscience to new pinnacles. The greatest number of art centers, research laboratories, medical groups and hospitals, bear evidence. With the advent of Roosevelt's ambition to control the world and Hull's purposes to bring "orderly processes everywhere," the purse strings of the nation have passed from Wall Street to Washington.

The handiwork of man changes as rapidly as the populace. Stupendous creations dazzle the outlander,—bridges thrown across great stretches of marsh and water, subways that tunnel through miles of rock and under river. Approaching from the sea, the skyline is the marvel of the continental visitor. The air man, before coming to earth on the new city landing field, sees a citadel of watch towers among estuaries and marshes over which to sprawling suburbs, great viaducts reach fingerlike.

Historically the city of the Dutch, of Tammany, the Vanderastors, of La Guardia, today the native New Yorker is a rarity. The greatest Jewish city in the world, less than half the population are Jews, with half a million Russians and about as many Italians. Salaried executives rear their families in Westchester, Long Island, or Jersey, motoring in on express highways. The great mass of New Yorkers sleep far from midday's maddening crowd and, through underground tubes in which they struggle for place, are belched out and shot up in express elevators to office or loft. Art and book collections perpetuate the fame and fortunes of Rockefeller, Frick, Morgan and Whitney, offering great educational opportunities.

The colleges and universities of the city enroll over a hundred thousand. Undergraduate activities are centered in uptown campuses,—Columbia, Barnard on Morningside Heights; the College of the City of New York a little to the north; New York University and its Hall of Fame on University Heights across the Harlem; Fordham, Catholic, near Bronx Park. Most of the great graduate schools, law, medicine, education, except for Columbia's Teachers College, are scattered about the lower city, especially around Washington Square.

The professional and vocational schools lie generally to the south, between Central Park and 42d Street. The private schools range from the conservative and haughty to the most progressive and radical. Many of the girls schools provide residence for those from a distance who are attracted by the varied musical, dramatic, and other advantages of the metropolis. Some schools lie west of Central Park including two or three of the oldest in the city. But the more recently established schools that appeal to the socially elect are all to the east. Brearley and Chapin are in the reclaimed smart region bordering on the East river.

As a matter of convenience the schools of Long Island, including Brooklyn, are treated as a group. Staten Island schools will be found listed under New York City.

This colorful, well-equipped school in which Miss Parkhurst has for two decades worked out and applied the theories of her widely known Dalton plan, was reorganized in 1939, with the merger of Todhunter School, under an increased board of trustees representing both schools. Todhunter, which originated with Mrs. Randall MacIver's School established at the turn of the century, had been directed from 1927 by Miss Dickerman, whose associate principal up to 1939 was Mrs. Franklin D.
Roosevelt. In the new Dalton Miss Keefe, long on the staff, and Miss Dickerman share administrative duties as associate principals. About ninety per cent of the girls in the upper school, a member of the Progressive Education Association's experimental study group, prepare for college, but not to the exclusion of such practical activities as the nursery project in which they are trained in infant care. The lower school is coeducational.

Broad education on modern lines has always characterized the Horace Mann School. The six year high school for girls and its coeducational elementary department is still housed in the original building in proximity to the parent institution, Teachers College, by which it is controlled and managed. The boys high school removed to a country site in 1914. About ninety per cent of the graduates enter college. The funds that previously supported Lincoln School, it is understood, will now go toward the maintenance of this school through a merger effected after some protest from Lincoln School patrons. At the time of going to press, an exact understanding of conditions is hard to arrive at.

This experimental school owes its origin to Abraham Flexner who in addresses and articles made apparent the need and secured the necessary Rockefeller money. Otis W. Caldwell, director of the school for twenty years, was a leader in the teaching of science in the elementary school. Lester Dix, on the faculty of Teachers College from 1932 and for a number of years associate director with Jesse H. Newlon, was in charge for three years from 1937. Alert, tolerant, open-minded idealist, he has looked for the best in young growing things, wherever he might find it. This great American school which has made important contributions to modern education, especially in the creative arts and literature, and has made available much material in sciences, mathematics, and the social sciences, has evidently come to its end. The trustees of Columbia have apparently succeeded, against the opposition of the school patrons, in diverting the Rockefeller funds to the support of the Horace Mann School, though the two institutions, it is at present believed, will continue their separate existence under a single principal. Specific information can be obtained from Professor Will French of Teachers College.

One of the first country schools to be located near a metropolitan center, Riverdale was established by Mr. Hackett on grounds adjoining Van Cortlandt Park, which despite the growth of the city still have a sense of spaciousness and country surroundings. College preparation has been emphasized from the first, Riverdale students making outstanding records on the C.E.B. examinations, but the curriculum has shown unusual breadth in music and more recently in art. A liberal weekend policy makes it possible for boys who live nearby to keep in touch with their families, and for boys from a distance to enjoy the educational advantages of a world center. Day boys are transported in school buses from Manhattan and Westchester. The entire plant, valued at more than a million dollars, was turned over to a board of trustees in 1925 by Mr. Hackett. Camp Riverdale in the Adirondacks, independently organized, has been maintained since 1912. See page 862.

RIVERDALE SCHOOL OF MUSIC, established in 1922, is affiliated, but has a wide following outside the school. Mr. and Mrs. Richard McClanahan are co-directors.

This well known school bears the impress of the unusual women who have directed its policies. Clara B. Spence, the founder, a woman of strong and gracious personality living uncompromisingly up to her ideals, held the implicit confidence of her patrons for thirty years. Even at the beginning of the century, when the social graces were of more importance, she developed in her girls something of social consciousness. On her death in 1923 the school came under the direction of Charlotte S. Baker, long co-principal. The spring teas and sewing classes of Miss Spence's day passed and a new era began in 1932 when the trustees, many of them alumnæ, invited Valentine Chandor to merge with Spence her own school, opened in 1917. Her personality and intellectual interests were stimulating to students and alumnæ. The trustees' confidence in Mrs. Osborne, whom they brought from a successful career at Miss Hewitt's as head mistress after Miss Chandor's death in 1935, has been amply justified. See page 915.

New York City's largest borough is not only the great middle class residential suburb of the metropolis with which it is connected by bridges, tunnels and ferries, but it is also a huge city in itself with varied manufactures. The private schools serve chiefly the local residents of the borough. Two of the older schools, Packer and Friends, are in the vicinity of Borough Hall, and a mile east are Pratt Institute and Adelphi Academy. Overlooking Prospect Park Plaza are Berkeley Institute and the Ethical Culture School. Nearby is the Museum of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. North, near the Children's Museum, is Froebel Academy. In Dyker Heights, along the southeast shore, Polytechnic Preparatory Country Day School and Shore Road Academy overlook The Narrows.

Well along in its second century, this smoothly running institution, perfectly equipped, well organized and capably administered, enrolls girls from conservative families all over the country, preparing most of them for college. It was founded at Middlebury, Vermont, by Emma Willard, a pioneer in the education of women. In 1819 an offer of financial assistance drew the school to New York and in 1821, on invitation, it came to Troy as the Troy Female Seminary. In the next fifty years of its existence more than fifteen thousand young women were enrolled, many of whom became teachers and spread the influence of the school far and wide. Among these Mrs. Russell Sage, a member of the class of '48, was later a teacher in the school. In 1892 the school was reorganized under its present name. The architecturally beautiful home which the school has occupied since 1910 was the gift of Mrs. Sage. Miss Kellas was president of both Russell Sage College and the Emma Willard School from 1916 to 1928. She impresses all who know her as an unusually strong character, who has definitely influenced the lives of the thousands of girls who have come under her firm hand. See page 912.

This school for young boys preparatory to the large secondary schools is the creation of Mr. Fair, an old St. Paul's boy, former chaplain at St. George's, who started it as a country day school for children of the neighboring estates. This great national preparatory school has greatly increased in numbers, equipment and popularity under recent head masters. The beginnings of the school go back to the Rev. Isaac V. Brown, a Presbyterian clergyman, who was succeeded in 1834 by Alexander H. Phillips, member of the family that founded Andover and Exeter. Then for forty-five years from 1837 the school was under the direction of Samuel M. Hamill. The executors of John C. Green, an early pupil who had amassed a fortune in the China trade, purchased the school from Dr. Hamill, endowed it, and in 1882 appointed as head master James Cameron Mackenzie who here for the first time in America introduced the English "house system", later widely copied by other U. S. schools. The boys below the upper form live in houses presided over by a master and his wife, assisted by one or two unmarried masters. Every house is a home unit, and there are inter-house instead of inter-class contests in athletics. The effect has been to preserve and foster individuality.

Characteristic customs and practices, developed during the regime of the Rev. Simon John McPherson from 1899 to 1919, so vividly depicted in the stories of Owen Johnson, under succeeding head masters have faded as have the early Presbyterian leanings. Under Mather A. Abbott, head master from 1919 to 1934, the school plant was enlarged, the academic standards raised, and an effective system of health supervision put into operation. Self help and scholarships make the school possible for about seventy boys of limited means.

Mr. Heely quickly stepped into the front rank of head masters. In consonance with the tradition that the character of the school changes with each new head, his initiative and energy have brought new developments, including Harkness funds for remodelling the school plant for the conference method of teaching. He has visited the alumni, unified and coordinated their interest in the school. The Lawrentian, the school alumni journal, has in the last few years become one of the most effective and inspiring of private school publications. In his addresses and writings Mr. Heely has faced straightforwardly and with sincerity complicated situations on which most head masters timidly turn their backs. See page 866.

From the theological school opened in Philadelphia in 1877 developed a fine arts college and schools for boys and for girls, all of which were moved in 1897 to Huntington Valley, now Bryn Athyn. The departments have separate heads, all under the direction of Bishop George De Charms. Only children of members of the New Church are admitted. Mr. Alden succeeded C. E. Doering in 1939.

A fashionable suburb ten miles west of Philadelphia, Bryn Mawr is dominated by the beautiful buildings of its college, the most impressive of which are of Jacobean architecture. The town has more important private schools for girls than any community of its size in the country. Shipley occupies unpretentious buildings opposite the entrance to the college grounds. The three gray stone buildings of Harcum face, across the main street, the modern school building and remodelled stone hotel that house the Baldwin girls.

For a quarter of a century Elizabeth F. Johnson has directed the policies of Baldwin School, handling with skill and tact a frequently difficult board of trustees and alumnæ body. Miss Cross, associate head, succeeds her in 1941. During her administration the school has gone through some vicissitudes, but she has successfully adjusted Victorian ideals to the needs of the day and with a large and efficient faculty has continued the sound ideals of the founder, Florence Baldwin. Organized to prepare for Bryn Mawr to which it has sent hundreds of girls from all over the country, the school early widened its scope to prepare for other colleges and since the early thirties has provided for the non-college girl as well.

Offering a wide range of courses at the college level in fine, liberal, and practical arts, this school now entering its second quarter century developed from a little group established by Mr. and Mrs. Harcum and conducted jointly until the death of the former in 1920. A college graduate, a pupil of Leschetizky and Philipp, Mrs. Harcum, a Virginian, brings something of southern warmth to her very human relations with her pupils, and to the atmosphere of the college as a whole. The girl's social adjustment, interest in the intellectual, enjoyment of the arts, and realization of her own resources are considered in planning her course which may lead to a rich, perhaps self supporting life. Three sisters, Hannah T., Elizabeth A., and Katharine M. Shipley established this school. In 1911 Miss Howland, a niece of the founders, and Miss Brownell, who had been for some years associated at the New School in Utica, became part owners and assistant principals. They held complete control from 1916 to 1932, when the school was reorganized as a non-profit corporation with the former owners as principals. Mr. and Mrs. Lynes, as associate heads, now relieve them of much administrative detail. The sound academic training and gracious atmosphere that characterize the school have long attracted daughters of Philadelphia's élite and discriminating parents from further afield. Today school buses take the girls to the athletic fields on the school farm a mile and a half away. From this farm comes much of the food for the school, the serving of which is criticized and supervised to an unusual extent by the girls themselves. The curriculum is more elastic than in most college preparatory schools, and music and other cultural advantages of Philadelphia are made available. See page 919.

The rugged vitality of Mercersburg and its intensely democratic atmosphere date from 1893 when William Mann Irvine, a graduate of Exeter and Princeton, took over a small, local institution, half a century in existence, and with broad vision and indefatigable energy created the school as it is today.

Boyd Edwards, a graduate of Phillips Andover, Williams, and the Union Theological Seminary, came to Mercersburg on Dr. Irvine's death in 1928 as an old friend, for in his previous pastoral work he had been visiting minister to the school for almost quarter of a century. His close personal friendship with Dr. Irvine gave him intimate knowledge of the school's problems, and he carried on the ideals and traditions for thirteen years until his retirement in 1941. Over a hundred and fifty colleges in all parts of the country have accepted Mercersburg boys. A junior school is a recent development. See page 870.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. Pop 1,950,961 (1930) 1,931,334 (1940).

Once the first city of the nation, Philadelphia is still first in its number of home owners and has long held third place in population. To the outsider it seems an unexciting place which has lent its name to scrapple and cream cheese and to a certain type of lawyer and capon. Its older families like those of Charleston have pride in their provincialism, and their inordinate zeal in preserving local customs and institutions have made them easy prey to satirical writers and dramatists. Among the old, new-old and recent families, the names of Biddle, Widener and Wanamaker carry weight. The Philadelphia Saving Fund Society, which claims to be the oldest, largest and richest savings bank, occupies a modernistic new home. With graft rampant, machine politics have looted and wasted the city, left it without essential municipal services.

At the crossing of the principal thoroughfares, Broad and Market Streets, stands the City Hall, a political monument of a former generation. About Independence Square center the pre-Revolutionary landmarks—Independence Hall, with the sacred cracked Liberty Bell, and Carpenters Hall, where met the First Colonial Congress. North of Market Street are Girard College and Temple University. Southwest of the City Hall about Rittenhouse Square the old aristocratic mansions are fast giving way to shops and apartment houses. Temple University enrolls over 8000 students. At West Philadelphia, across the Schuylkill, are Drexel Institute with about 1950, and the University of Pennsylvania with something over 7500 students.

To a greater extent than in any other large city, wealthier residents have abandoned their town houses and migrated to the suburbs. Private schools have naturally followed and many are found in the attractive suburban sections of the city itself. Overbrook, to the northwest, lies partly in Philadelphia and partly in Merion. Germantown, largest of the suburban districts, is seven miles northwest of the City Hall. Here are many fine old pre-Revolutionary houses. Chestnut Hill, most beautiful of the outlying parts of Philadelphia, stretching along the wooded slopes of the valley of the Wissahickon Creek, is four miles north of Germantown. Oak Lane, east of Chestnut Hill, lies at the northern edge of the city and has attracted various day schools.

The schools in the farther suburbs are treated under their own towns. Along the Main Line, one of the most beautiful series of suburbs in the country, well known schools, including many for defectives as well as for Bryn Mawr preparation, will be found at Wynnewood, Ardmore, Haverford, Bryn Mawr, Devon Berwyn, and Malvern. North of the city, among the Montgomery county hills, there are private schools in Rydal, Meadow-brook, and Bryn Athyn. In the outlying southern districts, private schools are at Chester, Swarthmore and Lansdowne.

The importance and influence of this largest of the Friends Schools in and about Philadelphia is due in large part to the vision and devotion of Stanley R. Yarnall, connected with the school from 1898, principal from 1906 until his retirement in 1941. A considerable waiting list and wide influence in various educational associations are the rewards of the sound progressive methods and modern educational practices fostered. As early as 1701 William Penn gave a charter to a school that had been in operation a dozen years. It is still conducted under his third charter, 1711. Richard Mott Jones, head master for forty-two years, brought the school national reputation. He was succeeded in 1918 by Richard M. Gummere, under whose administration the school developed in numbers and influence and moved in 1925 from the city to its present site. When Dr. Gummere resigned to become chairman of the Board of Admissions at Harvard in 1935, the trustees elected as his successor Dr. Richard Knowles, who resigned from his executive post in 1941 to return to teaching. A lawyer, former Massachusetts State legislator, he was for thirteen years master of modern languages at St. Mark's and later for four years head of Great Neck Preparatory School. Broader than most of its type, in the Penn Charter upper school each boy may concentrate in some field in which he does work beyond college entrance requirements. A cooperative individualism is encouraged in both faculty and student body and each boy above the sixth grade is expected to spend a fifth of his time on hobby subjects.

City of steel and great wealth, Pittsburgh has for years been the city best known to the artists of the continent for whom Homer Saint Gaudens has made it a mecca. The director of the department of fine arts of Carnegie Institute has a roving commission to bring annually the best work of two continents for exhibition. The main building of the Institute covers an area larger than does the Capitol at Washington. Mellon Institute, with its banks, is a Greek temple nine stories high. The University of Pittsburgh, coeducational, with over 11,000 students, dating from 1787, is in Schenley Park. Duquesne University, a Catholic coeducational college, was established in 1878 and has some 3000 students. Pennsylvania College for Women, organized in 1869, has about 300. Industrially important, Pittsburgh has the world's largest glass, electrical machinery, and air brakes works. The business section is on the tongue of land between the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers. Most of the private schools are in the hilly East End section.

Rich in traditions, this well known school is unusually well equipped to prepare efficiently for college, and to hold and develop the interests of the boy to whom college requirements are but incidental. Long regarded by its own discriminating clientele as the best preparatory school, The Hill has perhaps grown too large to justify the superlative. The story of how John Meigs, son of the founder, Matthew Meigs, coming to the school in 1876, at the age of twenty-four, in the following thirty-five years brought the school from an obscure venture starting with two teachers and twenty boys to an institution of forty masters and three hundred seventy-five boys, has been interestingly told by his biographer, Dr. W. Russell Bowie, in "The Master of The Hill." John Meigs, with a genius for organization, abounding vitality and a passionate zest for life, had extraordinary power over his fellow men and gave himself not to their bending or breaking, but to their making.

Dr. Alfred G. Rolfe, who directed the school after Dr. Meigs death in 1911 until Dwight R. Meigs in 1914 entered upon his duties as head master, again directed the school for a few months in 1922. From the faculty of The Hill has come educational leaven for many a secondary school. Since 1920 the alumni have been in control. After Dwight Meigs resigned in 1922 Boyd Edwards, long a friend of the Meigs family and later head master of Mercersburg, was head master for six years. Dr. Wendell, former Olympic hurdler, has come up through the school. Since 1928, when he was made head master, he has received various academic and educational honors.

The management of the school today is shared by the faculty through three committees on administration, curriculum, and extra-curricular activities. The Sixth Form Committee supervises student cooperative government. Standards of work have always been high and few Hill graduates have failed to pass their college examinations. The Hill is proud of her boys and the families from which they come. That Hill boys are proud of their school, too, is evidenced by large gifts and the number of sons of alumni on the roster. See page 867.

The Chestnut Street Seminary, founded in Philadelphia as early as 1850, was the institution out of which Ogontz developed. Its present name comes from the estate of the Civil War financier, Jay Cooke, which it long occupied. The school today is the creation of Abby Sutherland, who since 1908 has impressed something of her own forceful personality on her girls and has found sufficient energy left to successfully run a large summer camp in New Hampshire. The impressive buildings in Rydal have been occupied since 1917.

Boys are adequately prepared for college in this Church school into the establishment of which Felix du Pont put a million and a quarter. A memorial altar honors the late Bishop Philip Cook, who gave active support and encouragement during the first decade. Mr. Pell, a St. Mark's boy who had gone on from Princeton to Christ Church, Oxford, was called to be head master from an instructorship at Lenox School, Massachusetts. Most of the work, except laundry, cooking, and boiler room, is done by the boys. Since 1935, when the scholarship system was abolished, five different tuition fees have been maintained.

Delaware laws have lured great corporations to establish their legal offices in Wilmington, often in one room for the annual meeting. The du Ponts, famed for their products for war and peace, have long been influential. Du Pont money has been contributed to the public schools and to the building of St. Andrew's and of Tower Hill adjacent to Rockford Park. Just outside the city limits is the campus of Friends School.

Baltimore is still the city of endless scrubbed white steps and the home of America's most articulate boobophobe, H. L. Mencken, who characterizes it as having the "frowsy, unkempt, out-at-elbow, forlorn air of a third-rate lodging house." Mencken's autobiography of his joyous, boyous first twelve years, "Happy Days", is a vivid picture of Baltimore life in the eighties. Though it rewards the reader with many a belly laugh it is, despite denials, a detailed study of American mores and morons.

Once famous for its markets and good living, the city still retains much of its local color, customs and cuisine.

On the Patapsco river, just below the city, the British fleet was repulsed in Revolutionary days. Today tourists flock to the Walters Gallery, where Francis Scott Key's "The Star Spangled Banner" is preserved in the original. The birthplace of some of the country's most precious educational advances, here in Johns Hopkins was the first graduate school for research in higher education, and here developed the first country day school.

Goucher College for women, Peabody Institute, and a few private schools are still in the city. In Roland Park are Johns Hopkins University, Gilman and Roland Park Country Schools, Bryn Mawr School, Girls Latin, and Notre Dame of Maryland. In Ruxton, nine miles north, is the Greenwood School, and in Towson Loyola High School. In Mt. Washington are Mount St. Agnes and St. Paul's Schools.

This colorful, live school was one of the first progressive institutions to be put on a substantial and solid basis. Especially in its early days it owed much of its support and patronage to idealistic and liberal Jews of the type that have done so much in times and places for this country. Today the staff of the school and more of the patronage than formerly are of Gentile origin. Eugene Randolph Smith here worked out his methods that won national prominence. Mr. Froelicher, son of one of the founders and member of a Christian family prominent in education for two generations, has carried on the progressive tradition since 1932. Margaret F. Coe, connected with the lower school since 1917, has made Park School more influential through publishing its Studies, "Curriculum of the Lower School" and "Aims of the Park School." Something of the soundness of the work, which appeals to professional and professorial families from Johns Hopkins, Goucher, the State University and the city schools, is indicated by the number of graduates that achieve along academic lines and in the fine arts.

'Catonsville', as St. Timothy's is known, has zealously maintained its reputation for exclusiveness and attracts conservative families from the south and the large eastern metropolitan centers. Originally established by the Misses Carter, it was taken over in 1912 by Louisa McE. Fowler and Jane R. Heath, and incorporated in 1935. The trustees appointed Miss Watkins on Miss Fowler's retirement in 1936. Old fashioned ideas of education still prevail. The school circular is studded with 'must', 'not allowed'. Girls whose teeth need straightening cannot be considered for admission. The equipment shows little change, but the curriculum is being modernized and fewer restrictions are placed on the forms of athletics allowed. Jacob Tome, a resident of Port Deposit, left two and three-quarter millions to provide educational opportunities for local boys and girls. A day school in the town and this boarding school developed. The first head master, James Cameron Mackenzie, who had organized Lawrenceville on the house system, instituted the same plan here. He was succeeded by Abram W.

Harris, later president of Northwestern University. Next came Thomas S. Baker who resigned to become president of Carnegie Institute. Then followed in succession Murray Peabody Brush, 1919; R. J. Shortlidge, 1932; and Charles J. Keppel, 1935. Mr. White, with experience as teacher, graduate student, school executive, and publisher, was appointed in 1939 under a new board of trustees formed in 1938 when the town school and the boarding school were separated. Ernst Suerken in 1940 brought his school for young boys from Newton, New Jersey, to form the junior school. Opening of the junior college, announced for 1940, is postponed. See page 880.

This first Church school of the English type in America is nearing its centennial. Dr. William Augustus Muhlenberg, who had first introduced the English Episcopal school system at Flushing, L.I., sent his chief assistant, Rev. J. B. Kerfoot, to be the first head master. Here, too, another pupil of Muhlenberg's, Dr. Henry Augustus Coit, taught until he was called to organize St. Paul's at Concord, N. H. In 1844 the school was chartered as the College of St. James. Closed during the war, it reopened in 1869 under Henry Onderdonk, who continued as head master until 1896. Seven years later when Adrian H. Onderdonk, his son, took charge the name was changed to St. James School. In his thirty-six years as head master, Mr. Onderdonk, a strong and lovable personality and a great teacher, was a hero to his boys. Under him the "home life," "individual attention" and the "honor system" were not empty phrases, but actualities. He became emeritus and head of the Latin department in 1939, and Mr. Drake, for a year on the faculty and previously for four years at St. Paul's in New Hampshire, was appointed head master. Created by an act of the legislature as the state's two hundredth anniversary monument to its founding, this school celebrated its own hundredth anniversary in March, 1940. Its building, gift of the state, is on the site of the first Maryland settlement. State owned, it is privately administered by a local board of trustees. The fixed income makes possible equipment and educational facilities seldom found in institutions charging twice the rate. Since the introduction of a junior college department in 1927, the school has widened its appeal and since 1937 has offered only a four year junior college course.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Pop 386,869 (1930) 663,091 (1940).

The possible future capital of the world, if some ambitions are not dashed, Washington today is the world's maddest maelstrom of thousands of representatives of the 'gimme' nations, refugee royalty, and hordes of dollar-a-year men from the great industrial and financial centers. With members and employees of the British government to the number of two thousand, second only to New York, Washington still remains headquarters for the president's fishing and inspection trips, and his fire-side and table-side chats, now broadcast to the world in seven languages.

Behind this passing show is a permanent population of government employees who carry on, whatever the political complexion, and a great staff of working scientists who push forward the frontiers of knowledge. None of these has a vote or a voice in the government. They live under the dictatorial autocracy of a junta appointed by the nine young men of the Supreme Court.

At its worst in the sepulchral memorial sculptures under the capitol dome, some freshness has been brought to Washington architecture in recent years. Among the more beautiful buildings, outstanding are the Pan American Union, stimulating and refreshing in its architectural detail and arrangement; the Academy of Arts and Sciences by Bertram Goodhue, a remarkable example of purest Greek architectural design, and the Folger Shakespeare Library, architecturally chaste. Pope's pantheon in memory of Jefferson is soon to stand where are the tidal basin and the cherry trees. Pope's other pantheon, in memory of Mellon, houses the collections of the aluminum magnate, the accumulation of which greatly enriched a London Jewish art dealer and elicited the bon mot of the year, "It's perfectly Duveen."

The attractions of Washington have made it an educational center. The Catholic Church, with characteristic foresight, has taken advantage of this for its higher institutions of learning—the Catholic University, Trinity College, and Georgetown University. George Washington University falls short of the hope and plan of the Father of his Country.

Today trade invasion of the older residential region from Lafayette Square to Dupont and Thomas Circles has driven the costly new mansions and legations to Sixteenth Street, where they extend for miles to the north. Finishing schools have flourished on this soil and some still remain in the neighborhood of Dupont Circle. The more substantial college preparatory schools are rapidly deserting this region for the hills north and west of the city. Some schools have crossed the line and have such Maryland addresses as Forest Glen, Garrett Park, Takoma Park, College Park, Silver Spring, Edgemoor and Bethesda. The Chevy Chase schools, although over the Maryland border, use the Washington post office as do a few others across the Potomac in Virginia.

High standards, a conservative tone, and a gracious atmosphere have always characterized this school. Elizabeth J. Somers, founder, and Adelia Gates Hensley, were succeeded in 1924 by the late Jean Dean Cole, for many years assistant head, who retired in 1938. From the first, before the time of the junior college, the advanced courses were accredited by leading colleges and universities. Today the seminary covers the work of the three final high school years, preparing largely for the well organized junior college. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd, associated with the school since 1936, have brought new life and vigor, and a breadth of culture and outlook which have won the enthusiastic support of patrons and the well organized alumnæ. "Sidwell's Friends", established and conducted for over fifty years by Thomas W. Sidwell, justly earned a reputation for sound scholastic training which is continued under Mr. Rogers, successor in 1935 to Wilmot R. Jones. Maintaining the Quaker tradition, he has, however, brought a more modern tone. In 1938 the school moved to new buildings on the site which had been used since 1922 by the junior department. The large representation of the Washington legations which has always added color and interest to the school has dwindled somewhat with the war, but the enrollment continues to represent an interesting cross section. In a quarter of a century Miss Noland has built about her own personality a school with a reputation for exclusiveness. A Virginian, a hard rider, she demands a good seat of her girls. She holds to strict ideas of 'study' and maintains long cherished ideals of combining sport with academic prowess. Well-to-do families from the north and west fancy they find here a flavor of southern aristocracy. Miss Charlotte, as she is known, without the usual college training, leaves the scholastic work to the academic head, Catharine M. Wellington, B.A., Vassar, with graduate work at King's College, London, but inculcates something of greater value, a sense of social responsibility. Her girls work with the neighboring poor children, black and white. The atmosphere of the old south,—the negroes, the well appointed stables, the less well appointed living quarters,—pervades.

For over forty years Asheville has set standards of scholarship and conduct for schools of the section. Founded by Newton M. Anderson and Charles A. Mitchell, teachers in the University School of Cleveland, at first it drew the majority of its boys from the north and middle west, but during the regime of Howard Bement from 1927 to 1936 the appeal was broadened to include families from the south and the eastern seaboard. Established as the Salem Female Academy for daughters of the Salem community, in days when the education of girls was looked on as a foolish luxury, this school in 1802 opened a boarding department, and during its century and three-quarters, in peacetime and war, has enrolled daughters of the more forward looking families of the south. The freedom from sectarianism and soundness of work for which Moravian institutions are known characterize the school. Today girls are adequately prepared for standard colleges and universities under the capable and sympathetic direction of Miss Weaver, principal since 1931. See page 922.

This city characteristically retains much of the atmosphere of ante-bellum days. Its old families, however decadent or impoverished, are snobbishly exclusive and look back on the days of slavery as the golden age. With its moss draped trees, silent waters, its gardens ablaze with azaleas and magnolias in the spring, the city still exerts what Henry James called an 'insidious charm.' There is but little of colonial Charleston left. Now the largest city in the state, it is an important seaport and a leading cotton manufacturing center. On the banks of the Ashley river, adjacent to Hampton Park, is The Citadel, the military college of South Carolina. Sandy Beaver, its creator, whose title came to him from his service on the governor's staff, is a two-fisted six-footer, forceful, hard headed. He has a smile and charm of manner that go with his boys and patrons, and account in large measure for his great success. His teachers are well paid for their part in recruiting pupils. The cadets here live a strenuous life, but get much as a result. The junior school is separately housed and has its own activities. During the winter term in Hollywood, Fla., accessibility to the Inland Waterway makes intensive naval training possible. High winds and high finance have not affected the popularity of Miami as a winter playground. Magnificent boulevards lined with palms and residences of Spanish architecture enhance the city's loveliness. Some of the older schools, with their ample grounds, have remained in the city. The recently established schools at Miami Beach have a largely Jewish clientele. In Coral Gables, most exalted of realtors' dreams, is Exmoor School. From the base of supplies established by General George Rogers Clark at the head of the falls of the Ohio in 1776 grew the little settlement of Louisville, named for Louis XVI of France, which, after his conquest of Vincennes, was incorporated on the South shore of the river. The French influence was strong up to the 1880's, coming up from New Orleans and Natchez by way of the river trade. Today the manufacture of tobacco products and hard liquor makes the city one of the important distributing and industrial centers of the South. The Webb School, established by William R. Webb, "Old Sawney", has been a center of influence in the south for many years. Originally at Culleoka, it has been since 1886 in Bell Buckle. Here have been trained head masters for many southern schools. In the early twenties one son, Thompson Webb, left to establish his own school in California. Another, the present principal, was a teacher at the school as early as 1897 and on the death of his father in 1926 took full charge. No attempt has been made to build elaborate equipment, and many of the boys still board in private families. The school has a large body of loyal alumni, the majority graduates of southern colleges.

For thirty-five years the school has been directed by the McCallie brothers, men of social and business acumen whose father, a Presbyterian minister, founded it. Maintaining the popular regional military drill but without over-emphasis, they have developed academic standards and athletic facilities comparable to those of northern schools, and in a recent "Study of Secondary School Standards" were rated "very superior" among the forty southern schools studied. Through a Bible course and the honor system stress is put on the development of Christian character, but not at the expense of the academic and physical. Most of the graduates go on to college. CINCINNATI, OHIO. Alt 490 ft. Pop 455,610 (1940).

Founded soon after the Revolution by the Society of Cincinnati, an organization of Colonial army officers, it is to the German settlers of 1848 that the city owed the development of cultural interests far in advance of most American cities. Music and art still play an important part in the life of many of its citizens through the proportionately large number of schools that promote these arts. Extending fourteen miles along the Ohio river, it was a great inland port in the days of river transportation. In the residential section rising to the hills live the Tafts and Longworths. Its corrupt city government overthrown two decades ago, Cincinnati has since been well administered by a city manager. As such, Clarence A. Dykstra made the reputation which secured him the presidency of the University of Wisconsin, from which he was called to Washington in 1940 to head the draft board. North of the city in Burnet Woods Park the municipal university, largest in the country, enrolls over eleven thousand. Just beyond in Avondale is the University School, and still further north at College Hill, Ohio Military Institute. Fifteen miles northeast on Indian Hill is the Cincinnati Country Day School. The Conservatory is in Walnut Hills.

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, MICH. Alt 850 ft. Pop 1281 (1940).

Twenty miles from the center of Detroit and five miles south of Pontiac, George G. Booth, newspaper publisher and patron of the arts and crafts, early in the century established his residence. In 1927 the village was incorporated to preserve the rural character of the region.

The name "Cranbrook", Mr. Booth's ancestral village in England, is given the five educational institutions and church which have been established by Mr. and Mrs. Booth on the three hundred acre tract which was their estate. Reserving only their residence, they have given land, buildings, equipment and endowment funds to the development of Christ Church Cranbrook, Brookside School Cranbrook, Cranbrook School, Kingswood School Cranbrook, Cranbrook Academy of Art, and Cranbrook Institute of Science. The Cranbrook Foundation, created in 1926, was the recipient of virtually all of Mr. Booth's fortune, as well as substantial gifts from Mrs. Booth, totaling approximately $17,500,000. Masterpieces of sculpture and the decorative arts adorn all the institutions, which, with the exception of the church and Brookside, were designed by Eliel Saarinen, distinguished architect and president of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, for whose work here he received the gold medal of the New York Architectural League.

Strategically situated midway in the waterways of the Great Lakes, Detroit early became a city of commercial importance, and before the advent of the motor car had settled down with an air of respectability about its notable civic center. Ford, General Motors, two great wars, have thrust the city's industrial tentacles out into the surrounding country. Ford and General Motors technical and labor policies, together with such excrescences as the Shrine of the Little Flower have kept the city in the headlines. Here started the bank holiday which marked our financial nadir. Cadillac, who founded the settlement here early in 1701, La Salle, who made it a stopping place on his way to the Gulf to plant Christian missions in the Mississippi valley, and Chief Pontiac have been commemorated in popular cars. Henry Ford's educational activities center about Dearborn and River Rouge to the north where his huge, self-supporting Trade School enrolls a thousand boys. His great store of American antiquities are displayed in Greenfield Village to which he has transported Mary's Little Lamb Schoolhouse and Cape Cod windmills, and in the Edison Institute Museum which spreads over eight acres. In the city the interests of the people at large are indicated by the huge enrollment of the Cass Technical High School. Some of the older private schools are still in the city. In the beautiful country to the east and north lie great estates served by the Country Day and University Schools in Grosse Pointe, the Cranbrook Schools in Bloomfield Hills. To the west, Detroit Country Day School has occupied its present site since 1925. Five miles northwest of the city, in Farmington, is the site of the Ford Republic (not a project of Henry Ford), a two hundred acre farm on which the boys do most of the work.

The second city of the country, and perhaps in the world, stands at the crossroads of the nation where the transcontinental and north and south railways touch the lake routes, and is the world's greatest market for agricultural products. Here the ore from the north meets the coal from the central states. And here, where the winds from the prairies sweep over the lake, political crosscurrents meet in conventions. Carl Sandburg, poet of the region, has described Chicago—"Hog-Butcher for the World, Tool-Maker, Stacker of Wheat, Player with Railroads and the Nation's Freight-Handler . . ." Chicago's luridly colorful past is still perpetuated in the red brick parochial schools of the late mighty prelate Cardinal Mundelein, in Insull's dominating building where the civic opera is housed, and in the Tribune Tower of the still vital Colonel McCormick. But the virile spirit that developed a noble lake front is today bringing about a renaissance of civic spirit.

The University of Chicago, established in 1903 on the Midway Plaisance of the World's Fair, was put in the front rank by President Harper and has been kept in the headlines by President Hutchins who, though he preaches medievalism, practices a belligerent modernity in university and public life, and maintaining sane independence, unmatched among college presidents, holds that a university is for something more than playing football or preparing for a job. Some of the preparatory schools are also on the South Side, Harvard School for Boys, Starrett, Faulkner and Orthogenic Schools. Southwest, and separated from the city by a golf course and a residence district, is Morgan Park, long time home of the military school of the same name, and since 1935 of the Loring School. In the fashionable North Side above the Chicago river, Francis W. Parker and the Latin Schools, Boys and Girls, are within the city limits.

The original thirteen hundred acres of land bordering on Lake Michigan that far sighted and public spirited Chicago citizens purchased over eighty years ago as a site for an academy have grown through recent gifts of adjacent property. The school is now an outstanding college preparatory institution. In 1913 the trustees invited John Wayne Richards from Hotchkiss and Yale to succeed William Mather Lewis, now president of Lafayette. The past quarter century under Mr. Richards' direction has witnessed an increase in importance and dignity of the academy, during the early years a fortress of the academic in the midst of a welter of the military. Mr. Richards has prepared for the great universities sons of western families who would otherwise have been sent to eastern schools. In 1930 he procured the necessary funds to put into operation a plan which has since been adopted by other boys schools and has successfully met the college test. The effect of this "Richards Plan" as the trustees have named it, has been to make the school work more interesting, more individualized, more economical of time and effort. But in addition, it has made education at Lake Forest more actual and more directly applicable to each boy's individual life. The visitor here is impressed with the aliveness, virility, and effectiveness of the educational process. Among the patrons and trustees are many whose names are potent in the mid-west. The unswerving devotion of the students to "Big Boy" Richards and their support as alumni have made possible improvement and enlargement of the plant and continued increase in the enrollment and influence of the school. Mr. Richards' own devotion to the school and his efforts in 1940 to combat the local swing to the military brought about an illness which caused his retirement in 1941. Mr. Bowditch, former freshman dean at Harvard, and for two years head master of Park School, Indianapolis, takes over the direction in the fall. See page 887.

Originally modelled on the Francis W. Parker School of Chicago, this country day school has developed independently under Mr. Smith's direction, and has attained a national reputation. Through parent education a definite attempt is made to adjust the boys and girls to actual living conditions. The school is limited to an enrollment of three hundred fifty, many preparing for college, and no students are accepted in the high school who admit plans to transfer later to boarding schools. In 1938 the lower school moved into a new, especially designed building, a gift of the parents, a step toward making all departments of the school equally important. Boarding pupils are cared for either on the campus or in the homes of persons who have had children in the school.

A colorful, active life with many opportunities for art, dramatics, and shop work characterize this unusual college preparatory school. It was founded by the Rev. R. K. Todd, a native of Vermont and a graduate of Princeton, whose grandson, the present head, 'Skipper' to his boys, has learned from his boys as much as they from him. The catalog, "original work of the boys from cover design to finis", is very different from that of the ordinary preparatory school. Orson Welles, a former pupil who has brought the school widespread publicity, continues to be interested in its activities and methods of instruction. Here he and Mr. Hill were inspired to remake masterpieces of the drama which today in book and phonograph record form have revolutionized the teaching of Shakespeare in certain forward looking schools. Most of the boys at Todd naturally come from around Chicago, though half the states in the Union and many foreign countries are represented. With Tosebo, the affiliated summer camp, boys can be cared for all the year. See page 885.

This oldest Church school west of the Mississippi is also the oldest non-proprietary boys school in the region. Shattuck, too, was the first private preparatory school to which a regular army officer was detailed by the government, by which it is classed as an 'essentially military school'. During its long career more than three thousand boys, largely from well-to-do families of the northwest, have been prepared for colleges, east and west. Shattuck was the conception of Bishop Whipple who, familiar with such schools in England as Winchester and Rugby, took over a little day school opened in 1858 by the Rev. James L. Breck and named it for Dr. George Cheyne Shattuck of Boston. During the long period from 1867 to 1915 the Rev. James Dobbin was rector. The Rt. Rev. F. A. McElwain, Bishop of Minnesota, has been rector since 1916. Dr. C. W. Newhall, connected with the school for forty years and head master for twenty, was succeeded in 1936 by James S. Guernsey. Following his resignation in 1940, Mr. Henning, former rector of Christ Church, St. Paul, was made rector, and H. R. Drummond, academic head of Shattuck, 1922-1937, was recalled from Northwestern Military and Naval Academy to act as principal. See page 889.

New fame has come in the last few years to this city through its symphony orchestra. On the Mississippi across from St. Paul, Minneapolis has the largest flour mills in the world. Here, too, is the University of Minnesota, organized as early as 1851 and now enrolling some 12,000 students. Seven miles west of the city stand the modern buildings of The Blake School. Its Junior Department is in the city proper as is Northrop Collegiate School. The campus of the coeducational Minnehaha Academy is near the river.

Blake has two units.—Blake Junior, long in the city, which moved to Hopkins in 1940, and Blake Senior, occupying its country site since 1911. The school traces its origin back to the year when William McK. Blake, a graduate of DePauw University, opened a tutoring school in downtown Minneapolis.
Four years later, with the backing of a group of citizens, the school was incorporated and under the supervision of the late Charles Bertram Newton became one of the pioneer country day schools. Mr. Alder, for seventeen years principal of Adelphi Academy and before that instructor at Exeter and Penn Charter, was elected to the head mastership in 1926 to succeed Raymond B. Johnson. In the last decade new buildings have been erected, the athletics reorganized, the curriculum enriched and strengthened, and funds raised to wipe out the school debt and start an endowment fund. See page 884.

Built on a series of terraces rising from the east bank of the Mississippi, the capital of Minnesota is the smaller of the Twin Cities. Second only to Chicago as a livestock and meat packing center, it is also important for its manufactures. In the black marble and gold leaf lobby of the modern court house stands the thirty-seven foot Indian chieftain carved by the Swedish sculptor, Carl Milles, out of fifty-five tons of translucent Mexican onyx. A skyscraper bank building, a municipal auditorium, a hospital and a boulevard named in honor of Frank B. Kellogg are other recent civic improvement projects. The academy has two sites—the Country Day School, west of Snelling, and the Lower School in a modern building at 718 Portland Avenue.

Able and scholarly, son of Dean Briggs of Harvard, he came to the school as head and business manager on its incorporation and reorganization in 1914 after successful experience at The Hill and the Country Day School of Kansas City. From 1916 to 1939 every graduate entered a reputable college; eighty per cent Harvard, Yale or Princeton; nearly a third have graduated from college with honors. The academy grew out of a small day school conducted by C. N. B. Wheeler and F. W. Fiske, the former still on the faculty. The present site of the upper school has been occupied since 1916. Unusual among day schools, the boys wear uniforms and devote one period a day to military drill.

The first of its type west of the Mississippi and one of the first country day schools for girls, this was started by a local group interested in progressive education. Under Helen Ericson, and with the support of influential citizens, the school became something of a laboratory for modern educational methods and made outstanding contributions to progressive educational theory. Mrs. Leland Hazard, director from 1931 to 1939, continued to attract the patronage of progressive minded parents of the community. Her successor, Mrs. Green, came from the North Shore Country Day School, Winnetka.

Most centrally located of our great cities, at the meeting of waterways and transportation routes, eighth in population, St. Louis has great future possibilities. Growing pains and a crude culture, softened by a music loving German element, have manifested themselves in scandalous political situations and spasmodic reforms. Currently the smoke from the soft coal universally used has been controlled as has the Mississippi, whose mud and flood drove well-to-do residents and the private schools that served them out into the suburbs. The city has numerous Catholic schools and colleges. About Forest Park, site of the Exposition of 1904, has developed an educational center. To the west in the Wydown section is Washington University with about 3000 students, founded in 1853. St. Louis University, Catholic, including some women's colleges dating from 1818, has about 3500 students. The Principia, in the northwestern district has moved its college section up the river to Elsah, Ill. North of Natural Bridge Road, in a remote region, is the fifty acre campus of the St. Louis Country Day School. In the suburb of Clayton are John Burroughs School, Chaminade College and Academy, Taylor School, Community School, and Mary Institute which Washington University controls.

Most successful of the many schools for Christian Scientists that have been started in various parts of the country, The Principia is the only educational institution for the sons and daughters of Christian Scientists that offers work from nursery school through four years of college. Mrs. Mary Kimball Morgan, the founder, now chairman of the board, with her sons continues in control. There is no direct connection with or financial support from the Christian Science Church, but Christian Science practices, ideals and standards prevail among faculty and students. In consonance with these standards, team work between trustees, school executives and patrons is played up, and personalities are submerged. However, it is apparent even to some Christian Scientists that the school owes its great success to the organizing genius and vision of the present president, in charge since 1920. Since 1935 the college group has occupied new buildings on a four mile tract of land on the Mississippi near the village of Elsah, Ill. See page 967.

The third city of the state, Colorado Springs is in the shadow of Pike's Peak, overlooking a vast plateau to the east. The co-educational Colorado College, which dates from 1874 and now enrolls about seven hundred, has a notable Academy of Fine Arts and a new Fine Arts Center. With the patronage of prominent families, east and west, Fountain Valley in its first decade became a successful school. Mr. Froelicher, member of a notable family of educators, is a successful administrator, as indicated by the development under his direction of such eastern schools as Park School, Baltimore, Oak Lane, Philadelphia, and Avon Old Farms, Connecticut. Here he has made some attempt to develop social consciousness in his boys, giving them some acquaintance with American politics and related subjects, and of history as the story of human development and achievement, with science and languages related to it. The academic work is of high standard, and the school was given its Cum Laude charter in 1940. Large gifts have resulted in frequent additions to equipment and plant. See page 893.

Spanish speaking old Albuquerque, largely adobe, bears little resemblance to the important new town, modern and up to date, a distributing center for gold, silver, copper, lead and iron mines, as well as the wool and hide industries. The cultural activities of the modern city, drama, orchestra, concerts, and art exhibits, have developed rapidly. The state university attracts other than native sons and daughters, especially to its well equipped anthropology and archaeology departments. The mural paintings of its new Coronado Library have attracted some attention. In the Parkland Hills district are the buildings and large acreage of Sandia School. Manzano Day School occupies historic Huring Castle near the center.

Much use is made of the cultural opportunities of the city, and separate departments of music and art under directors of some note were established in 1939, supplementing the dramatics work which Mrs. Simms personally supervises. The academic faculty is largely eastern and the scholastic standards compare favorably with those of eastern schools. Louise Diehl Patterson resigned as head mistress in 1939, remaining in a teaching capacity, with Mrs. Simms as active head of the school. See page 930.

The school was formally opened eight years later by the Rt. Rev. B. Wistar Morris and his sisters-in-law, the Misses Rodney. Mary B. Rodney came from St. Mary's Hall, New Jersey, to be first head mistress. Since 1904 the school has been directed by the Episcopal sisters of St. John Baptist. Now progressive in outlook, with college trained teachers, it sends most of its graduates on to college, some to its own junior college organized in 1932. One of the earliest established schools for girls on the West Coast was the Girls' Collegiate School of Los Angeles, established 1892 and removed in 1925 to Glendora where it continued until 1933. This is an outgrowth, its teachers and many of its patrons long connected with the school. Old time standards of scholarship and gracious living continue.

The creation of Mr. Webb, this well established preparatory school requires college Entrance Board examinations of its upper classes, sending many boys on to western colleges and universities and a number to the large eastern colleges each year. Mr. Webb here carries on the traditions of his family, known in the south as educators for more than seventy years through their school in Bell Buckle, Tenn. As a rancher in California from 1911 to 1918, Mr. Webb became acquainted with Sherman Day Thacher who pointed out to him the need for more boys' schools of good standards in the region, and suggested that he establish one. Returning to Tennessee, Mr. Webb prepared himself to start such an institution by teaching at his father's school, of which he was a graduate. Open-minded, alert to the needs of his boys, he has been eminently successful, attracting families of discrimination from all parts of the country, and has played a responsible part in attempts to stabilize academic and professional standards among private schools of the region.

One of the world's most astonishing recent growths, fifth city in the world's most wonderful country, within the memory of many now living it was a dusty Mexican town of 20,000. Huxley, the English novelist, who came just before the war for an eye cure, remained to write a picture of its almost occult culture. Los Angeles is a hotbed of isms and ologies. On its seven million dollar city hall the city council had chiseled in 1940, "The immemorial migrations and commingling of peoples is the root flowering in the highest that man has become." Its standards, intellectual, moral and religious, were set by the early migrants from the Bible Belt and retired Iowa farmers whose bright perennial heroine is Aimee Semple McPherson. The outdoor life and climatic influences, the variety of foods, have brought about the development here of a physically almost perfect race. The city embraces a great area from the San Fernando valley, over the Hollywood hills and the Santa Monica mountains, to the sea. The original Mexican settlement, midway between the mountains and the ocean, centered about Olvera Street. Here still stands the Church of Our Lady Queen of the Angels, dating from 1818. The discovery of oil, the development of harbor facilities, the cinema and the airplane have made the city a great center of industry and commerce. Some of the established schools maintain high standards that have set the pace for the public schools which here have reached a high degree of efficiency. But private schools spring up like mushrooms and to maintain standards various attempts to form approving and accrediting associations have been made to protect the reputable schools and private school patrons.

The secretarial, trade and industrial schools are still in the business section. South, in the vicinity of Exposition Park with its stadium seating 90,000, is the University of Southern California. Preparatory schools are found in all the residential regions, but few remain in the tree-lined old residential parts to the southwest. Near Westlake Park, four miles west of Broadway, is Otis Art Institute. Page, Cumnock and Marlborough Schools, once in open country, are now surrounded by city blocks. In Hollywood, Black-Foxe occupies the former buildings of the Urban Military Academy, and in North Hollywood is the new plant of Harvard School. To the west, a group of schools has developed midway between Los Angeles and Santa Monica Bay,—in the Holmby Hills, Westlake and its Holmby Junior College which moved from the city in 1928; the frowning red brick buildings of the University of California at Los Angeles; and the imposing Catholic institutions, Marymount for girls, and St. Mary's College for men. Further from the city Berkeley

Until 1917 this little town in the western end of the Ojai valley, eighty miles northwest of Los Angeles, was known as Nordhoff, in honor of the grandfather of Charles Nordhoff, the author. Long a favorite region for writers, artists, and craftsmen, its houses, arcade, pergola, and tower are all in the style of the Spanish missions. Just west of the town on the road to Ventura are the buildings and grounds of Ojai Valley School. In the foothills of the Topa Topa mountains to the east, Thacher School occupies the Casa de Piedra Ranch.

For years Thacher stood alone among boys schools in California preparing for eastern colleges. It was in the late eighties that Sherman Day Thacher, father of the present head, a few years after he had completed his Yale law course, moved to Ojai with an invalid younger brother who needed a warm climate, set out an orange orchard, and took a few boys to tutor. Here he was shortly joined by his brother William Larned Thacher. The school soon became known among eastern families for its interesting outdoor life and success in getting boys into the large eastern universities. After Mr. Thacher's death in 1931, the responsibility was divided between two teachers of long standing in the school and the second son, who became head master in 1936. Not all graduates go on to eastern colleges, but College Board examinations are administered to all. A picture of the school in its various stages of development is given by the five semi-centennial publications, one for each decade, the last, 1939, a reproduction of Fortune of which an old Thacher boy is one of the editors. The horses that each boy owns and cares for, the trails that run from the school to the canyons where Thacher boys build their weekend cabins, are apparent as the center of the life of the school throughout its existence.

Colonel Stewart, a man of shrewd business ability, has built on the site of the former Mount Tamalpais Military Academy a modern, well-equipped school, now in its seventeenth year, enrolling boys of all ages. In 1939 he took over the neighboring non-military Tamalpais School, which he directs with the aid of a resident head master.

A group of San Francisco business men, largely Harvard and Yale graduates whose own preparatory work had been in eastern schools but who wished to keep their sons longer at home, were responsible for the organization of this non-military school. Head masters drawn from the east were unsuccessful in balancing the budget. Frederick J. Daly, a member of the staff, took over the school in 1932, continuing as head master for a year after its purchase by Colonel Stewart of the neighboring military academy. Mr. Keppel, an easterner who from a deanship at Cranbrook went to Tome School as head master, assumed the head mastership in 1940.

Mr. Cate has maintained this school for some thirty years, preparing his boys for colleges east and west. The present well equipped buildings have been occupied since 1929. The life is vigorous, horses playing an important part, and boys rise early to do their stable chores. Two afternoons a week they work with tools as plumbers, painters, carpenters, etc. The enrollment is largely from the west, but eastern and midwestern cities are represented.

SUPPLEMENTARY LISTS
SCHOOLS AND JUNIOR COLLEGES

NOT INCLUDED IN THE PRECEDING PAGES

EXPLANATORY NOTE

These 2600 schools and junior colleges in the U. S. and Canada are not described in the preceding pages. They are here classified as to type,—secondary boarding, junior college, local day, tutoring, etc., arranged alphabetically by towns in each state from Maine to California. A complete list of the classifications will be found in Table of Contents, pages 5-16.

The Addenda, pp. 593-600, similarly classified, note changes in address or director for those schools in the Supplementary Lists which sent in such information in 1941. The usual full description of these schools will be found on pages 601-716. These Addenda also include schools removed this year from the critical text because not recently heard from, and a few schools not included in the 1939-40 Handbook.

Included are schools on which we have inadequate information or from which we have had no recent report, and schools of lesser importance or of largely local patronage.

These schools are believed to be in existence. Up-to-date information is sought annually by first class mail. When letters are accepted it is assumed that the schools are still operating although many fail to furnish up-to-date information or catalogs.

Some from which we have not heard since 1939 but from which no mail has been returned by the post office may be moribund, but we hesitate to eliminate such institutions until we have actual notification that they have been closed. Such schools are briefly listed without statistical information. Fuller data on many of them will be found in previous editions.

ADDENDA

TO SUPPLEMENTARY LISTS OF SCHOOLS

Here are given the 1941 changes in address or director of schools described in the Supplementary Lists, pages 601-716, which were corrected as of May, 1940. The asterisk () indicates that fuller information is available on certain schools in these Supplementary Lists. Here, too, are found schools not included in the 24th edition, 1939-40, and not described elsewhere in this book.*

TUTORING SCHOOLS

Tutoring schools in college towns continue to flourish in spite of disapprobation of the authorities. Emphasis on individual instruction in regulation 'prep' schools during the last two decades has cut the number and enrollment of the college preparatory tutoring schools. Some of the survivors not elsewhere included in this Handbook are here listed.

KINDERGARTEN-PRIMARY SCHOOLS

The private kindergarten has assumed less importance in many communities since the advent of the newer nursery school which takes children as young as one year and keeps them until they are ready for the first grade. Here, however, are listed a few conventional kindergarten-primary schools enrolling children from four to about eight years.

MUSIC SCHOOLS

With the increased interest in music in the public schools, the formation of orchestras, and the promotion of inter-school and regional musical contests with the nation-wide broadcasts of the successful contestants, the number of children taking music lessons has increased. But many of the 17,000 music schools listed in 1929 have faded, for the orchestra or band leader in the school frequently "teaches" all the instruments. The demand for degrees has caused many music schools to apply for degree granting charters. Others have affiliated themselves with nearby colleges or universities. The major colleges, according to a bulletin recently published by the U. S. Department of Interior show an increase in music majors of over 100% from 1928 to 1935.

SCHOOLS OF EXPRESSION, THEATRE, DANCE

As the drama grew out of the dance and as both tend to agglomerate today, no attempt is made here to distinguish one type from the other. The School of the Dance, in which in the early '30's thousands of women cavorted in bits of gauze, today takes a less sentimental turn and robes its pupils in abbreviated shirts and shorts. The schools of elocution and oratory that flourished in the early 1900's have become schools of expression and schools of the theatre, their courses largely reorganized to prepare for the microphone and stage.

SCHOOLS OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION

With public school insistence on college degrees for its teachers and supervisors of specialized subjects, most of the schools of physical education have in the last decade become four year degree granting institutions. Only a few schools of fencing and specialized training still function independently.

KINDERGARTEN-PRIMARY TRAINING SCHOOLS

The kindergarten, the first progressive innovation in our perfectly Prussianized school system, also came from Germany. Modern progressive methods in the teaching of young children, resulting in the nursery school and the activity school, have made the orthodox Froebelian method archaic, so most of the old-line kindergarten training schools have passed.

AVIATION SCHOOLS

The Civil Aeronautics Authority issues "certificates of competency or letters of authority" to certain flying and ground schools which grant various types of licenses. Airplane and mechanics schools to which such "letters of recognition" have been issued up to January 2, 1940, are here included. A supplementary list of organizations and individuals offering such instruction without these "letters of recognition" is also published by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and will be furnished by that office on request.

BUSINESS SCHOOLS

Practically every public high school offers some business courses but there are still thousands of private so-called business colleges, many operating in one crowded city office room. Only about 600 of these answered a recent questionnaire of the U. S. Department of the Interior. A national association has done something to set up standards for the larger of these private institutions. Among the schools that furnish us with information, the more important are listed elsewhere in the book. Here are others, smaller or about which we have less data.

SCHOOLS CLASSIFIED BY TYPE
TO MEET SPECIAL NEEDS

EXPLANATORY NOTE

These lists are planned to help parents and educational advisers find schools to meet individual requirements. There is no attempt to make these lists exhaustive but in general they include the more important schools of each type.

Representative schools,—boys, girls, coeducational, junior college, and professional and vocational,—described in the main body of the book, pages 99-590,—are here further classified as to type (college preparatory, elementary, military, finishing); rate (under $500, $500-$800); special characteristics (five day boarding, country day, progressive); courses emphasized (music, business); physical features (on salt water, at high altitude, ranch); etc.

School members of some educational associations of national scope, required to meet certain standards, are here included as of interest to parents and those who advise about schools.

A list of these Classifications and Associations will be found in the Table of Contents, pages 5-16.

TO MEET SPECIAL NEEDS

BOYS SCHOOLS

SPECIALIZING IN PREPARATION FOR C. E. B. EXAMS

Here are listed most of the schools that sent up ten or more students for College Entrance Board Examinations in the four year period 1936-39, as reported by the secretary of that Board. The asterisk (*) indicates no report sent in by school or College Board for 1939. The considerable decrease in number of candidates in some cases is misleading, indicating merely a change from Old to New Plan; increase in other cases is correspondingly misleading in that students who have taken Board examinations in April and September as well as in June are listed twice or three times. These figures, not as significant as in previous years, consequently are not given in the statistical descriptions of the individual schools in the critical text, pages 99-590.

SPECIAL SCHOOLS

Defectives received no scientific care and education in this country until 1820 when idiots were admitted to the deaf and dumb asylum at Hartford, Connecticut. Dr. Edouard Seguin, a young French physician, developed a method of training of the sense organs and in 1850 opened the Seguin Physiological School at Orange, New Jersey. Before that, however, his methods had been used in the first strictly private institution in the country, Elm Hill, Barre, Massachusetts, which dates back to 1848. More recently schools for the slightly deficient have developed and many of these admit no low grade defectives.

SECTARIAN BOARDING SCHOOLS

Up to the turn of the century, most of the private schools were closely allied with various denominations and received their support and patronage. Today, of the Protestant schools, only the Episcopal have in general retained this close contact. No attempt is here made to list the Catholic schools, the more important of which are described in the critical text, others in a special section pp. 698-714. The following lists include schools that claim denominational allegiance and support.

PROFESSIONAL AND VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS

SCHOOLS OF MUSIC

The conservatory system was established in Boston as early as 1853 by Eben Tourjee. Harvard was the first college to establish a music department—1862. Now almost every college and preparatory school has its department of music. Some representative boys, girls and coeducational preparatory schools and junior colleges with well organized music departments are listed among Schools Classified by Type, pp. 843-900. The schools listed are for special musical training.

SCHOOLS OF FINE AND APPLIED ART

The study of art as an accomplishment for young ladies was an early 19th century development. As early as 1791 Charles Willson Peale endeavored to create a school of art in Philadelphia. The attempt, though unsuccessful, led in 1805 to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Summer art schools are a popular recent development. Secondary schools and junior colleges giving more than passing attention to the arts are under their respective classifications in this section.

KINDERGARTEN PRIMARY TRAINING SCHOOLS

The first kindergarten for English speaking children was started in Boston by Elizabeth P. Peabody in 1860. The first in this country was conducted in German by Mrs. Carl Schurz in her home in Watertown, Wisconsin. The first kindergarten training school was organized in Boston in 1868 by Madame Matilde Kriege and her daughter. Miss Marie Boelte opened a similar school in New York City four years later.

SCHOOLS OF HOUSEHOLD ART

This oldest of the arts was one of the latest to acquire classrooms and methods. Comenius and Luther emphasized the educational value of household activities, and the early charity schools in England gave their girls some training. But it was the middle of the 19th century before actual recognition of the educative possibilities in the home arts was given in Europe. In the United States, Catharine Beecher published in 1840 "A Treatise on Domestic Economy." Today most high schools and preparatory schools give their non-college girls opportunity to dabble in cookery, and domestic science departments are maintained in many universities. Here are listed under various classifications specialized schools, not of secondary rank and not departments of four year colleges. Preparatory schools and junior colleges with departments for the household arts will be found classified earlier in this section.

BUSINESS AND SECRETARIAL SCHOOLS

Private business classes existed even in Colonial times. In the '30's and '40's of the last century private classes in bookkeeping increased rapidly, forerunners of the modern business schools. In the '50's and '60's chain schools were established, remnants of which exist today independently in many cities under the old names. Business departments of standard colleges and private secondary schools are not included in this list.

CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF INDEPENDENT SECONDARY SCHOOLS

For some years attempts have been made to set certain academic standards for California private schools. A California Headmasters Association, made up of the heads of some of the southern California schools that send a few boys each year on to eastern colleges, passed out of existence in 1939. In 1940, collaborating with the State University, a number of the leading private schools throughout the state, boys, girls, and coeducational, formed the California Association of Private Secondary Schools. Early in 1941, thirty-six California private schools applied for membership in this organization. Of these, twenty-one were selected as meeting the entrance requirements of the State University. The function of the group, now bearing the title California Association of Independent Secondary Schools, is one of approval,—comparable to the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools rather than to the sectional associations which are accrediting in function, like the Middle States, the Southern, and the North Central Associations of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

ILLUSTRATED ANNOUNCEMENTS

The schools here included (pp. 827-978) make a distinguished group. The invitation to this section is not extended to all, and all that are invited do not accept.

These are the schools' own statements, written or approved by them and illustrated with photographs they supply. In the critical text section (pp. 99-590), a bold face cross reference at the end of the descriptive notice of each of these schools refers to this fuller statement. Most of them will be found further classified in the various lists of Schools to Meet Special Needs (pp. 719-797).

Boys, girls, and coeducational preparatory and elementary schools, junior colleges, and schools for specialized training are grouped together in geographical proximity to facilitate comparison.

Parents and school advisers will find it interesting and illuminating to thumb these illustrated pages in a preliminary survey of school opportunities available.

BULFINCH HALL (1818)

PHILLIPS ACADEMY, Andover, Massachusetts.

CLAUDE M. FUESS, Ph.D., Litt.D., L.H.D., Head Master.

Phillips Academy, founded in 1778 by members of the Phillips family, is the oldest incorporated academy in the U. S.

It is international in its representation and democratic in its life and spirit. Its essential appeal is to students of serious educational purpose and high moral standards.

To be eligible for entrance, candidates must present satisfactory school records and evidence of good character, and must take examinations for assignment to classes.

Dormitory accommodations and supervision enable students to pass by gradual and natural stages from the paternalism of home life to the freedom of college. Classroom sections are small, and there is one teacher to every nine boys.

Williams Hall and Rockwell House, with their close supervision, offer attractive and helpful surroundings to the young boy just leaving home for his school career.

The latest additions to the school plant, designed by Guy Lowell and Charles A. Platt, include a recitation building, dormitories, a library, an art gallery, a hospital, a church, an auditorium and administration building, and an inn.

Extensive playgrounds and athletic fields are available for the use of students. All the boys are required to take regular gymnasium work or engage in sports. The Gymnasium, the Swimming Pool, and the Case Memorial Building, providing complete facilities for athletic activities during the winter, are in charge of a physical director and several assistants.

Endowments and scholarship funds are available, providing pecuniary aid for more than a hundred scholarly and ambitious boys of limited means.

WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL, Bryant Hill, Dexter, Me.
LLOYD HARVEY HATCH, Head Master.

The SCHOOL and the summer session at the SCHOOL-CAMP are fully accredited. A flexible Program, adjusted to the interests and aims of the Individual and directed by a Faculty of one Teacher for every three Boys, facilitates distinctive College Preparation. A two-year academic schedule can be completed in one calendar year. No Graduate has failed to enter College on scheduled time.

There is an excellent natural setting for Winter Sports.

COBURN CLASSICAL INSTITUTE, Waterville, Me.
HUGH A. SMITH, B.A., Principal.

With a tradition of over 115 years of high scholastic standing and Christian citizenship, Coburn specializes in one thing: thorough preparation for College or Technical School. Instruction is personalized and adapted to individual needs, insuring superior education at a very moderate cost.

Proximity to Colby College provides opportunity for attending Lectures, Concerts and Drama. A well balanced program of extra-curricular activities gives training in Athletics, Music, Dramatics, Public Speaking, etc. Teams are maintained in Football, Basketball, Track, Baseball and Tennis.

For School and Camp Information and Catalogs

THE CLARK SCHOOL, Hanover, New Hampshire.

CLIFFORD PEASE CLARK, Ph.D., Founder.

FRANK MILLETT MORGAN, Ph.D., Head Master.

Maintaining high standards of instruction, The Clark School offers thorough preparation for College or Business, and inculcates in the Boy those basic principles and ideals which tend toward the development of manly character. Although the School maintains a completely separate existence, proximity to Dartmouth College affords opportunity for athletic and educational activities available only in a college community.

Four courses are offered—a four-year College Preparatory Course preparing for College Board Examinations and accredited to Colleges admitting by Certificate; a two-year Intensive Course for Boys over 16 whose college preparation has been neglected; a one-year Preparatory Course for high school graduates; and a two-year graduate Business Course.

With enrollment limited to eighty and an average of six students to a class, individual attention is assured. The Instructors, specialists in their subjects, are chosen for fitness to lead young men as well as for scholastic ability.

Under the supervision of the Athletic Director every student takes daily exercise. The School is represented in Football, Basketball, Baseball, Hockey, Golf, Tennis, and Winter Sports.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

THE NEWTON SCHOOL, South Windham, Vt.

DAVID NEWTON, A.B., Head Master.

On a 275 acre hillside farm this small school offers sound and adequate college preparation but welcomes also boys intelligently indifferent to college. In place of entrance examinations all candidates spend a week or so at the school before enrolling, to be sure they are suited to the life.

Responsibility and dependability are developed through varied supervised jobs for all students. They handle the horses, cows, chickens; provide all fuel, pack ice, help slaughter; do the lumbering, building, shop and forge work. Students must study the Bible, keep good accounts, and, unless real monotones, sing in the choir. Available each year are four scholarships.

VERMONT ACADEMY, Saxtons River, Vermont.

LAURENCE G. LEAVITT, B.S., A.M., Head Master.

Vermont Academy is a college preparatory school with a special cultural program for the non-college boy. On the thirty-six acre campus are eleven modern buildings, tennis courts, pond, playing fields.

Athletics are coached by the faculty, who are chosen for personality and interest in boys as well as teaching ability. Winter sports and an Outing Club are especially emphasized and expert instruction is given in skiing.

Work in dramatics and publication of a school paper supplement the classroom English. Study and appreciation of Music is encouraged. A friendly social life is maintained between boys and faculty.

HOLDERNESS SCHOOL, Plymouth, N. H. REV. EDRIC AMORY WELD, Rector.

Holderness, in the foothills of the White Mountains, is a five-year College Preparatory School offering also a General Course for non-college Boys, appreciation of Art and Music, and Crafts. The dormitories, of modern fireproof construction, are situated on a beautiful hill overlooking the Pemigewasset Valley.

There are all Team Sports, as well as golf and riding. Under the leadership of an expert Ski instructor, special interest centers in Winter Sports. Frequent trips to the school's cabin high in the mountains, personal guidance, and small classes, all promote a spirit of friendliness and helpfulness between masters and boys.

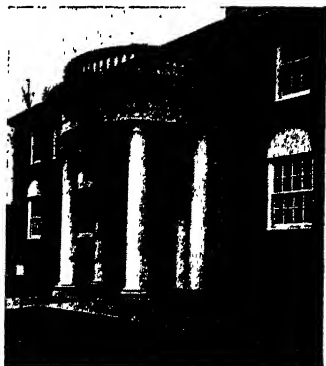

PROCTOR ACADEMY, Andover, N. H. J. HALSEY GULICK, Head Master.

Besides the fully accredited College Preparatory Course, the Academy features an entirely separate and individualized plan for those who for one reason or another are not going to College. It is not a vocational course, but a boy is initiated to a varied curriculum with the idea of discovering and developing his latent capacities.

The Academy is limited to fifty boys which assures small classes and individual work. There is an intimate relation between the masters and boys, not only in the class room, but in all phases of the school life.

Besides the regular seasonal sports, sailing is offered and many of the boys build their own boats. During the winter months the school is particularly known for its skiing.

NEW HAMPTON SCHOOL FOR BOYS,
New Hampton, New Hampshire.

FREDERICK SMITH, A.M., Head Master:

New Hampton graduates each year enter some twenty different colleges. Nearly every eastern college of importance has New Hampton boys among its students. The School is proud of the success of its graduates in college and in life occupations.

New Hampton students find at the School experienced masters, a country environment conducive to study, a broad sports program that provides for each boy according to his ability, and a genuine interest in the welfare and success of each student.

EMERSON SCHOOL FOR BOYS, Exeter, N. H.

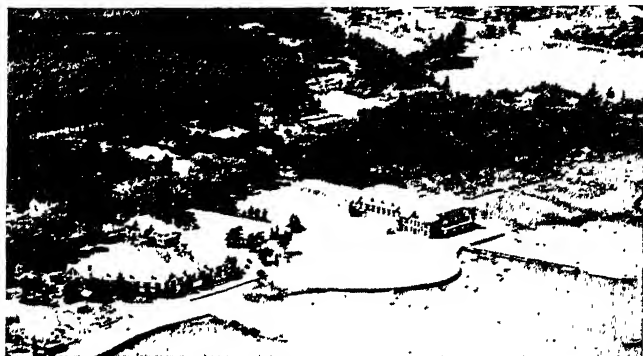

EDWARD E. EMERSON, A.B., Head Master.

The Emerson School for Boys 7-16 offers thorough preparation for the first or second years of Exeter, Andover and other leading Secondary Schools.

Features of the school are a home-like atmosphere, small classes averaging eight boys, comradeship of boys and teachers, and a location in a historical "school town".

The school equipment includes spacious houses of Colonial design, a new annex, and a 12-acre Athletic Field. Sports include football, soccer, tennis, baseball, archery, and all Winter Sports.

TABOR ACADEMY, Marion, Massachusetts.

W. HUSTON LILLARD, A.M., Litt.D., Head Master.

In the old whaling town of Marion on Buzzards Bay, Tabor Academy, an endowed school, prepares boys for new world conditions. Combining fascinating new features with the best of the old traditions, the school attracts boys of strong character and serious purpose from all over the country and abroad.

Thoroughness and concentration through small classroom groups, and an attractive program of physical training, including sailing and cruising, are distinctive features.

Tabor is non-sectarian, cosmopolitan, and democratic. It prepares boys for all colleges.

Wholesome living and regular exercise for all have combined to give the school an excellent health record.

Although all students live in close contact with their house-master, attention is given to the necessity of preparing the older ones for the unprotected life which lies ahead of them.

The Summer Program during July and August includes Cruising, Camping, and the Racing of small Sloops.

THE HUNTINGTON SCHOOL FOR BOYS,

320 Huntington Ave., Boston, Massachusetts.

CHARLES H. SAMPSON, B.S., Ed.M., Head Master.

A well equipped Private Day School of the conservatively progressive type, the student body is divided into four forms. Boys are prepared for the leading colleges not only in New England but throughout the country. The School has the privilege of entering boys in College by certificate. Complete preparation for the College Board Examinations is offered in all courses. Special courses prepare for Business Administration Colleges and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

While scholastic attainment is primarily emphasized, the School does not neglect proper attention to the complete development of the individual boy. Every boy is expected to participate daily in some form of physical exercise.

The equipment available includes Classrooms of standard size, Science Laboratories, a complete Gymnasium with three Basketball Courts, Swimming Pool, Running Track, and six acres of Outdoor Playing Fields.

In the co-educational Summer Session intensive preparation by regular staff members is offered in grammar and high school subjects, in preparation for September examinations.

WILLISTON ACADEMY, Easthampton, Mass.
ARCHIBALD V. GALBRAITH, Head Master.

Williston was founded in 1841. During its hundred years it has sent thousands of students to college, well prepared to cope successfully with the problems of college life. Today it stands as one of the few well-endowed New England Schools that are exclusively College Preparatory.

Williston is located in the heart of New England, on the College Highway, fifteen miles north of Springfield. Noteworthy among its equipment is the new Recreation Center, with rooms devoted to student activities, the gymnasium, and an excellent swimming pool.

The atmosphere of Williston is wholesome, democratic, and sincere. The School encourages hard work and fair play. Of utmost importance are the experience and ability of the masters who are most loyal to the best interests of the School and of the boys under their influence.

Opportunities for self-help are offered and scholarships are awarded on the basis of character and high standing.

South Byfield, Massachusetts.

EDWARD W. EAMES, M.A., Head Master.

The oldest boarding school for boys in the United States, Governor Dummer is in the North Shore country, thirty miles north of Boston. There it retains much of the charm and tradition of New England.

A high ratio of masters to students makes for a friendly, homelike life and personal attention to each boy. Stressing hard work and high scholarship, the school has a national patronage. Most of the boys enter the leading colleges and universities of the East.

The oil painting of Lieutenant-Governor William Dummer of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, here reproduced, hangs in the Mansion House which he built, now occupied by the head master.

MONSON ACADEMY, Monson, Massachusetts.

GEORGE E. ROGERS, A.B., Head Master.

For one hundred thirty-seven years Monson has provided thorough preparation for college and for life, its program being adapted to the special needs of each boy. The enrollment is limited to seventy boys, almost all of whom enter college, by certificate or by C.E.B. examinations.

Monson features unusually small classes, personal attention, and a homelike atmosphere in a typical, small New England town, 75 miles west of Boston.

The broad program of extracurricular activities is supervised entirely by faculty members, all of whom are in residence at the school, and whose personal interest it is to prepare each boy for success in college or in business.

DEERFIELD ACADEMY, Deerfield, Massachusetts.
FRANK L. BOYDEN, Amherst; Ped.D., LL.D., Director.

Deerfield, founded in 1797, is one of the leading Schools for boys. Several of its buildings date from Pre-Revolutionary days. Its ideals are true to the old traditions of scholarship and moral training, but the Academy of today is thoroughly modernized and completely in touch with the life of the times.

The four year Course of Study corresponds to that of the senior high school, and prepares students for any College or University. The School Certificate is accepted by all Colleges admitting without examination. The Boarding Department is exclusively for boys.

Dormitories are splendidly equipped, as are the recently completed Science and Academy Buildings and the Gymnasium.

Fields, hills, and streams are part of the School Campus, and each student participates in some form of daily athletic exercise and sport,—Baseball, Hockey, Football, Tennis or Basketball.

Glee Club and Dramatics are popular extra-curricular activities. Each year members of the Senior Class present a Shakespearean comedy as part of the regular Commencement exercises.

A Deerfield boy is offered thorough College Preparation and a wholesome social life with his fellows.

THE FESSENDEN SCHOOL,

215 Albemarle Rd., West Newton, Mass.

HART FESSENDEN, M.A., Head Master.

Since 1903 The Fessenden School has prepared boys for the secondary schools. Its purpose is to build in, at an early age, habits of good work and square play and responsible citizenship that will carry over to the years ahead. Its educational policy rests on the theory of small classes and graded divisions, so that a boy, with others of like attainment, can progress without boredom or discouragement at his own best rate. A large faculty makes it possible for the masters to concern themselves with each separate boy. One member of the faculty, with long training in this important field, devotes all her time to remedial work in reading. Music, art, manual training, and current events are part of the regular curriculum. Extra-curriculum activities include the Dramatic Club, the Glee Club, the Press and Science Clubs, the Machine Shops.

In their athletics, as well as in their studies, the boys have the encouragement of working with others of their own group. There are four squads in football and baseball; soccer for those who prefer it; junior and senior golf and tennis tournaments; basketball, squash, wrestling, and boxing in the gymnasium; hockey and roller-skating on the rinks; coasting and skiing on the hill. The boys must take part in some form of athletics, and the manner of their playing is considered as important as their skill.

The health routine of the school is under the direction of an eminent Boston pediatrician.

Within ten miles of Boston, the school is easily accessible. It stands on a hill overlooking a golf course, and the property includes forty acres of land.

EAGLEBROOK SCHOOL, Deerfield, Massachusetts.
C. THURSTON CHASE, JR., A.B., Head Master.

Thorough academic preparation for all the leading secondary schools is fundamental in a boy's life at Eaglebrook. The Head Master and a large faculty sympathetically study and guide his personal growth — physical, educational, and social — in a homelike and happy environment.

Physical development and medical care are given expert attention by a specially qualified Resident Pediatrician and Resident Nurses. The new Allen-Chase Infirmary pictured below offers modern medical facilities.

Training and participation are available in a variety of sports. Besides football and baseball, in which a majority of the students compete with other schools, Eaglebrook offers skiing, hockey, swimming, soccer, tennis, basketball, riding, shooting, fishing, and hiking. The facilities for skiing are unique.

Extra-curricular activities include music (piano, instrumental, band, orchestra, glee club), arts and crafts, dancing, printing, journalism, library work, photography, nature study, radio, and other hobbies. All boys assist in outdoor work projects.

The Town Council, The Hearth, the School Bank, and the School Store, as well as other phases of community service and student government, contribute to development of character and personality.

While conveniently accessible to main north-south and east-west railroad and motor routes, Eaglebrook enjoys a beautiful mountainside location above a town of historic New England tradition, providing an ideal environment for the growing boy.

BERKSHIRE SCHOOL, Sheffield, Massachusetts.

SEAVER B. BUCK, A.B., Harvard, Head Master.

This college preparatory school occupies an estate of three hundred fifty acres, four miles from Sheffield, at an elevation of nine hundred feet on the eastern slope of Mt. Everett, overlooking the valley of the Housatonic.

Graduates enter the leading colleges of the east. The course of study covers a period of five years in preparation for the C. E. B. examinations or for certification. In addition to the regular college requirements, opportunity is offered for the study of music, art, dramatics and science.

Study hours are treated as of first importance, and are directed with the utmost care. The limited number of students and proportionately large faculty insure careful consideration of the individual needs of the students.

The location among the Berkshire Hills has resulted in the development of two organizations somewhat unique in eastern schools. The Berkshire Outing Club and the Berkshire Ski Club, each under a skilled director, have united in making many miles of trails over the Taconic Range, where hiking and skiing in their respective seasons supplement the organized athletics of the school.

Opportunity is given to every boy to take part in some sport, competitive or otherwise, best suited to his physical development and interest. The competitive sports include football, hockey, baseball, soccer, track, tennis, basketball and skiing. Unless excused by the school physician, each boy is required to participate daily in vigorous exercise.

Scholarships in limited number are awarded yearly to deserving students.

Athletics, although compulsory, are not over emphasized or commercialized and great care is exercised for the physical comfort and well being of the student body so that the atmosphere of the Academy may be pleasant, wholesome and inspiring. Board and tuition $1000. Scholarships for many Colleges.

BEECH HILL SCHOOL FOR BOYS,

Colebrook, Connecticut.

CARL WINKLER, Principal.

A group of not more than fifteen boys, 9-21, who need highly specialized educational or emotional guidance are taken into Dr. Winkler's household for various lengths of time. Carefully selected tutors provide the necessary individual attention. The school's credits are accepted throughout the country.

The principal, a psychologist with eighteen years of practical experience, heads a psychological department which cares for special defects, emotional disturbances, and social maladjustments. No chronic cases are accepted, but the boy who stutters or stammers, or the boy who needs opportunity to develop under skilful supervision in a new environment, to discover latent aptitudes, to be helped to proper adjustment, finds this group healthful, stimulating, and helpful.

Special diets and all outdoor sports are provided.

The school is open all the year. It occupies a beautiful 70-acre estate in the foothills of the Berkshires, 26 miles from Hartford, 7 miles from Winsted. The main building is a 100-year-old house, remodeled and modernized, in a setting of landscaped grounds, woods, and fields.

MANTER HALL SCHOOL, 71 Mt. Auburn at Holyoke St., Cambridge, Mass.

JOHN C. HALL, Head Master.

Founded in 1886 by William Whiting Nolen, well known to many generations of Harvard men for his efficient and successful methods of instruction, Manter Hall is one of the oldest and best known unendowed schools in America. An exceptional curriculum prepares boys and girls for College Entrance exams.

The work is planned and adapted to the demands of each student's problems. The School has enjoyed a high reputation for overcoming successfully special difficulties of its students.

Each instructor is a specialist and has an exhaustive knowledge of the requirements of the College Entrance Board in his subject. Of the sixteen thoroughly competent instructors, each of the following has taught in the School ten years or more: Courtney Bruerton, Ph.D.; John C. Hall, B.S.; Charles A. Hobbs, A.M.; Charles H. Mergendahl, Ed.M.; James A. Reeves, A.B.; Hollis Webster, A.M.; and J. Rowe Webster, A.B.

The building, designed for the unusual purposes of Manter Hall, offers dormitory accommodations. Classrooms and laboratories are small, well lighted and ventilated, intended for Manter Hall's small group teaching method.

Facilities for exercise comprise tennis, squash, swimming and rowing. Because of the School's exacting scholastic standards, no organized teams which require intensive application and exhausting practice are allowed to represent the School.

The fall term opens September 22, 1941. Summer sessions are held during July and August, in Cambridge and in Wianno on Cape Cod. The School is, however, open throughout the year, and students may enter at any time for any period of time.

REV. DOM J. HUGH DIMAN, O.S.B., Head Master.

FRANCIS I. BRADY, Ph.D., Assistant Head.

The Priory School, opened in September 1926, is attached to Portsmouth Priory, a daughter house of Fort Augustus Abbey in Scotland belonging to the English Benedictine Congregation.

The School is guided by two well defined aims: first, to train Catholic boys thoroughly in their religion; second, to provide a general education equal on its secular sides to that of the best non-Catholic schools of similar type. The courses lay the foundations of a genuinely liberal education. As a secondary and more concrete goal to be attained boys are prepared for the College Entrance Board Examinations.

The School as a whole is divided into Lower School (Forms I, II, and III), in which the course is about the same for all, and the Upper School, in which some freedom of election is permitted, increasing as the student advances, and governed by his fitness to throw the emphasis of his work on the ancient Classics, Modern Languages, or Mathematics and Sciences. Under the "House Plan", the Lower School is in a House by itself; the Upper School is divided into two Houses, each with its own library, common rooms, and all that provides a natural and pleasant centre for daily life.

On the Island of Rhode Island, 22 miles south of Providence and 8 miles north of Newport, the school occupies 120 acres of beautiful country overlooking Narragansett Bay. There is every facility for Football, Soccer, Baseball, Basketball, Skating, Tennis, Sailing and Water Sports, Boxing, Track, and Cross Country Running, and for Golf in a nearby club.

MOST REV. MAURICE F. McAULIFFE, D.D.,
Bishop of Hartford, Patron.

Canterbury School, founded in 1915, is a College Preparatory Boarding School for Catholic boys. It is conducted by a Corporation of prominent Catholic laymen: Henry O. Havemeyer, Terence F. Carmody, Nelson Hume, James Cox Brady, Jr., Hubert McDonnell, John S. Burke, and Carlton J. H. Hayes. It maintains the highest standards of discipline and scholarship, and gives a sound training in the doctrines and practices of the Catholic religion.

The Head Master and all the teachers are laymen. The chapel and religious services are under the direction of a diocesan priest appointed by the Bishop. The boys, from eleven to eighteen years old, represent the best type of American youth.

The school grounds, 135 acres at an elevation of 500 feet, are beautifully and healthfully situated, and provide space for Football, Baseball, Hockey, Track, Tennis, and Golf. There are three dormitories: North, built in 1928; Middle, completed in 1937; South, built in 1927. A Gothic Chapel was finished in 1928. The Gymnasium (1924) contains locker-rooms, basketball floor, squash courts, and a 75-foot swimming pool. A new Classroom and Laboratory building was completed in 1939.

Enrollment is limited to 95 boys. The School is remarkable for its excellent spirit of discipline and study, its pleasant and home-like atmosphere, its fine equipment, the character of its boys and masters, and its success in the College Board examinations.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL, Simsbury, Connecticut.
ARTHUR MILLIKEN, B.A., Head Master.

Entering on its second half century of preparing boys for success in College and later life, the power of Westminster lies in the ability to use the carefully weighed experience of the past for the benefit of the present and the future.

A small school for 120 boarding boys, Westminster offers a six-year course preparatory to any College or University in the country. One master for every seven boys makes individual attention possible at all times, especially in the classroom where the ability of each boy to work and think for himself is of equal importance with the subject matter studied.

Boys are trained to find satisfaction in hard work and in a simple, friendly, Christian way of life, and are given increasing responsibility and freedom as they show themselves ready for them. Good taste is stimulated in art and music, and boys are encouraged to develop their talents.

The well rounded plant includes separate dormitory buildings, chapel, gymnasium, swimming pool, squash courts. Important features are the quiet country location, easy access to Hartford, and every facility for outdoor sports.

THE CHOATE SCHOOL, Wallingford, Connecticut.
GEORGE C. ST. JOHN, Head Master.

The underlying purpose in the foundation of Choate was the desire to prove that the life of a family and the life of a school may be effectively combined; that a boy, while gaining the benefits that any good school must provide—efficient teaching, manly discipline, systematic exercise, and association with boys of purpose—need not lose the intimate, personal influence that should characterize his home—a genuine interest in his individuality, a friendly and compelling contact with maturer points of view, and an unconscious development in appreciation of all that “culture” stands for. Through the growth and organization of forty-five years (thirty-three of them under the present Head Master), this has been the distinguishing ideal of Choate; and the School of today is planned, and the personality and character of its masters hard sought, to give to its larger number of fellows both the same training and the same “atmosphere” that the Founders created for the four boys who made up the original school.

Above all the School’s purpose is to instill the work habit and right motives.

THE LAWRENCEVILLE SCHOOL,

Lawrenceville, New Jersey.

ALLAN V. HEELY, LL.D., Litt.D., Head Master.

In the main stream of American democratic education throughout its long and vivid history, Lawrenceville has since 1810 drawn boys from all parts of this country and abroad, and from a diversity of social and economic backgrounds. The objective is to fit selected boys for leadership in American life.

The House System encourages individual aptitudes through its small groups of boys. The life is friendly and informal, the relations between boys and masters close. The House is the centre of social life and of various intra-mural activities.

The School accommodates four hundred seventy-five boarding pupils in buildings supervised by resident masters. For the youngest boys the Lower House provides a special regime.

Seniors, separately housed, are expected to exhibit the self-reliance necessary for successful College achievement.

The round-table method of instruction, extending to the classroom the principle of small-group education on which the House System is based, encourages free discussion and individual initiative in an informal setting.

Lawrenceville is non-sectarian. A number of scholarships are available. Parents and boys should if possible visit the School before applying.

NEWMAN SCHOOL, Lakewood, New Jersey.

XAVIER PRUM, M.A., Louvain, Head Master.

Founded in 1900 to provide a complete preparatory school education of College Entrance Examination Board standards for Catholic boys, under the management of laymen, but with the full benefit of a resident Chaplain, Newman was the first school of its type in the United States. Originally sponsored by Cardinal Gibbons, it was long under the patronage of the late Patrick Cardinal Hayes, and now enjoys the patronage of the Most Reverend William A. Griffin, D.D., Bishop of Trenton. Incorporated "not for profit", it is conducted by a lay Board of Trustees, national in character, headed by Marquis George MacDonald.

Lakewood, located in the pine belt of New Jersey, midway between New York and Atlantic City, about sixty miles from Philadelphia, is known for its mild, healthful climate and beautiful surroundings. On the 176-acre campus, with its own streams, hockey lake, bridle paths, playing fields, and tennis courts, adjoining the 18-hole golf course of the Lakewood Country Club, is the complete and modern plant,—three residence buildings, Locke Hall, MacDonald Hall, and Gibbons House; St. Cyril's Chapel; a school building, Kuser Hall; the Raskob Gymnasium with swimming pool. A wing of MacDonald Hall houses the Infirmary.

A boarding school, limited to 100 boys and organized in two divisions, the Lower School accepts boys 9-14; the Upper School, boys 14-18. The boys of the Lower School live in Gibbons House where a married master with his wife and small children provide the gracious atmosphere of real home life.

Trained by a faculty of laymen who are specialists in their fields, Newman graduates have achieved notable success in the leading colleges and scientific schools of America.

THE MODERN MAIN BUILDING STANDS IN SPACIOUS GROUNDS

FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL ACADEMY,

EDWIN M. HARTMAN, A.M., Pd.D., Principal.

An old College Preparatory School for Boys, Franklin and Marshall Academy is beautifully located on elevated ground in one of the "garden spots" of the United States. The fifteen acre Academy campus, with its view of five to fifteen miles, is one and a quarter hours west of Philadelphia.

Ninety per cent of the graduates enter colleges or technical schools where they are making good records, although a comprehensive course is available to non-college men. The school stresses good, honest work as a prime factor in developing character, and self-confidence, force of will, honor in all things, are infused into the student's training.

While the Academy students enjoy many advantages afforded by the nearby College, such as access to a larger library than most secondary schools have, they are a separate unit with their own life and interests.

The health of the boys is under constant supervision, and sports are so organized that each boy will participate. The Academy has its own gymnasium, athletic field, and access to golf courses and the exceptionally fine College swimming pool.

A Junior School takes boys from the fourth to the eighth grades. Boarding students are accepted at the age of ten.

STUYVESANT SCHOOL, Warrenton, Virginia.

EDWIN B. KING, M.A., Yale, Head Master.

An hour by automobile from Washington, Stuyvesant is on high ground in the beautiful Piedmont section of Virginia—healthful, accessible, a section renowned for its fox-hunting and other outdoor sports. These the boys of Stuyvesant enjoy.

The six year course of study as outlined by the Secondary Education Board prepares for the College Board examinations. Each boy has his individual needs and abilities considered, and his course of study outlined accordingly.

A Lower School for boys from ten to twelve prepares not only for the Upper School at Stuyvesant, but also for the larger New England schools such as St. Paul's and St. Mark's.

A new athletic field and additional tennis courts just completed give ample facilities for all usual school athletics. Riding under most favorable conditions, and with opportunity for the older boys to ride to hounds with the Warrenton Hunt, is also popular.

Weekend trips to places of interest throughout Virginia and also to the buildings, museums and galleries of the National Capital, form an integral part of school routine.

The home atmosphere is strong, happy, and wholesome.

REV. ALBERT HAWLEY LUCAS, M.A., D.C.L., D.D., Head Master

St. Albans, The National Cathedral School for Boys, is a part of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia. It is located four miles northwest of the Capitol in the Close of Washington Cathedral with its 67 acres of playing fields and woodland. The School overlooks the City of Washington and beyond to the hills of the Potomac.

The Plant includes a Chapel, Upper and Lower Schools, and an Activities Building, which has everything from a photographic dark room to the finest basketball court in Washington.

The School possesses the largest athletic field in the city, ten tennis courts, soft ball and outdoor handball courts.

The Government Class in the Frank B. Kellogg Memorial Room is unique in secondary education. Selected members of the two upper Forms study the machinery of their Government, not as an abstract subject, but as a living, operating entity which they can understand by watching it work. Nothing is more important to intelligent citizenship than to appraise national issues.

THE SLADE SCHOOL, Olney P. O., Maryland.

CLARKE WINSHIP SLADE, Head Master.

The Slade School was organized in 1931 to prepare young boys between the ages of seven and fifteen for the large secondary schools. It is on a 243-acre farm 21 miles from Washington, 28 from Baltimore and 212 from New York City.

The basic viewpoint of the School is this: since responsibility must accompany education in order to make it socially effective, it is incumbent upon a young boys' boarding school to expand a sense of responsibility in its students or to implant it if it does not already exist. The Slade School believes that, for boys of an impressionable age, the manifold activities of an actively operated farm are particularly adapted to accomplish this. Looking after the stock, planting the gardens, or working beside the farmer—any of the simple, homely "chores" whose fine influence on a boy's development has been so largely removed by today's mechanization—complement the traditional schoolboy activities. Horseback riding, field sports, and games of all kinds provide ample recreation; art, music, and shop-work stimulate creative activity; and instruction in small groups by men experienced in meeting high standards assures solid academic work.

The School is a member of the Secondary Education Board and Educational Records Bureau. It has prepared boys for Andover, Berkshire, Brooks, Episcopal High, Exeter, Groton, Kent, Lawrenceville, St. Albans, St. Mark's, and St. Paul's, and it meets the requirements of other similar schools.

Culver was founded in 1894 by Henry Harrison Culver. In June 1933 it was transferred by his family from their private ownership to The Culver Educational Foundation in perpetuity.

Without thought of profit, Culver has devoted its energies and resources to the Education of the Whole Boy. Its training is broad enough to prepare a boy for any college or for entrance into the business field upon graduation. Post Graduate Courses are also offered which include work equivalent to the first year of College. Each boy's program of studies is designed to meet his individual aptitudes, interests and future plans.

The educational features of military training have been utilized at Culver since its beginning in developing character and in teaching the value of discipline and cooperation.

The enrollment of the school is national in character. As a result of the flexibility of the curriculum, 499 Culver graduates are enrolled during the current year in 118 colleges and universities in the U. S. and foreign countries.

Culver, on 1000 acres along Lake Maxinkuckee in Northern Indiana, has unusual facilities for every phase of a boy's growth and happiness through pre-college years.

WESTERN RESERVE ACADEMY, Hudson, Ohio.

JOEL B. HAYDEN, B.A., B.D., D.D., Head Master.

The beautiful Colonial setting of the Academy's 50-acre campus is one of the chief attractions that makes Western Reserve outstanding as a non-military boarding school emphasizing College Preparation.

A 500-acre estate and farm adjoin the campus, situated between Cleveland and Akron. A well-trained and experienced staff cares for the 200 boys selected from homes throughout the country and abroad.

The School is fully accredited and well endorsed.

Known as the "Yale of the West" when founded by Connecticut pioneers, this school has expanded under the Ellsworth Foundation.

THE BLAKE SCHOOL, Minneapolis, Minn.

EUGENE C. ALDER, M.A., Head Master.

Blake is a progressive, democratic Country Day School for boys, with a Boarding Department accommodating fifteen. Its sixty-seven acre campus, with eight Tennis Courts, three Hockey Rinks and four Athletic Fields, is 7 miles from the city.

College preparation, sixth grade through high school, is offered. The Junior School, on the Country School grounds, is for boys in third, fourth and fifth grades. Blake is essentially a character-building school that cares for the boy all day.

TODD SCHOOL FOR BOYS, Woodstock, Ill.

ROGER HILL, Head Master.

Todd is a school where each boy's education is the product of his own activities. It is a school in which each boy is made to feel, from the outset, that he is a useful part of the world.

Activity is the keynote, but fundamental subjects are not neglected, nor is college preparation considered secondary. Both are emphasized and the 60% of Todd graduates who enter large eastern institutions testify to the adequacy of the rich, progressive program, vitalized to the highest possible degree. Standardized achievement tests show Todd boys well above the average Illinois public school boy. Classes are from Grade I through high school.

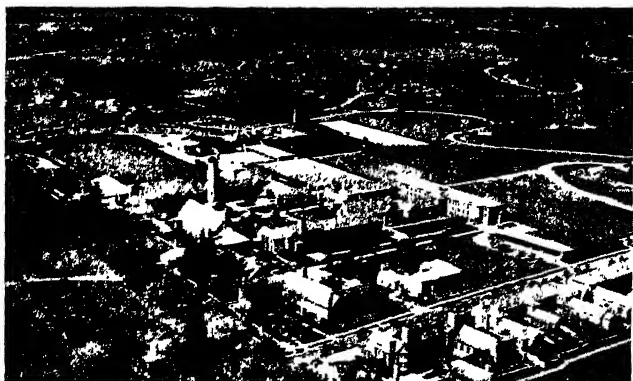

Each boy works hard along some line of useful or artistic endeavor. A shop for textiles, for woodworking and model yacht building, studios for art, painting, camera club, the Farm with its kennel and actual experience in animal husbandry, the printing press on which the boys publish their own illustrated catalog,—all offer fields for colorful activity. Trips in the Todd Land Yacht to as far away points as Boston and New York, Sailing Regattas, and Week-end Riding and Cycling trips are popular.

The fifteen acre campus is just fifty miles from Chicago. Included in the unusual equipment are ten buildings, a 170-acre farm, separate hospital cottage, music building, glass covered swimming pool, theatre with modern stage equipment, toboggan slide, a stable for twelve horses, large athletic fields, gymnasium, etc.

Founded ninety years ago as a home school, Todd is still that; providing a hundred boys with opportunity for joyous profitable living and development of native talents and interests.

CRANBROOK SCHOOL, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan.

RUDOLPH D. LINDQUIST, Ed.D., Director.

GEORGE T. NICKERSON, B.S., Dean.

Cranbrook, a boarding and day school for boys, was founded and endowed by Mr. and Mrs. George G. Booth in 1926. Situated about twenty miles from downtown Detroit, it is the largest of the six cultural and educational institutions for which these donors provided gifts in excess of $17,500,000.

Instruction, primarily college preparatory, is offered in grades seven through twelve. A post-graduate course is also given. The curriculum is enriched by exceptional opportunities in the arts, crafts, music, and sciences. Teaching is directed toward developing boys individually. The faculty averages one instructor for every nine boys and is made up of men possessing the personality and training to deal effectively with boys of intermediate and high school age.

Natural facilities, together with extensive playgrounds, football, baseball, and soccer fields, tennis and handball courts, hockey rinks and track, encourage year round sports. Athletics are planned to reach every boy. Coaching is done by instructors who work, play, and live with their pupils. A resident physician, graduate nurse with a fully equipped infirmary, and distinguished consultants, take care of students' health. Design and adornment of all buildings fulfill the donors' ambition to provide for education in an inspiringly beautiful environment.

The resources of The Cranbrook Institute of Science and The Academy of Art are available to boys especially interested in sciences, arts, and artistic handicrafts.

Cranbrook School is affiliated with the Episcopal Church but aims at a religious and moral atmosphere in no way sectarian.

LAKE FOREST ACADEMY, Lake Forest, Illinois.

JOHN WAYNE RICHARDS, A.M., Head Master.

Differing from the prevailing type of school in the Middle West, since 1857 this national College Preparatory School for boys has maintained educational standards on a par with those of the best Eastern institutions.

Lake Forest prepares for College and for Life — in scholarship, character, physical and mental health. Every boy's course is planned to meet the requirements of his chosen college. The School desires only those students for whom it can do most — boys with a commendable spirit of manliness, honor and self-respect; with mental capacity to progress in their studies.

The Richards Plan in Education, inaugurated in 1930, uses unique and different methods in developing interest, enthusiasm, independent thinking, concentration, efficiency, and power of study. It has greatly improved scholastic achievement and has enabled graduates to maintain high marks in College.

Each subject in the daily schedule is allotted ninety minutes — the first half devoted to class work, the second for preparation of the next day's work in the Classroom under the supervision of the teacher. Each day a new subject comes first on the "staggered, rotating schedule" so that no subject has precedence or preferred position. Every fifth period is given over to independent written review and research on the pupil's own responsibility. The Study Hall Library is equipped to interest boys in good reading outside the curriculum.

In a beautiful residential suburb of Chicago, Lake Forest has homelike, friendly and normal surroundings. The boys rooms are colorful, comfortable and attractive, and they have the privilege of decorating them.

Afternoons are spent at Golf or Tennis, on the Athletic Fields or in the Gymnasium with its Swimming Pool. Scientific physical training and opportunity for team competition for every boy. Real work is available in Physical and Health Education.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL, Howe, Indiana.

COLONEL BURRETT B. BOUTON, M.A., Superintendent.

One of the oldest boys' schools of the mid-west, this prominent Episcopal School has been preparing boys for the better colleges and universities for 57 years.

Its academic program, supplemented by carefully planned athletics and military training (R.O.T.C.), is the result of years of experience and its aim is to develop all of the qualities most desirable in a boy.

A restricted enrollment insures a close, personal relationship between master and boy. The course in Guidance helps the boy to learn the art of studying and to "find himself."

The separate Junior School has its own buildings and faculty.

ELGIN ACADEMY, Elgin, Illinois.

EARL G. LEINBACH, A.M., Head Master.

This distinguished Academy, the oldest endowed College Preparatory School in the Midwest, enrolls boys from the seventh grade through high school. Curriculum and standards meet the requirements of all Colleges and Scientific Schools.

Chartered in 1839, during the past 40 years 95% of the graduates have enrolled in leading Colleges and Universities. A rotating daily schedule stimulates interest and insures systematic study. An Art Gallery and Shop offer opportunities unusual for a preparatory school.

To meet increasing demands, a new modern dormitory with recreation rooms, etc., supplemented other new facilities in 1940. Adequate facilities for athletics include Fields, Tennis Courts, Gymnasium, Golf Course and Swimming Pool.

THE REV. DONALD HENNING, B.D., Rector.

H. R. DRUMMOND, M.A., Principal.

To carry out its purpose as a college preparatory school for boys, Shattuck provides 18 buildings, 640 acres of land, a stable faculty of over 20, plus 80 years experience under the aegis of the Episcopal Church. Since 1869 a regular army officer has been on detail at Shattuck to supervise its military instruction. The success of the "Shattuck plan" is evidenced by the record of its graduates in college, in the Army and Navy, the Church, in the professions, and in business life.

Twelve sports are offered, including golf, riding, indoor track and swimming.

ARIZONA DESERT SCHOOL, Tucson, Arizona.

WALLACE H. WITCOMBE, M.A., Head Master.

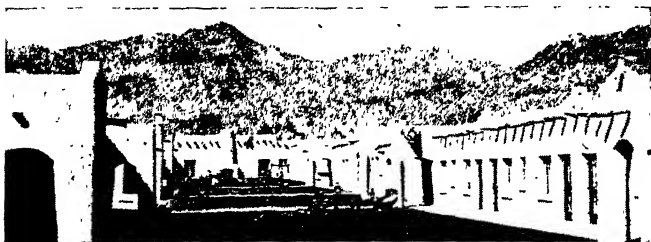

Organized 1927 for boys 8-15 who need Arizona's dry, sunny climate, the school has an enrollment limited to forty so a home-like atmosphere may be maintained, and the health, studies, and general development of each boy given individual attention.

The protected location in the desert at the foot of the Catalina Mountains permits a vigorous outdoor life throughout the winter. Riding and other western activities are particularly stressed, and every boy has his own horse.

The curriculum meets the requirements of the best preparatory schools. The Secondary Education Board and the Educational Records Bureau tests are used.

No one suffering from a communicable disease is admitted.

SOUTHERN ARIZONA SCHOOL, Tucson, Arizona.

CAPTAIN RUSSELL B. FAIRGRIEVE, B.S., Head Master.

This modern Ranch School for boys 12-18 offers thorough College Preparation in the warm, dry climate of Southern Arizona, under conditions most helpful for physical, social and academic development. In the foothills of the Santa Catalinas, 12 miles from Tucson, adjacent to the Coronado National Forest, the attractive, steam heated, Hopi Indian Lodges provide living quarters with warmth, conveniences and comforts necessary for growing boys. Infirmary and nurse are provided.

The needs of each boy are studied, individual attention provided, and thorough preparation for C.E.B. examinations given. Ten masters supervise the fifty boys drawn from all parts of the country. New students are selected by the Director who travels extensively in June and September. Special railroad cars, supervised by the School, bring students from New York in September and return them in May.

Each boy owns a horse. Polo, camp and pack trips, and other recreational activities with horses, Riflery under careful supervision, Tennis, Basketball and various contact sports are enjoyed. Fishing and exploration trips are taken to interesting Arizona points, as well as to Old Mexico. Boys with communicable diseases cannot be considered for enrollment.

LOS ALAMOS RANCH SCHOOL, Los Alamos, N.M.

A. J. CONNELL, Director.

Comprehensive attention to physical, mental, and recreational development is given boys who need added strength and stamina during their years of growth and those who wish to enjoy a broad program of outdoor sports and activities.

In the healthful climate of northern New Mexico, 35 miles northwest of Santa Fé in the pine timber belt of the Jemez Mountains, the school's program takes advantage of the combination of altitude, dry atmosphere, and abundant sunshine.

The curriculum covers six years previous to College and is planned to give a background of cultural knowledge and discernment, and to develop intellectual interests and desire for further study. Boys progress by subjects rather than by years.

Riding is the chief extra-curricular activity; proficiency is gained with both western and eastern equipment. Horses are assigned individually to each boy. Two afternoons a week may be devoted to training, mounted games, or optional rides. Saturday trips are taken to nearby points of interest; two cabins make convenient bases for weekend trips to more distant points.

Athletics are intramural, suited to the development of the boy, with skating and skiing from December through March.

FRANCIS MITCHELL FROELICHER, Head Master.

This Six-Form College Preparatory Boarding School for 100 normal, healthy boys 12-18, organized under joint East and West auspices, is ideally located. It offers a mild and dry climate for boys in their formative years, and familiarizes them with a magnificent mountain country among people of liberalizing customs and traditions. It is not a ranch school.

The School was founded to offer boys a wider experience than can be secured by continuous school and college work in the East or elsewhere. It presents sound preparation for colleges requiring C.E.B. Examinations, taken at the school each June. An attempt is made to breed a general interest in the Social and Political Institutions of the Country. A tutorial system ensures close, friendly relationship, homelike atmosphere.

Athletic opportunities include Football, Baseball, Gymnasium, Tennis, Swimming, Ice Hockey, Skiing. Horses are kept in the School Stables. A log cabin in Rock Creek Canyon (9000 ft.) is used for weekends and as a base for mountain climbing.

SAINT MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS, Seven Springs, Littleton, New Hampshire.

Mrs. CLINTON A. McLANE, Principal.

St. Mary's is a small school, wholesome in atmosphere, simple in equipment, and rich in beauty of surroundings and opportunities for a vigorous outdoor life.

The School prepares for all Colleges. It also offers courses for the girl whose tastes are specialized. Of primary consideration, however, is the development of each girl's natural abilities, apart from her future school career. To keep the group homogeneous, students are selected with considerable care and discrimination. Small classes, taught in an informal manner about a conference table, and one teacher to every four pupils, provide for maximum individual guidance. Faculty members are carefully chosen for personality as well as ability.

Opportunity for occasional contact with boys and girls from other schools is encouraged. The concerts, lectures and dramatic productions as well as outdoor affairs offered at Dartmouth are enjoyed. Participation in the community life of Littleton is broadly educational.

The mountain surroundings naturally afford unusual recreational opportunities with skiing the most popular sport. Facilities for riding, swimming, badminton are available.

MARGUERITE HEARSEY, Ph.D., Principal.

In a beautiful setting in historic Andover, Abbot, though well launched in its second century, is as young as its youngest student, for its traditions are reinterpreted into terms of contemporary life and are found to be invigorating and satisfying for the modern girl.

The School grounds of twenty-five acres include lawns, woods, playing fields, and a private pond. There are excellent facilities for Golf, Riding, and Skiing, as well as the usual sports.

Both the four and the five year course lead to college entrance, but the latter offers opportunity for emphasis on Art or Music, and provides a general cultural education for those not going to college, as well as opportunity to strengthen foundation work in college preparatory subjects. Students may enter at any year, though preference is given those enrolling for more than one year.

The Arts—Music, Art, Dramatics, and the great heritage of the humanist tradition—literature, modern and ancient history, science are so presented as to prepare girls not only for college but for the specific demands of our contemporary democratic society so far as they can be foreseen.

The basic principle in the conduct of the School is the development, under the guidance of wise friendly teachers, of tolerance, imagination, clear thinking, and self reliance.

MRS. HENRY HEYWOOD FOX }

The Low-Heywood School, founded more than seventy-five years ago, is beautifully located three miles from Stamford on Long Island Sound. Mrs. Fox, one of the principals, is the sister of Mary Rogers Roper, Head Mistress for many years until her death in September 1939. She is also the niece of Edith Heywood and grand-niece of Louisa Low, the founders of the school.

Stamford is within an hour of New York, yet the spacious grounds and playing fields make it possible to stress outdoor activities—hockey, tennis, track, basketball, lacrosse, badminton and riding.

College Preparation is emphasized and a one year review offered high school graduates. Low-Heywood girls have made excellent records for themselves and for the school in the leading women's colleges of the East. There is also a General Course, and special departments of music, art, choral singing, dramatics.

The school accommodates fifty boarding pupils. This number provides competition in work, agreeable companionship in play, and enables the staff to know each girl as an individual, and to guide her in a friendly and personal way.

In the Main Building are the living rooms, dining room, bedrooms for the older girls, classrooms, study hall, laboratories, studio and gymnasium. A Junior Cottage houses the girls from ten to thirteen years. In 1929 Mary Rogers Roper built a beautiful Chapel in memory of her aunts, Louisa Low and Edith Heywood.

SAINT MARGARET'S SCHOOL, Waterbury, Conn.

Miss ALBERTA C. EDELL, A.M., Principal.

Every successful school must offer pleasant surroundings, adequate facilities, capable instructors, thorough training, and a wide range of courses and extra-curricular opportunities.

This is true of Saint Margaret's. A visit to the School would convince one of its obvious physical qualities; records in most of the well known women's colleges show the emphasis on College Training and the thoroughness of the preparation.

Saint Margaret's offers more: Encouragement to each girl through the drama, the dance, writing, or some other field of activity to discover and develop within herself something worthy of expression. Hard work, clear thinking, reasonable living, wide interests, and sincerity of purpose are stressed.

BRANTWOOD HALL SCHOOL, Bronxville, N. Y.

WINNIFRED BROWN, A.B., A.M., Head Mistress.

Brantwood Hall School is an established resident and day school for girls from kindergarten to college. Situated in Westchester County, it offers the advantages of country life and the cultural opportunities of New York City.

Emphasis is placed on the fundamentals — building of character, the perfecting of friendships, and the attainment of fine intellectual performance. Small classes insure individual attention from a well-equipped and efficient faculty. Both Regents and College Board requirements are fulfilled.

THE BRONXVILLE NURSERY SCHOOL, under the direction of Adele McKinnie, is located on the grounds.

Preparing for all Colleges, the curriculum is adopted as the basis of a liberal education with exceptional opportunities for Music (vocal and instrumental), Art, Dramatics.

The School, with its fireproof Main Building, Study Building, Cottages, Studio, Gymnasium, separately housed Dining Hall, etc., is constructed with an eye to beauty, efficiency and convenience. Its beautiful Chapel is an outstanding feature.

Carefully supervised athletics include hockey, track, tennis, etc., for which the 25-acre estate is well equipped. Much is made of Riding, and horses can be kept or hired at the Round Hill Club Stables. A Self-Government Committee chosen by the School and responsible to the Heads is carefully if inconspicuously guided in the maintenance of order.

ROSEMARY JUNIOR SCHOOL, with progressive country day features, offers varied activities and studies covering all the so-called regular school subjects, as well as Arts, Crafts, Music, the Dance, French, Dramatics. Examinations are not required for entrance to the Upper School.

EMMA WILLARD SCHOOL, Troy, New York.

Miss ELIZA KELLAS, LL.D., Principal.

Thoroughly modern and completely in touch with the life of the times, Emma Willard School remains true to the ideals of scholarship and moral training upon which it was founded a hundred and twenty-seven years ago. Today as always its essential appeal is to girls of serious educational purpose and high moral standards.

Candidates for entrance must present satisfactory school records and evidence of good character. Assignment to classes is made on the basis of previous records. A faculty of over forty permits instruction in unusually small sections to which girls are assigned according to their aptitude.

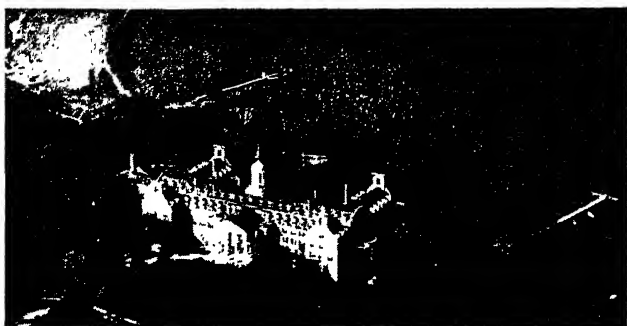

The school prepares students for any College or University, and its certificate is accepted by all colleges admitting without examination. There is also a broad General Course for those who do not wish to enter College.

Emma Willard aims to combine with scholastic efficiency, consideration of each girl's individual needs. Correction and direction of physical tendencies, formation of right habits of study, and maintenance of social and moral conditions favorable to the development of fine character are especially stressed. Extra curricular activities, musical and dramatic clubs, two school publications, are all carefully directed.

Physical training is required of all. Complete equipment, providing unusual opportunities for recreation and physical development, includes a modern gymnasium, swimming pool, two bowling alleys, nine tennis courts, four badminton courts, hockey fields, soccer field, archery range, indoor and outdoor basketball courts, and roller-skating hall.

If possible, parents and prospective pupils should visit the school before making application.

THE KNOX SCHOOL, Cooperstown, New York.

Mrs. RUSSELL HOUGHTON, Principal.

Today, with women entering professions and emphasis on specialized training, there is stronger need for the school that builds for character. Such a school is Knox.

In an environment of exceptional beauty and healthful outdoor country life, Knox girls, from 14 to 20 years of age, receive a thorough and unusual training — physically, morally and mentally. The life and activities of girls from 11 to 14 in the Junior High School are entirely separate and under careful supervision.

The High School offers College Preparatory and General Courses under the supervision of University trained specialists.

Two years of Advanced Courses prepare students to enter Universities and Colleges with advanced standing. Interesting work in Music, Art, Home Economics, Interior Decorating, Theatre Arts, Dancing and Secretarial Training is available.

The equipment at Knox School includes a spacious, fireproof Home of Colonial style, Gymnasium, indoor Riding Ring, Skating Rink, Golf Course and Tennis Courts, and use of a new Swimming Pool.

The open country, woodland and lake give unexcelled facilities for country sports all year.

THE SPENCE SCHOOL,
22 East 91st Street, New York City.
DOROTHY BROCKWAY OSBORNE, M.A.,
Head Mistress.

As a day and resident school for girls from Kindergarten age through High School, The Spence School has enjoyed an excellent reputation since its establishment in 1892 by the late Clara B. Spence. In 1929 the School moved to its new fireproof building overlooking Central Park where a maximum amount of light and sunshine is enjoyed. In 1932 Miss Chandor's School was joined with The Spence School in this new building.

Two hundred and fifty pupils are accommodated without crowding in the spacious building. Resident students are accepted in the five upper classes for full time residence and for a five day plan, from Monday morning to Friday noon.

The School diploma is awarded for College Preparatory and General Courses. Appreciation of all the Arts is cultivated as a necessary adjunct to gracious living and the School takes advantage of the rich store of material, artistic, historical, and scientific, which New York has to offer. The complete physical education program includes all sports, with frequent weekends in the country for hiking, skiing, and skating.

KENT PLACE SCHOOL, Summit, New Jersey.

HARRIET LARNED HUNT, A.B., Smith, Head Mistress.
REBECCA LOCKE MIXNER, A.B., Mt. Holyoke, Asst.

Sound in academic training from Primary Grades through College Preparation, Kent Place has been especially successful and is highly recommended by the leading Eastern Colleges for Women. Although about ninety percent of the Girls prepare for College, Kent Place offers a General Course to those who do not plan to enter a major college. Emphasis is placed on the Arts. Individual instruction is given in voice, piano, and violin. The Glee Club and Dramatic Club are unusually active.

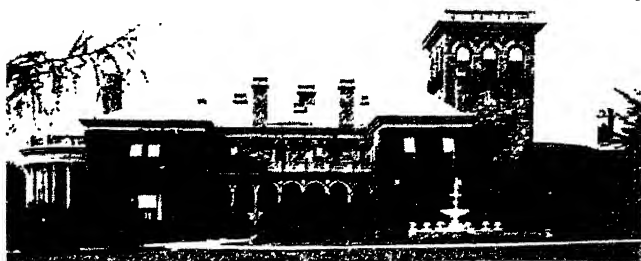

The combined advantages of proximity to New York City and opportunity for wholesome outdoor life are available to girls at Kent Place. The nine buildings on the twenty-two acre estate include a School House with skylight studio, a spacious Gymnasium, and Mabie House, a modern fireproof Dormitory, in which most suites are arranged with connecting baths.

Health, poise, and the spirit of fair play are emphasized in all athletics—field hockey, tennis, soccer, basketball, skating, coasting, skiing and riding.

The purpose of the School is to achieve high standards of scholarship and character, and Kent Place girls have acquired the reputation for doing well whatever they attempt to do.

ALICE G. HOWLAND
ELEANOR O. BROWNELL } Principals.

MR. AND MRS. J. RUSSELL LYNES, Assoc. Principals.

While maintaining the high academic standards on which the School was founded, Shipley offers its girls a well-rounded and balanced life.

The School is divided into Upper and Lower Units. The curriculum of the Upper School, designed to meet College requirements, also includes a Liberal Arts course for non-college girls. Students are trained in their work so that College Board Examinations are looked upon only as incidentals and not as the aim of the courses.

For better understanding and guidance of the girls, the faculty is large and classes small. The democratic way of life at Shipley is fostered by student and faculty participation in a community in which each readily assumes her share of responsibility. Tradition requires of the girls simplicity of dress, manner and bearing.

Only ten miles from Philadelphia, and adjoining Bryn Mawr College, Shipley School has all the advantages of country life.

The main athletic fields for hockey, lacrosse, basketball, and tennis courts are on a thirty acre farm some three miles from the School. The farm serves also as an important health factor, furnishing as it does the milk, eggs, fresh fruit and vegetables for the School table.

GEORGE SCHOOL, George School P.O., Pa.

GEORGE A. WALTON, A.M., Univ. of Pa., Principal.

This coeducational Friends' school occupies a 242-acre tract of land—campus, athletic fields, woods, and farm. It is 25 miles northeast of Philadelphia, 11 miles west of Trenton.

About two-thirds of the 391 students are following a new "sequence" curriculum method of secondary education and the rest have plans of studies made up of year-courses. Various sequence curriculums—in languages, social studies, or citizenship—allow a three-year concentration in fields particularly suited to a student's natural abilities and ambitions.

The respect of boy for girl and girl for boy is valuable in the school life.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL, Westtown, Pennsylvania.

JAMES F. WALKER, B.S., Ed.M., Principal.

Westtown is a Quaker, coeducational, country boarding and day school. A background of over 140 years of work with young people anchors an ever constant concern for developing new approaches to learning as the sciences contribute new techniques and skills to the field of human relationships. A 600-acre farm (about 24 miles from Philadelphia) with dairy, orchards, lake, wood lots, playing fields, and tennis courts provides opportunities for wholesome, cooperative living in sports, work and play. Full and thorough preparation is offered for any college or university. Boys are in residence from 7th grade, girls from 9th.

ARKE, West Woodstock, Connecticut.

MRS. CLINTON TAYLOR, Director.

Arke is a school in the country for a small group of boys and girls six to twelve years. Here, in surroundings like the old time large family, a sound education and much helpful activity in work and play on the farm are afforded the children enrolled.

Small classes make the academic work so thorough and interesting that the children are unusually well prepared for secondary schools. Development of responsibility, thoroughness, and real intellectual interests are stressed. Among the sports are skiing, skating, swimming, fishing and riding; the latter is especially popular.

SUNSHINE ACRES, Mays Landing, New Jersey.

ILSLEY BOONE, President.

Established after a year's survey of free schools in England, France and the U. S., this School of the New Education was opened in 1939. It is chiefly concerned with the building of character, self-confidence, resourcefulness and health. The normal processes and interests of natural growth are utilized as the foundation upon which the cultural and emotional life is fashioned.

Pupils are admitted from three to twelve years of age and are retained up through their eighteenth year. A balanced and unified curriculum allows a wide choice for the children to find their special bent, and freedom to develop it fully.

The rates are moderate and the "self help" plan provides opportunities for older pupils to earn a portion of the fee. Travel without extra cost is included.

On the banks of the Great Egg Harbor River near Mays Landing, there is every opportunity for a healthful outdoor life.

This progressive open air country boarding and day school, 38 miles from New York, for boys and girls 6-18, includes primary grades to college, thorough college preparation, music, arts, dramatics, and a wide range of athletics.

Lower, middle, and upper groups have separate quarters but students enjoy companionship with others of varied ages and with the carefully selected faculty. Living under such conditions in a family atmosphere makes for character training and social adjustment. A flexible schedule and a large staff provide small groups of the same social age unusual opportunities for individual instruction and creative work. Their eager attitude and thorough preparation have enabled Cherry Lawn students to achieve enviable college records.

Primarily an outdoor school giving boys and girls the greatest possible number of hours in the open, the younger students sleep on screened and sheltered porches with study and play outdoors. New dormitories designed by William Lescaze provide sleeping quarters, social rooms and study halls for older students. The health record proves the value of the outdoor régime. The twenty-eight acres of woods, lake, field and stream provide conditions in which the good education may be readily realized.

THE ETHICAL CULTURE SCHOOLS,
33 Central Park West, New York City.

DR. JOHN LOVEJOY ELLIOTT, Rector.

DR. V. T. THAYER, Educational Director.

The first free Kindergarten in America was established in 1878 by Dr. Felix Adler, Founder of the Society for Ethical Culture and Rector of the School until his death in April, 1933. From this small beginning the present complex institution has developed. The foundation principles are coeducation, a rich and varied course of study, all practicable freedom in the selection of work, careful attention to the physical welfare of children, the cultivation of serious intellectual interests, the fostering of the spirit of progress, and the development of a broad ethical conception of the place of the individual in society.

THE MIDTOWN SCHOOL, 33 Central Park West, accommodates boys and girls from pre-kindergarten through the sixth grade and includes outdoor recreation in a balanced program of work, study, and play.

THE FIELDSTON SCHOOL is situated on seventeen acres of land at Riverdale, just inside the northern boundary of New York City. It includes a Middle School (junior high school), and an Upper School with College Preparatory courses which may include courses in Art, Business and Homemaking.

THE FIELDSTON LOWER SCHOOL, an elementary unit on the Fieldston grounds, provides a setting unusually well adapted to the needs of children beginning with the pre-kindergarten child of four and continuing to the pre-adolescent of Grade VI.

THE ETHICAL CULTURE SCHOOL CAMP at Cooperstown, New York, for boys and girls from 7 to 14, reflects the spirit and democratic organization of the Schools without being restricted to members of its student body.

THE SIDWELL FRIENDS SCHOOL,
Washington, D. C.

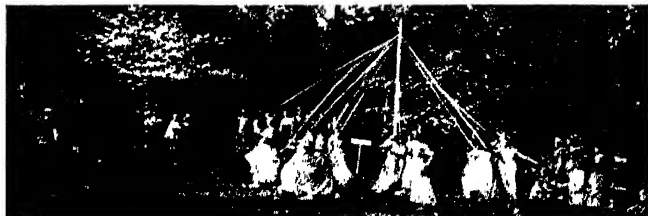

ALBERT E. ROGERS, A.B., A.M., Head Master.

This coeducational day school from pre-kindergarten through high school occupies 17 acres in the residential section of northwest Washington. Great emphasis is placed on thorough preparation for leading colleges and the curriculum is adaptable to the needs of service and embassy children coming to Washington from stations throughout the world.

Boys and girls of different age groups have separate playing fields. Health education and recreational activities are stressed. Courses in Art, Music, Manual Training, Choral Speaking, Home Economics, Typing, and Stenography offer a wide variety of choice. Close cooperation with the home through an active Parents' Auxiliary and a careful program of guidance and supervised student activities develop a well integrated student prepared for college and life. The educational advantages of cosmopolitan Washington are utilized to the full.

Under a modified country-day plan, boys and girls engage in many co-recreational activities. Bus service, as well as supervised afternoon care, is available for younger children.

The School is nonsectarian but a majority of the Trustees are members of the Society of Friends. Simplicity, sincerity, and friendliness are emphasized in the daily life.

Modern in methods, the curriculum through Grade 10 is based on the Secondary Education Board requirements, though exceeding them in scope.

There are exceptional Sports facilities for Boys and Girls.

SPRINGDALE SCHOOL, Canton, North Carolina.

DR. THOMAS ALEXANDER, Director.

Boys and girls from 10 to 18 are prepared for college at this country home school in the Smoky Mountain region, twelve miles from Waynesville, North Carolina.

The program fits children to meet life's problems by having them participate in actual life situations, each according to his ability and stage of development. Effectiveness,—what a student is and can do, rather than what he knows,—is of primary importance at Springdale.

A month each year is devoted to travel, an important part of the curriculum. In 1940 one group travelled to New York City where they studied the artistic resources, museums, concerts, etc., and with an architect laid plans for a new house at the school. A second group went through the South and studied the social and economic problems of the region, emphasizing particularly the culture of New Orleans. The educational value of careful planning, the setting of definite objectives, the keeping of diaries, and making of substantial reports at the close of trips is stressed throughout.

HIGH VALLEY CAMP for boys and girls, also near Canton, is under the same direction.

HELENA T. DEVEREUX, Executive Director.

JOHN M. BARCLAY, Registrar.

For twenty-two years Devereux Schools have been helping parents and educators to solve the problems of boys and girls with educational or emotional difficulties. Special provision is made for the slow-learning child and the child with superior intelligence whose progress is blocked by emotional disturbances.

To group the students in small homogeneous units and to provide home-like surroundings, the Schools occupy ten separate country estates. Academic instruction, crafts and vocational work, and recreational activities are adapted to each group, from nursery school through high school.

Expertly trained and experienced staff members carry on individual and small-group instruction. The instructors, aided by the school psychiatrist, give special attention to speech correction, remedial reading, and social adjustment.

Boys and girls in the upper age levels have their own separate schools. Older boys and girls are encouraged to specialize in some vocational field.

The Schools are located fifteen miles west of Philadelphia, near the Lincoln Highway. Paoli is the express stop for all Pennsylvania Railroad trains.

Summer camps are maintained at North Anson, Maine, and at Devon, Pennsylvania.

BRADFORD JUNIOR COLLEGE, Bradford, Mass.
DOROTHY M. BELL, A.B., A.M., President.

Bradford Junior College, founded in 1803 as Bradford Academy and located thirty-two miles from Boston, is the oldest institution in New England and next to the oldest in the United States for the higher education of women. It was the first junior college for women to be admitted to the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Incorporated from the beginning as a non-profit-making institution, Bradford has endowment and trust funds. It attracts students from all parts of the United States.

Not only is Bradford an accredited two-year college of liberal arts, but it also offers extensive instruction and opportunities in fine and applied arts, music, speech and dramatics, and home economics. The educational program differentiates work for students finishing at Bradford, for students transferring to other colleges, and for students transferring to specialized schools.

Six members of the highly trained and experienced faculty have the degree of Ph.D., and twelve are men. Courses and equipment are thoroughly modern. During 1939-1940 resources were greatly augmented by the completion of two new buildings, one housing classrooms and laboratories, the other a large auditorium, with pipe organ and fully equipped stage. Ample provision is made for all sports, including swimming, riding, and golf.

This fully accredited junior college offers to secondary school graduates an individualized educational experience under especially favorable conditions of residence and opportunity. The Academic Course, a well-rounded two-year unit with a wide choice of electives, prepares for cultivated and constructive citizenship and is acceptable in transfer to major colleges and universities; the two-year Homemaking Course combines with a cultural background a modern approach to home economics and practical experience in home management; the Music Course, three years, specializes in vocal or instrumental music with allied academic subjects. The French Center and the Homemaking Practice Cottage present unusual opportunities. Eminent musicians and artists in many fields visit the college, and Boston, with its varied educational advantages, is only fifteen miles distant.

The college life emphasizes the maintenance of high academic and social standards and the development of individual responsibility. Small classes, an influential faculty, small house groups, and integrating social centers are significant features. Student organizations permit stimulating group activities. Excellent physical training opportunities include Riding.

HARCUM JUNIOR COLLEGE, Bryn Mawr, Pa.

EDITH HARCUM, President.

In a beautiful Philadelphia suburb ten miles from the city, Harcum draws Girls from all parts of the country and offers them the following two-year courses with transferable credits: Academic, Journalism, Secretarial and Medical Secretarial Science, Music, Home Economics, Fashion Illustrating, Costume Design, Experimental Theatre, Fine Arts, Interior Decorating, Nursery Work, Radio, Advertising Design.

Harcum has as its definite goal the orientation of the secondary school graduate and thorough training of her best ability, so as to give more point to her life and lead to possible self-support. Some of the graduates transfer to major colleges with advanced standing, some to strictly professional schools, while a great many are ready, after two years, for remunerative positions which the Harcum Placement Department helps them secure.

An outstanding tradition at Harcum is the weekly gathering of faculty and students, held in the large studios, where work of every department is discussed and criticized from a professional standpoint. These informal occasions have the atmosphere of a salon and are broadly cultural and stimulating.

Opera, Concerts, Theatre, Art Exhibits, trips to Washington and New York, monthly dances, and a balanced, delightful social life over the weekends all make life at Harcum vibrant with stimulating work, cultural opportunities, outdoor sports, and interesting social experiences.

MOUNT VERNON SEMINARY, Washington, D. C.

GEORGE W. LLOYD, A.M., Clark University, President.

OLWEN LLOYD, M.A., University of Cambridge, England,
Head Mistress.

It is the conviction at Mount Vernon that among the girls who enjoy special educational advantages must be found the community leaders of the future. The program of this school is accordingly directed toward developing a consciousness of civic responsibility, a knowledge of the significant problems of this changing world, and a power to analyze such problems constructively.

The School offers three years of high school—General and College Preparatory,—and two years of Junior College. The curriculum provides a large number of electives to be chosen according to each girl's individual needs. The College bases its program of work and social activity upon these premises: That preparation for marriage should be more than a by-product of education; that girls should be equipped to exercise their political privileges intelligently; that self-discipline is an essential prerequisite of democratic leadership.

A site of thirty-one acres of park and woodland in the suburbs of Washington combines the innumerable advantages of the country with those of the city.

THE HICKOX SECRETARIAL SCHOOL, 12 Huntington Avenue, Boston, Massachusetts.

MRS. EDINA CAMPBELL-DOVER, Principal.

Sixty years ago the Hickox School was founded on a principle unique in business education—close personal contact constantly maintained between instructor and student and the student's individual tendencies faithfully watched and guided. The essentials in secretarial training are retained—the non-essentials omitted. By this program the secretarial course at Hickox may be completed in from seven to ten months; while a sound working knowledge of two subjects—shorthand and typing—can be acquired in a much shorter time. The School has a limited enrollment and a placement record of practically 100%. Beginning or advanced students are accepted, if vacancies permit, on any Monday throughout the year.

KATHLEEN DELL SCHOOL, Brookline, Mass.

KATHLEEN DELL, Director.

A two year secretarial course emphasizes the medical, dramatic and radio, or executive secretarial departments. A two year course in dietetics stresses both theory and practice in foods and tearoom and institutional management. A special intensive one year course for college graduates is offered in each department.

Each student may take part in school activities,—dances, dramatics, radio broadcasting, editing the school paper, riding and sports.

NICHOLS JUNIOR COLLEGE,
Dudley, Massachusetts.

JAMES LAWSON CONRAD, B.B.A., President.

This degree granting Junior College of Business Administration and Executive Training was first in the East for Men and first of its type with full campus and dormitory equipment. Recognition is given by the War Department to the Candidates School for the Quartermaster Corps.

Students come from thirty-four states and nineteen foreign countries. This distribution together with the discriminating type of patronage enables the College to avoid provincialism.

Attractively situated in the Dudley Hills of Massachusetts, Nichols is readily accessible but apart from the distractions of the large cities. The spacious 75 acre Campus lends itself to participation in all phases of college life.

Nichols has contributed substantially to educational progress in numerous ways. One of the most vital factors is the functioning of an Advisory Council of about forty outstanding business executives grouped in sections representing a complete cycle of business activity. These executives have analyzed the curricula and have prescribed the background courses necessary for an outlet insuring absolute soundness in preparation for specific fields.

Through the psychology course utilizing the Miller Associates procedure of individual analysis for business executives, students are individually analyzed and stimulated in factors involving among others intelligence, personality, adaptability, emotional stability and even utilizing the highly technical psychiatric Rorschak. As a result, the student is intelligently guided in the fields outlined by the Advisory Council so his inherent qualities may be most productive.

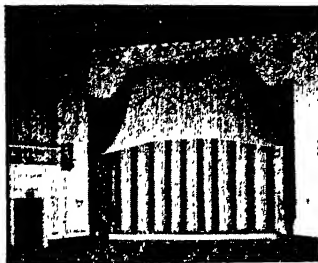

Upon graduation students indicating executive possibilities are invited by the faculty to participate for two years in the Executive Training program. These men are placed for one year under the direct supervision of business executives, for varying periods of time, in work involving Personnel, Accounting and Office Management, Banking and Investment, Production and Manufacturing, Marketing and Sales Analysis, Advertising and Journalism, Insurance and Real Estate, and Business Administration. These students on completion of the cycle are then required to select their major, returning to a concern for a minimum of six weeks training under the personal direction of the administrative executive. On the completion of these requirements the student returns to College for his fourth year of specialization.

CIMARRONCITA RANCH CAMP, Ute Park, N. M.

MINNETTE THOMPSON BURK, Director,

3510 Main Street, Houston, Texas.

The green, wooded Sangre de Cristo mountains—far above the heat of summer (altitude 6500 ft.), free of dampness, snakes, and mosquitoes—with their high dry mountain air washed by frequent showers, offer the utmost in health and beauty to this grassy ranch camp for girls 7-21.

Featured are pack trips, motor trips, tennis, art, dancing, swimming and daily riding for all. All usual camp activities (except boating) under mature qualified instructors. Camp and program divided into three groups: Senior Cabins, Junior Ranch House, and Counselor Training Lodge. Electricity, baths, and fireplaces in all living quarters. Dude Ranch for Campers, Families and Adults, after regular organized girls' camp term.

DIRECTORIES

OF ASSOCIATIONS, ADVERTISING MEDIUMS, BUREAUS, AND FIRMS OF INTEREST TO PRIVATE SCHOOLS

The Directories that follow furnish an address list of great value to all who have to do with Private Schools or Colleges.

A file of Catalogs of Firms dealing in supplies and equipment for schools is maintained in this office. School Executives are invited to make use of these and our extensive files of information in regard to Firms which are in a position to serve them.

We will gladly answer inquiries in regard to where any particular service or equipment may be obtained.

"Where to Buy Supplies for Educational Institutions," a guide for educational buyers, will be sent on request.

INDEX OF SCHOOLS

INDEX OF SCHOOLS

Here are indexed schools described or listed in this 25th edition of the Handbook, with page reference to the Critical Text, the Addenda, the Supplementary Lists, and the Illustrated Announcements.

The names of the directors and the post office addresses of those schools on which we have full, authoritative and up to date information make this a complete mailing list.

Names of directors and complete addresses, so far as we know them, of schools in the Supplementary Lists will be found by referring to the page indicated.

Where the school bears the name of a person, as Robert Jones Academy, it will usually be found indexed under the surname, e.g., Jones Academy, Robert.

In this Index, the last section of the book to be printed, will be found also changes in address or name of director received too late for inclusion in the body of the book.

No page reference is given for the schools as they appear in the Schools Classified by Type to Meet Special Needs, pp. 719-797. The various classifications of these Lists will be found in the Table of Contents, pp. 5-12.

WHAT MAKES LIVES

by PORTER SARGENT

224 pages, silk cloth, $1.50

How personalities are shaped or mis-shaped by our constantly changing environment, by persons of the past and of the present, seen and unseen, by misleading propaganda, and teaching, resulting in maladjustment, hate, waste, and war. Divinities that shape our ends may be malevolent.

PARTIAL CONTENTS

OUR FORMAL EDUCATION—HOW TO FIND THE RIGHT SCHOOL?—HOW TO AVOID MISFITS?—WHAT'S NEW IN SCHOOLS?—IN EDUCATIONAL WRITING?—WHAT EFFECT HAS THE WAR HAD?—WHO WILL SURVIVE?

THE CHILD'S INHERITANCE—HOW DOES HEREDITY LIMIT?—CAN CULTURAL ENVIRONMENT CHANGE THE INTELLIGENCE?—WHAT IS THE EVIDENCE?—DO WE CONSCIOUSLY, UNCONSCIOUSLY, MODIFY THE ENVIRONMENT?

WHAT SHAPES LIVES—HOW IS IT MILLIONS AGAIN FACE DEATH BY WAR?—HOW FAR DO EARLY INFLUENCES SHAPE AND MOLD, INSPIRE OR FRUSTRATE?—MAY OUR LIVES BE SHAPED BY PERSONALITIES UNKNOWN TO US?

THE PROBLEM OF MAN—WHAT MAKES ME DO AS I DO?—CAN WE LEARN HOW THE MIND WORKS?—CAN MAGIC, THE OCCULT OR SUPERNATURAL EXPLAIN MY ACTIONS?—WHY OUR INTEREST IN OTHERS' LIVES?

WHAT INFLUENCES OUR BEHAVIOR—WHAT DETERMINES HOW WE ACT FROM DAY TO DAY, FROM YEAR TO YEAR?—WHAT MOVES US?—WHAT DETERS US?—WHAT PRESERVES OUR SELF-RESPECT, THE WILL TO LIVE?

FORCES THAT CHANGE US—WHY DO WE DENY THE EFFECT OF FORCES?—WHAT KINDS OF FORCES ARE THERE?—SOVEREIGNTY?—GOVERNMENT?—WHAT IS MORAL FORCE?—WHO USE IT? HOW?—WHAT EFFECT HAS IT?

SOURCES OF IDEAS, FEELINGS—HOW DO YOU KNOW WHAT'S RIGHT?—WHERE DID YOU GET THAT IDEA?—WHO TOLD YOU SO?—WHAT WAS THEIR INTENT?—HAVE THEY DECEIVED YOU? HOW DO THEY GET AT YOU?

EDUCATIONAL CONTROL—HOW FAR DOES EDUCATION CONTROL US?—IS EDUCATION CONTROLLED?—BY WHOM?—HOW FAR DOES MONEY CONTROL?—HOW FAR TRADITION?—HOW DO UNIVERSITIES AFFECT SCHOOLS?

WHAT IS THE RESULT?—IS THE SCHOOL PRODUCT SOUND, SANE, USEFUL?—DOES OUR SOCIAL SYSTEM FIT THE TIMES?—DOES OUR EDUCATION?—CAN WASTE AND WARFARE BE DIMINISHED? ARE THEY INEVITABLE?

Getting U S Into War

by PORTER SARGENT

640 pages, black vellum cloth, $4.00

This volume of 640 pages, published April 1941, constitutes a Contemporary Record and Survey of changes during the past three years. Based on the 100 Sargent Bulletins sent out weekly to thousands of educators and legislators throughout the country, it is an attempt to throw light on the way international affairs are presented and how "the small decisions of each day" have brought us along the road to war.

Supplementary Notes bring each topic up to date, confirm seemingly rash prognostications and elaborate on the brief, cryptic statements. Introductory Chapters sketch historically the political and cultural backgrounds of the time. The books and speeches of the period are reviewed or quoted and this, with the full Encyclopedic Index, makes this an invaluable reference volume.

Some Quick Responses To GETTING U S INTO WAR

May 4—Lloyd Morain, Los Angeles, Calif.

"The huge quantity of solid information makes it a veritable 'reader's digest' of who said and did what to whom. And hosanna! the trinity of clarity, pointedness, and authenticity stand revealed to all men who would look. Your scientific procedure of presenting facts unweighted with conclusions is very appealing. Reporters and prospective reporters would do well to study your method of presenting data."

May 1—Edward Prostel, Dickinson, N. D.

"Your courage in following your set task is very much admired. The wealth of material and your brilliant analysis of recent events will no doubt have a great influence."

May 1—Dr. C. H. Albaugh, Columbia University, N. Y. C.

"As an historical commentary it should have a prominent place in our national records. Should everyone of influence and authority in this country read this book, I am sure there would be no chance whatever of our getting into the war."

May 1—H. M. Munford, Leverett House, Harvard University

"It will be included in our special collection of books relating to the present world situation."

April 30—Mrs. Donald B. Armstrong, America First Committee

"Your book is a gem and a textbook for our office."

April 29—William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston

"Will read it with great interest and pleasure."

April 25—Otis D. Phillips, High Point, N. C.

"It is a splendid book. It represents an enormous amount of work. It's a sort of scrap book, quoting the thousands of things said and done to carry us along this fateful road. The book will be a valuable museum piece in the years to come."

April 28—Kenneth B. Murdock, Harvard University

"It does seem to me important that there should be in print the facts which your book contains, and that the interpretation you put on them is one that should be available."

April 28—Paul Richter, Chester, Pa.

"Getting U S Into War is a thousand books under one cover."

April 28—Mrs. Ezra Thayer, Boston, Mass.

"Let me express to you my admiration for the colossal opus which represents so much time and research!"

April 27—Franz Boaz, Grantwood, N. J.

"Enclosed check for $4.00."

April 26—Robert E. Owen, Oak Grove School

"An extremely well accomplished task and deserves the utmost praise. Every member of our national government and 'all others in authority' should be compelled to read it."

April 26—John B. Paine, Jr., Boston, Mass.

"Certainly contains a surprising amount of material."

Some Quick Responses To GETTING U S INTO WAR

April 26—Zachariah Chaffee, Jr., Harvard University

"Thank you for sending me the book."

April 26—John Ashmead, Harvard University

"A valuable addition to our library."

April 26—Senator Arthur Capper

"Covers the subject in a most convincing way. Hoping the book will have a large sale, I enclose my check for $4.00."

April 26—Senator Homer T. Bone

"I have gone through your book with a great deal of interest."

April 26—W. R. Castle, Washington, D. C.

"Shall put it where it will be most useful."

April 26—Rockwell Kent, Ausable Forks, N. Y.

"A tremendously important book. I tore into it immediately."

April 25—Major Al Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Along with every other American who reads your book I am deeply in your debt. The mass of material and authenticated opinion you have compiled in this one volume is astounding. It is now, and shall be for years to come, a reference work which will be at my elbow."

April 25—Senator Gerald P. Nye

"It is a monument of splendid information and thought."

April 25—Harry Elmer Barnes, Cooperstown, N. Y.

"Your book is a corker."

April 25—Mrs. Beatrice Abbott, Melrose, Mass.

"It contains a wealth of material. Congratulations on your great contribution to the cause of the U. S."

April 24—Raymond L. Wilbur, President, Stanford University

"Enclosed is my check for $4.00."

April 24—Charles Beard, New Milford, Conn.

"Here is my check for the price as proof of the thanks."

April 24—Oliver L. Reiser, University of Pittsburgh

"The copy arrived safely; and I now am in the thick of it."

April 24—Randolph B. Smith, Bank Street Schools, N. Y.

"We really can't afford your book. Yet glancing at it even for an instant it is obvious that, still more seriously we can't afford not to have it. I am enclosing our check for $4.00."

April 24—John Haynes Holmes, Community Church, N. Y.

"Enormously impressed by what I have seen of its contents."

April 24—Senator Charles W. Tobey

"Glad to read. It is a satisfaction to cooperate with public minded people who are for America first."

April 22—I. S. Mattingly, Stamford, Conn.

"Your book is at hand and it is even more than I expected of it. The notes, which in most books merely serve to confuse the reader, in your volume are fully as entertaining and instructive as the main text."

THE NEW IMMORALITIES

by PORTER SARGENT

192 pages, black cloth binding, gold stamped, $2.00

Releasing the Dead Hand which has kept us from more rational and natural attitudes, the "New Immoralities" are those new modes of thought, lines of action, that violate the old established codes."

In straightforward, vigorous language the author clears away some of the outworn and antiquated moral rubbish and lays the foundation for a new freedom, a greater sanity and a more hopeful future for the race through natural and biologically sound modern ways of thinking and acting.

Boston Transcript—"Brief ethical squibs provide most amusing reading."

The Boston Globe—"A good deal of this window smashing needs to be done to let in light and air."

President H. N. MacCracken, Vassar College—"A great many pity sayings in the volume, well worth remembering."

New Haven Journal Courier—"The sensational little essays are delightful in their moodiness, wit and psychiatry, irreverence and anti-war pleas. The pithy bits that enliven the pages stab the complacent spirit awake."

SPOILS

by PORTER SARGENT

112 pages, black and burgundy cloth, gold stamped, $2.00

Poems From a Crowded Life reflecting many moods and experiences, with a preliminary essay on who writes poetry and why, and how they happened to.

Detroit Free Press—"It is a distinct surprise to find much of beauty, workmanlike skill and more than a touch of humor in his verses."

Alfred Machin, England—"I often have a dip in your works, but find my chief pleasure in your verse, strangely enough, because I have never had much use for poetry. But yours is a new kind, with no straining after rhyme etc."

The Boston Globe—"The poems represent loot from a rich and varied life; show a wide range of poetic expression, lyric, dramatic and facetious. There is understanding of the revolt of youth; the joy and thrill of mountain climbing; broad sympathy for all mankind. His style is virile and robust."

WHICH IS THE BEST SCHOOL

For Your Boy? For Your Girl?

Choosing a school,—the selection of the environment, of the personalities, that will profoundly influence a boy or girl in the formative period,—is one of the most responsible functions parents are called on to perform.

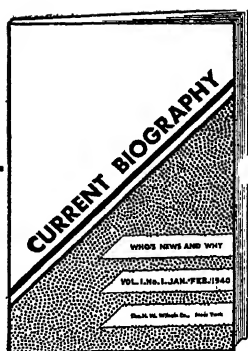

In questions of law, in questions of health, in matters of architecture, one would not think of committing himself to a definite course without expert advice.

The outlook, the psychological attitude, the intellectual slant, the associations and the character of a son or daughter are of more importance than the plan of a house or a clause in a will.

But until recently parents have been obliged to decide with such advice as they could casually get from their friends or neighbors, and with incomplete information as to the advantages and opportunities the school field afforded.

Write Mr. Sargent fully about your child's temperament, tastes and tendencies, and tell him what you want a school to do. He can tell you where to find the right school.

State clearly the past schooling, difficulties and desires, the size of school and region preferred and the expense limit.

Every teacher of English, History or related subjects should have, or insist that the school library have, CURRENT BIOGRAPHY. It keeps all biographical dictionaries and similar works up-to-date. Entertaining, authentic biographies of people who come into prominence in the news of the day. Published monthly. Each issue contains a cumulated index to previous issues. Monthly issues are replaced by a bound annual volume which includes the entire year's material with additions and corrections in one alphabetical arrangement.
